McCracken and Cooper led the victors with two goals each, while Bodingham and Batten accounted for one each. E. Hickey led the losers with two goals, while M. Hickey, French and Crough tallied one each.

The result of this game puts Ennismore and Warsaw tied for second place. Donwoods defeated Douro 6-4 in a game played Monday night in Warsaw to give them six points and undisputed first place.

Burns Bridge takes on Donwoods tonight instead of Friday as scheduled.

Friday night the Warsaw Flyers of the EPL play an exhibition game in which they play host to St. Michael's Juveniles.

WARM WEATHER WIN—Souvenir of Brandon, owned by J. A. Desfosses, is seen making one of the jumps which led to victory in the Miami Horse Show over the weekend. Ridden by Henri Fafard, also of Montreal, the horse posted points in the open jumping, knock down out and and jumping stake. It is believed the first time a horse from Canada has ever won the Florida honors.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

In the Port Hope paper we noticed a story by E. Flemming of Winnipeg. A few extracts: "I will give an account of the last football excursion of the old Bewdley team in 1897 to Peterborough. Electrics of that city invited us to play an exhibition and we accepted and ordered Calcutt's little North Star and scow for the trip. The little boat was a double-decker but only chartered for 175 passengers but when the scow didn't come, Calcutt took on all that would dare go until he had away over 200 aboard when he pulled out, and I think that everybody was scared something would happen and wished they had stayed home. The shore line of the old Otonabee didn't give us much relief from the gale, and it was a trying trip.

* * * * * *

"With our decks on a slant we finally reached Peterborough. We had a lunch and mingled with the crowds at the exhibition grounds where the game was to be played. The wind abated a little and we lined up and started. We knew their tactics and sure enough they bore down on us with great determination, and our tactics were to hold them if possible till they got winded . . . After a hard game we tied them 1-1. Our crowd were let into the grounds free and there must have been a lot of others, also, for we were handed the large sum of $2,75, one third of the gate receipts. Some of us nearly fainted for we weren't expecting anything. Then we loaded up and started home, a crowd welcoming us in relief at sundown."

Habs, Leafs or Wings?

As the NHL race wears along toward playoff time, ours is a house divided. The writer has rooted for Detroit Red Wings ever since they played "home" games in Windsor under the name of Cougars, and we missed few of their tilts later at Olympia. The wife cheers loudly for the colorful Canadiens of Montreal, with the Rocket on a special pedestal. Our boy is strictly a Leafian fan, and thinks Toronto can do no wrong. Of such differences are puck fans made. There are many folks in the city and district who pull for Boston Bruins since the days when Dit Clapper starred for them. Probably some around here prefer the Rangers or Hawks And so it goes.

Two disgruntled teams — though they're leading their OHA senior "B" group race — tangle here tomorrow eve. Oshawa Truckers are burned up at losing to the trailing Memosin Bella Villa the other night when they had a chance to take over top spot alone. And the Petes could have done likewise instead of being thumped by Pontiacs up Orillia way. Anyway, both Truckmen and the TPT-ers will go all out Friday at Civic to settle first place in the warmish group scramble, while Orillia climbs a bit closer to the top rung, and Kingston keeps within shouting distance. Oshawa-Petes' tilts this semester have produced some excellent, even hockey. Now that the schedule string is running out, all clubs are shooting the w.k. works.

He Slid O'er Montana

Pro mat refs must at times find it hard to keep track of shoulders on the mat — especially in a tag team bout when four gees often are mixing it at once — but Bunny Dunlop decided he'd spotted the right pair last eve. Said afterward that Hombre Montana had hoisted one shoulder clear of the mat and then slid Ernie Dusek over so Ernie's two shoulders were pinned, and that's why he gave it the one-two-three routine. It was the deciding fall of the main bout here, and let Montana and Whip Watson retain their tag team title over the mean Dusek brothers, Ernie and Emil. Fred Atkins got peeved in the semi-final and threw Ilio DiPaolo out of the ring and then tossed Ref Dunlop out, also, so the latter awarded the bout to Ilio. Jack Bence and Ray Cernandos drew in the prelim.

Would Operate As Separate Association

TORONTO (CP) — The Quebec Trotting Raceways asked the Canadian Trotting Association Wednesday night for permission to operate as a separate association with the power to govern harness racing in Quebec.

Emile Dion, spokesman for the Quebec operators, told the Canadian governing body at its annual meeting, however, that the Quebec Trotting Raceway wishes to retain its affiliation with the CTA.

He said that Quebec has never had any satisfaction from rulings handed down by the central committee of the CTA. He gave one case when a horse, who was suspended in Quebec, was re-instated by the CTA without the knowledge of anyone in Quebec.

RECEIVES 1 PER CENT

The CTA now receives one per cent of purses distributed at all harness meetings in Canada. The Quebec group proposed to take one half of this sum, leaving the CTA one half of one per cent.

It said that with this money it would support a branch office of the association in Quebec City for the purpose of governing the sport in the province of Quebec.

To support his argument, Mr. Dion said that last year the province of Quebec contributed $15,000 to the CTA. He said the rest of Canada gave $10,000.

A motion was passed to hold a meeting before March 10 to decide the matter.

Senior Boxing Meet Planned At U Of T

TORONTO (CP) — The annual intercollegiate senior boxing meet will be held at the University of Toronto Friday and Saturday.

Toronto, Queen's University of Kingston, Ontario Agricultural College of Guelph and McGill University of Montreal have entered the meet.

Toronto and Queen's are the only two universities who have entered full teams in the nine-class card. OAC will have six representatives and McGill five. Toronto boxers are the defending champions.

High Park Quartet Capture Walker Curling Trophy As F. Hollowell Close Behind

It was close to midnight, Wednesday, when the last round of the annual Hiram Walker bonspiel was played and, when all the scores had been recorded, the honor of winning the beautiful Walker Trophy went to R. H. Lilly's High Park, Toronto rink. The second three-game winner was F. Hollowell's local rink and one point behind him was another local rink—A. It was the first time that both of these Toronto rinks had played here and they were greatly impressed. There were rinks entered from Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon, Lindsay, Smith Falls, Cobourg, Oshawa, Hastings, Toronto and Peterborough.

A FINE 'SPIEL

It was just another one of the high class bonspiels that have been sponsored by this club.

The games were very close and interesting, and were well above the average.

In presenting the trophy to Mr. Tilley's rink, Don Coughlin on behalf of the Hiram Walker Co., thanked the club and curlers for their fine response and hoped that they had all enjoyed the day's sport.

Boston Manages To Upset Toronto Leafs 3-2

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York's unpredictable Rangers hung one on the tough Detroit Red Wings, but it didn't help. They're still in fifth place in the National Hockey League, two points behind Boston Bruins. The Bruins managed to keep a jump ahead of the New Yorkers, as they have all season, by upsetting the oddsmakers with a 3-2 win over Toronto Maple Leafs on Leafs' home ice. They were the only league games Wednesday night and fans around the big-league circuit were given little to work on to select a team for the fourth and last playoff berth in the Stanley Cup race.

Nobody gave the Rangers much chance against the league-leading Red Wings before Wednesday night's game. However, New York showed plenty of class by defeating the Detroiters 3-2 for their first loss in eight games.

The Rangers built a 2-0 lead in the first period, checked the Red Wings hard in the second and then held off Detroit attacks in the third.

SCORE FOR RANGERS

Defenceman Harry Howell, Paul Ronty and Bob Chrystal scored for the Rangers.

Rightwinger Gordie Howe, the league's leading scorer, tallied both Detroit goals. His first came as he took a pass from Dutch Reibel in front of the New York goalmouth in the second period and drilled it past netminder Johnny Bower. He tallied the second in the last period with a sizzling shot from 10 feet out.

The Bruins capitalized on penalties for two first-period goals and went on to edge the Leafs before 12,459 fans.

Milt Schmidt, Dave Creighton and Cal Gardner were the Boston marksmen. The Leaf goals were by Rudy Migay and Ted Kennedy.

The Leafs didn't get into the game until the last period and then it was too late. The loss left them in third place, one point behind Montreal Canadiens.

Tonight the Leafs travel to Boston and the Canadiens meet the last-place Hawks in Chicago.

Windsor Girl, 16 Named Athlete Of 1953

HAMILTON (CP) — Ernestine Russell, 16-year-old gymnast from Windsor, Ont., has been named Canada's outstanding woman athlete of 1953 by the Women's Amateur Athletic Federation of Canada.

The award of the Rose Bowl Trophy was announced Wednesday by Margaret Lord, secretary of the WAAF.

The youngster captured top honors on the parallel bars, side horse, balance beam, trampoline and in tumbling in her first year of competitive action three years ago and since then has competed in many international events against the best in the United States.

She won 25 events, finished second once and was third on six occasions.

The Rose Bowl first was started in 1934 and was won that year by Phyllis Dewar, Vancouver swimmer. Barbara Ann Scott, Olympic figure-skating champion, has won it three times—1945, 1947 and 1948.

WALKING ON AIR

Miss Russell, 16, a student at Kennedy collegiate said: "I'm walking on air."

Working with the Windsor Gymnastics Club under coach Bernie Newman, Ernie has made a name in competition in United States and Canada. In a recent meet at Cleveland, she pinned down first in side horse, parallel bars, free calesthenics, balance beam and an all-round award.

Buffalo Sports Writer Billy Kelly Retires

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — Billy Kelly, a sports writer who won reflected glory when a Canadian-owned race horse bearing his name finished second in the Kentucky Derby, retired Wednesday.

Kelly, whose sports column, "Before and After," has appeared in the Buffalo Courier-Express for the last 50 years, retired as the newspaper's sports editor several years ago but has continued to write his column.

He often said his greatest thrill was the finish of the 1919 Kentucky Derby when the entry of Sir Barton and Billy Kelly, owned by J. K. L. Ross of Montreal, finished one-two. Kelly was reported to have bet $1,000 on the entry to win and $1,500 to place.

The race horse had been named after Kelly by a previous owner.

Black Holds Vejar To Draw

CHICAGO (AP)—Newcomer Jed Black dropped 2-1 favorite Chico Vejar for a nine-count in the seventh round and held the soldier to a 10-round draw Wednesday night in a blistering scrap at Chicago stadium.

The thrilling toe-to-toe brawl wound up with referee Joey White voting for Vejar 97-90, judge Frank Clark picking Black 93-92 and judge Howard Walsh calling it even 91-91.

Vejar weighed 149 and Black 144.

Black, who had won 27 of 28 starts but was making his first main bout appearance, buckled Vejar's knees in the first round and floored him with savage left-right upper cut combinations in the seventh.

Vejar staggered to his feet and weathered the 20 seconds to the end of the round.

Tigers Trample Galt Hawks In 9-5 Upset

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Cubs and Barrie Flyers made the statistics look sick Wednesday night.

According to the figures the Cubs are the worst offensive team in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series. The same figures show that the Flyers are the worst defensive team in the league.

The Cubs looked like anything but a weak-scoring unit as they walloped Galt Black Hawks 9-5 in Hamilton. And in Barrie you couldn't convince Montreal Royals of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association Junior league that the Flyers have no defence. Barrie whipped the Royals 9-1 in the interlocking game.

The two victories left the Flyers and the Cubs tied for fifth place in the OHA standings.

TAKE EARLY LEAD

The Flyers had a 4-0 margin at the end of the first period and a 7-1 lead after the second.

Tommy Wilson, Jim Robertson and Bob Barlow each scored two goals for Barrie. Singles went to Danny Poliziani, Bob McNeil and Ross Graham.

Doug Hardy, obtained from Toronto Marlboros when it was learned that Jack Spencer will be out for the rest of the season, played his first game in goal for Barrie. He was beaten only once when Eddie Eustace scored Montreal's goal while the Royals were playing one man short in the second.

Brian Kilrea notched three goals to lead Hamilton to its fourth straight win. Marlin McAlendin added two and singles were scored by Bill Stewart, Lloyd McKey, Cummy Burton and Ted Reid.

Neil McDonald, Rick Collin, Ed Switzer, John Sleaver and Pete Kowalchuk were the Galt marksmen.

Kitchener Greenshirts play the Canadiens in Montreal in an interlocking game tonight.

Lyndhursts Win Against Italy

BOLZANO, Italy (CP)—The unheralded Bolzano hockey team threw a scare into Toronto Lyndhursts Wednesday night before Canada's representatives in the world hockey championships were able to stave off their late rally for a 9-8 victory.

After disposing of Italy's perennial champions, the Milan Internazionale club, 9-4, at Milan Tuesday, the Lyndhursts expected an easy night against Bolzano and appeared to be headed for an easy victory in the first period when they opened up a 6-3 lead.

PROVE STUBBORN

But the stubborn Italians pecked away steadily at the visitors' margin and it took John Petro's fourth goal of the night to sew up the Canadian's victory in the third period.

Petro's big night made him the leading sniper of the Lyndhursts' European tour with 10 goals. Another left-winger, Earl Clements, moved into second place by scoring his ninth tally. Don Couch, Harold Fiskari, Bob Kennedy and Normie Gray completed the visitor's scoring quota.

The victory was the Lyndhursts' sixth straight after a disastrous 11-2 defeat at Paris in their first European appearance. Their next engagement is at Fussen, Germany, Friday.

Bisons Down Providence 3-1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Buffalo Bisons are continuing on their merry way to the American Hockey League championship.

Wednesday, the Bisons increased their lead to six full games over the second-place Cleveland Barons by trouncing the last-place Providence Reds 3-1. Cleveland dropped a close one to Pittsburgh Hornets 4-3. In the other game, Hershey Bears beat Syracuse Warriors 8-2.

At Buffalo, Steve Wochy, Gaye Stewart and Joe Lund tallied for the Bisons. Ed Kryzanowski scored for Providence.

A goal by Andy Barbe in the third period gave Pittsburgh their 4-3 edge over Cleveland. Frank Mathers, Willie Marshall and Ray Timgren got the other Hornet markers, while Jack Stoddard, Ray Ceresino and Chuck Blair scored for Barons.

Lorne Ferguson tallied twice for Hershey to pace his team to its lop-sided victory over Syracuse. Don Perry and Vern Pachal scored for the Warriors.

Brampton Scores Two Wins At Playoffs

ORILLIA (CP) — Rinks from Orillia, Toronto and Brampton led with scores of two wins and no defeats after the opening day's play in the southern Ontario curling playoffs here.

In the second round Wednesday night, Bruce McClure skipped his Brampton rink to its second victory with a 10-6 win over a Galt rink skipped by Norm Himes.

Alfie Phillips led his Toronto rink to a second win with a 16-10 victory over a London rink skipped by R. E. Wilson.

The third leading rink, skipped by Stan Sarjeant of the host Orillia club, scored a 11-9 win over J. G. W. Sands of Kingston.

In the fourth match of the second round, Ross Tarlton, Hamilton, skipped his rink to a 20-3 win over an Oshawa rink skipped by C. W. Minett.

THREE WINLESS

The Wilson and Tarlton rinks have scored one win and one defeat each. Rinks skipped by Minett, Himes and Sands have suffered two defeats and no wins.

In the first round, rinks skipped by McClure, Phillips, Wilson and Sarjeant scored victories.

McClure took care of the strong Kingston rink 18-9 in one of the surprises of the round. Phillips had little trouble with Brampton, winning 13-9 while Wilson scored an 11-3 victory over Galt.

Closest game of the day was the Sarjeant-Tarlton affair which saw the Orillias skip make a great double-takeout shot on the 10th end to score four and win a 12-10 victory over the Hamilton rink.

Dutchmen Roar Back To Defeat Indians 5-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series is heading for one of its most dramatic finishes in years.

With less than two weeks left to go in the regular schedule Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen and Owen Sound Mercurys are deadlocked for first place.

The Mercurys have 10 games left, the Dutchmen seven. They both must meet two more times before the end of the schedule. The season closed with the Mercurys at Kitchener Feb. 24.

Although Owen Sound, 1951 Allan Cup Champions, appear to have a slight edge, the Dutchmen, last year's Canadian champions, aren't giving up.

They climbed back into a tie for the league-leadership Wednesday by defeating Stratford Indians 5-3 in Stratford.

COME FROM BEHIND

Allowing the Indians a 3-0 lead during the first half of the game, the Dutchmen roared back with five consecutive goals for the victory. They took advantage of three Stratford penalties to score three goals.

Ken Laufman, Doug Verity, Joe Schertzl, Harry Psutka and Jack McKenzie each had a hand in the scoring for the winners.

Lloyd Finkbeiner, Lou Bendo and Dinny Flanagan were the Stratford marksmen.

WOLVES PULL UP

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior Southern group Sudbury Wolves pulled to within four points of the league-leading Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds by defeating the Greyhounds 2-1 in Sault Ste. Marie.

The Lumber Kings, backed by the fine performance of netminder Gord Buckley, defeated Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians 2-1 in Pembroke.

Red Barrett and Tommy Dawes scored for Sudbury after Roy Hexmer had given the Greyhounds a 1-0 lead.

The Indians also took a 1-0 jump in Pembroke when Bill McCracken scored but Rheal Savard evened the score and Jack Douglas fired the winner for the Lumber Kings.

Windsor Bulldogs are at Owen Sound tonight. In the NOHA Pembroke is at Sudbury.

Tri-Bells Score Win

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP)—Toronto Nortown Tri-Bells scored a 67-54 victory over Niagara Falls Jolleys in the opening game of the Ontario Amateur Basketball Association senior playoffs Wednesday night.

In a preliminary game, St. Catharines YMCA defeated Stamford Grads 70-55 in the first game of the OABA Intermediate B best-of-three playoff.

Athletes Told Empire Games "Important"

VANCOUVER (CP) — English athletes considering by-passing the British Empire Games should remember that the games "are more than just another athletic event," a top games official said here Wednesday.

Stan Smith, chairman of the games committee, said he regretted that England's crack distance runner Gordon Pirie had decided to miss the big Empire athletic event here July 30-Aug. 7 in preference for European games slated for Berne, Switzerland, in late August.

"I am satisfied that England will send an exceptionally strong team this summer," said Smith, adding that the Empire Games "are more than just another athletic event, they are a gathering of the Commonwealth and as such deserve the full support of all Commonwealth countries and athletes."

Pirie announced he would prefer the Berne meet and the London Daily Mail said the majority of England's athletes favor he European games.

The Daily Mail termed the proximity of the Empire and European games dates "stupid planning."

Young's Point Wins Against Keene, 7-6

YOUNG'S POINT (ENS) — Tuesday night's tussle saw the windup of the regular EPHL schedule, with Young's Point topping Keene 7-6 in the Lakefield arena. It was a clean hard-fought battle with both teams exhibiting some fine hockey. Penalties were few, but costly, especially for Keene as they were scored on three times while being a man short.

The initial frame was close all the way with Keene scoring on a goal by Colby from D. Whalen. While Lang was off K. Fawcett tied the score, on a passing play from C. Freeburn and G Henry.

Keene went out in front early in the second on Colby's second goal, but Young's Point soon tied it as K. Fawcett netted his second marker of the evening on a pass from C. Freeburn. The see-saw battle continued as Thompson (Bethune) again put Keen one goal up. Thompson was penalized for holding and this proved to be the turning point in the game. J. Fawcett set up two scoring plays which were completed by D. Heard and D. McIsaac, in less than a minute, to give Young's Point the lead for the first time in the game. Heard (McIsaac, G. Shearer) made it 5-3 for the homesters near the end of the second.

The visitors made a valiant effort to regain the lead in the final frame as Davidson's long shot tricked in. Henry (K. Fawcett, C. Freeburn) retaliated about a minute later, and Young's Point added another as R. Northey banged in C. Russelle's pass. At 16:39 D. Whalen netted eKene's fifth goal on a pass from Colby. A last-minute rally saw Davidson (Bethune, Whalen) put Keene within one goal of tying the score, and goalie Mackness was taken off in favor of an extra forward.

Young's Point—Goal, Spencely; defence, G. Shearer, R. Freeburn; centre, D. Heard; wings, McIsaac, J. Fawcett; alternates, G. Henry, K. Fawcett, C. Freeburn, C. Russelle, R. Northey, J. Barcroft, B. Evans, S. McNaughton, J. Blewett.

Keene — Goal, Mackness; defence, Kimble, Houle; centre, D. Whalen; wings, Thompson, Colby, alternates, Davidson, Bethune, Nelson, Lang, McFarlane, Elmhirst, McCarthy, Whalen, Shearer, Colby.

Refrees — B. Romhanyi, D. McCracken.

Here And There In Sports

SPURN COMMERCIAL OFFER

LONDON (AP)—British professional golfers have spurned an American suggestion that Ryder Cup matches be commercially sponsored for the next eight years.

"We are not in favor of a commercial sponsor for international matches," an official of the British Professional Golfers' Association said Wednesday. "The match is so great that it should pay for itself and gain a handsome profit."

Horton Smith, president of the United States PGA, wrote the British association that he could obtain a sponsor for the 1955 competition in the U.S. if it were played in June, July or August.

There are no financial difficulties about sending a British team in 1955. The British association already has $14,000. Total cost for the trip is estimated at $15,400.

Ryder Cup matches are played every two years in alternate countries.

KISSELL CASE ADJOURNED

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa Rough Rider tackle John Kissell's legal tangle with Cleveland Browns over his alleged contract jump to play with the Big Four football club here last season may be settled out of court.

The 240-pound lineman was scheduled to appear Wednesday for an Ontario Supreme Court hearing, but the hearing was adjourned to Feb. 24 when Sam Berger, counsel for Kissell and the Rough Riders, said the parties are discussing the possibility of an out-of-court settlement.

The extended legal battle began last fall when the Browns, of the National League, sought but were denied a temporary injunction halting Kissell's playing with Ottawa. Succeeding legal manoeuvres kept the case in the air and Kissell finished the season with the Canadian club.

NEW YORK (AP) — The Ivy group of colleges became a formal league Wednesday with the announcement of the presidents of the eight colleges involved that a round-robin football schedule had been approved.

CANADIAN SKIER HURT

FALUN, Sweden (CP) — Ted Hunt of Vancouver, member of the Canadian ski team here to compete in next week's world championships, was injured Wednesday on a practice jump.

Hunt was carried from the bottom of the hill on a stretcher after he misjudged his take-off and took a bad spill. His ear was cut and he was badly bruised.

Arrangements were made to have him x-rayed although it did not appear that he had broken any bones.

NO POSTPONEMENT

SASKATOON (CP)—The Canadian speed skating championships will be held here as scheduled scheduled Saturday and Sunday.

Warm weather threatened to force postponement of the event but zero weather returned to much of the Prairies Wednesday. If the cold snap holds to the end of the week, the huge oval at Optimistic Park should be in top shape for the skaters.

FA DEFEATS IRELAND

MANCHESTER, Eng. (Reuters) The English Football League overwhelmed the League of Ireland 9-1 here Wednesday.

The Englishmen adapted themselves better to the waterlogged field after being held to 2-1 at half-time. In the last hectic five minutes they added four goals.

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos said Wednesday they had torn up Charlie Shira's contract as assistant football coach so that he could take a post at Mississippi State with coach Darrell Royal, also released recently by Edmonton.

Remember When—

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Louis Rubenstein, way back before the days of modern figure skaters, won the world's figure skating championship for Canada 64 years ago today. The meet was held in St. Petersburg, now Leningrad, Russia.

Landy Winner Fails To Set World Record

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Running on a rain-dampened track, John Landy, Australia's premier miler, failed again today to set a world record for the mile as he won the Australian championship in 4:05.6, compared to Gunder Haegg's world mark of 4:01.4.

An announcement immediately after the race said it was officially estimated that a southerly wind flowing at the time of the race impeded Landy to the extent of seven seconds.

In other words, Australian athletic officials reckoned that without the wind Landy would have run the mile in less than four minutes.

UNEXPECTED VISIT

The Duke of Edinburgh, in Sydney today during the royal tour, made an unscheduled visit to the Sydney Cricket Ground to see Landy run. Queen Elizabeth was at Government House at the time of the race.

Landy took the lead after the first lap and won easily by about 30 yards over fellow Australians Jim Bailey and A. Anderson, second and third in that order.

Landy's best time for the mile was set last Dec. 12, when he made it in 4:02.

Police Play At Keene

Undefeated in 10 hockey starts so far this season, the Peterborough Provincial Police puckists are going to Keene on Friday night with the intention of revenging themselves on a beating they sustained there last year against the Keene entry in the East Peterborough Hockey League.

Coach Lamb has lined up a smart OPP outfit from here and the district, and they have enjoyed considerable success in exhibition matches staged in widely-scattered centres, a week ago handing a strong Bancroft club its first reverse of the season in play in the northern centre. The Police plan to enter provincial police hockey playdowns in Ontario in the near future.

His total elapsed time in the two-day derby was 6:02.30.

Valdmanis Resigns Suddenly In Nfld.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Latvian-born Dr. Alfred A. Valdmanis has resigned suddenly as the chief of Newfoundland's development program and says he is taking a new unspecified job elsewhere in Canada.

Dr. Valdmanis had been frequently criticized in the Newfoundland legislature by opposition Progressive Conservatives for importing Germans to staff the estimated 12 industries created under his leadership. His close working partnership with Premier Joseph Smallwood often led the opposition to refer wryly to the "Smallwood-Valdmanis government."

Famed Hostess

VICTORIA (CP)—Mrs. B. Pearse one of the great hostesses in Victoria's early days, died at age 100 in her historic home "Fernwood," where she went as a bride 78 years ago. The stone mansion with acres of gardens was built in 1860 by her husband, who died some years ago.

G. Hamilton High

In Mercantile League bowling at Duffus' this week, Gladys Hamilton made loop history with a 763 triple, high for the circuit this season. She also hit a nifty 320 single in a good night's trundling for lasses of the league. A & P No. 2 whitewashed Empress, while other 4-0 triumphs were taken by A & P No. 1 over Prudential, Nichols against Crowe's, Neill's over Austin's, and Baker's against East City.

Don Penrose hit high single for men with 305 and Harold Page smashed out a nice threesome of 720. Glen Baker's Meats topped teams with best pinnage, the mark for the evening being 3,072.

Many Attend Funeral Of M. McDowell

MILLBROOK (ENS)—A congregation which filled St. Andrew's United church to capacity, with many standing, gathered on Tuesday afternoon to pay final tribute to Melburn McDowell, who died Sunday in a Peterborough hospital.

Places of business were closed to allow their owners to attend the service. The funeral was conducted by the Rev. A. M. Butler of St. Andrew's and the Rev. A. L. Sisco of Warkworth, a former pastor.

Members of the Session, to which Mr. McDowell belonged, were honorary pallbearers.

Before the service began pairs of elders in turn stood guard at either end of the casket. They were: A. R. Payne and Wilfred Elson, J. T. Crowley and H. C. Argue, and Fred Fallis and Leonard Smith.

The choir, of which Mr. McDowell had been a valued member for many years, was in attendance.

Pallbearers were Wilfred Elson, Robert Larmer, Homer Ouellette and A. R. Payne of Millbrook, and Lloyd Sutton and Leonard McNeil of Cavan.

There were many beautiful floral tributes. Burial was in Gardiner's cemetery.

Famous Scottish Beacon Renowned In New World

WASHINGTON — A storied Scottish lighthouse lamp that emigrated to Newfoundland has achieved New World as well as Old World renown.

This beacon is the Inchcape Light, says the National Geographic Society. Once it flashed its warning from the tower of the Inchcape or Bell Rock Lighthouse 12 miles off Scotland's east coast. Standing amid the shipping lanes off the Firths of Tay and Forth, it marked a hazard immortalized in Robert Southey's ballad, "The Inchcape Rock".

In 1842 the beacon was replaced, and the old light sent to Newfoundland. There on Cape Bonavista it guards the fishing and sealing fleets that skirt the coasts of England's oldest colony, now Canada's newest province.

CABOT'S LANDFALL

The beacon's New World home is almost as famous as its Scottish one. Cape Bonavista, a rocky finger thrust into the Atlantic north of St. John's between Trinity and Bonavista Bays, is thought by some to have been the first North American land sighted by John Cabot in 1497.

The Inchcape Light's gleaming reflectors were made in Birmingham, England, in 1816. They replaced an earlier light on the Inchcape Rock, where the first lighthouse was begun in 1807 and lighted in 1811.

The rock is a mass of red sandstone, covered by water at high tide and surrounded by shoals. Many ships have been wrecked there.

The tradition underlying Southey's poem tells that a warning bell was cut down by a spiteful pirate to "plague the Abbot of Aberbrothock," who had placed it there. The pirate, Sir Ralph the Rover, received just punishment for his wickedness when his own loot-laden vessel foundered on the rock and

" . . . even in his dying fear
One dreadful sound could the Rover hear—
A sound as if, with the Inchcape Bell,
The Devil below was ringing his knell."

The rock's fame in engineering annals rivals that in balladry. Its lighthouse, built by Robert Stevenson, grandfather of novelist Robert Louis Stevenson, ranks among the most noted of early waveswept masonry towers. With work on the foundations possible only at low tides, and with each of its stones carefully dovetailed to interlock with adjoining masonry, the 117-foot lighthouse was a major feat of engineering.

The Inchcape Light's present home is a less striking structure: a square, red and white building. Yet every summer hundreds of motorists travel the new Cabot highway to Cape Bonavista to see the transplanted beacon that faithfully flashes red-white-white every 90 seconds over the Atlantic toward Scotland.

Marble Head Suggests Cleopatra No Great Beauty

WASHINGTON — A marble head in a North Africa museum has given rise anew to one of history's tantalizing questions: What did Cleopatra really look like?

An archeologist of the Louvre art gallery in Paris says the ancient work, now in Cherchell, Algeria — the Caesarea of old Mauretania — represents the face that fascinated Julius Caesar and Mark Antony and has inspired writers and scholars ever since.

Cleopatra (69-30, B.C.) had a long, aquiline nose. That is well established by still-existing coins. Inquisitive archeologists, in their search for Cleopatra statues, always look for this predominant characteristic rather than the fairness of her features, says the National Geographic Society.

It has long been suspected that Egypt's ambitious queen was no outstanding beauty, and the Caesarian sculpture seems to bear this out. As Plutarch put it, the proportions of Cleopatra's face were not incomparable — she was probably less comely than Octavia, Antony's wife.

HAD SPARKLING PERSONALITY

No one doubts the sparkle of the young sovereign's personality or her intellectual prowess, however. One of the most talked about women of all time, she was herself a persistent talker — persuasive, adept at flattery, at times eloquent, and multi-lingual.

For such an articulate woman the Caesarean likeness gives her a remarkably small mouth. But it is firmly set. And the eyes are large, the hair wavy— as on the coins — and the ears are pierced for ornaments.

Another circumstance supports the theory of the Paris archeologist, M. Jean Charbonneaux. Caesarea was the home of the erudite Juba 11, Cleopatra's son-in-law, and therefore a likely place to find a statue of Cleopatra, a devoted mother.

The Louvre expert has expressed his belief in a paper presented before the Academie des Inscriptions et Belles Lettres, a venerable French learned society that weighs problems of art.

CARRIED QUEST ELSEWHERE

Historians have sought clues to Cleopatra's countenance in a number of statues. One was in the British Museum. Another was in the Vatican where a German scholar was convinced he saw Cleopatra in a head adorned with a royal bandeau. But it had a sullen, lackluster, appearance, and historians turned elsewhere in their quest for the true Cleopatra.

Museum officials in this country look with intrest on the Caesarean statute. One authority at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City says it could be Cleopatra but added that the world may have to wait until more works are identified before archeologists can be sure of Cleopatra's face.

Depicting the appearance of the characters of antiquity is exacting business. The first definte likeness of royalty handed down to modern times is probably that of Alexander the Great (356-323 B.C.). Many images, either in the round or on coins, were conventionalized, including some of Cleopatra, and thus, according to some U. S. experts, "she's not unmistakable."

Concert Patrons To Hear Great Quintet

Tuesday evening, as the third Community concert of the present season, the Peterborough audience will hear a notable string quartet and a remarkable pianist play Schumann's great piano quintet (Opus 44). It is believed that this is the first time the Schumann quintet has been publicly performed in Peterborough.

The performers are the Spivak Quartet and Boris Roubakine, both of Toronto. The gorgeous Schumann work will form the final part of their program, which is to include Mozart, Brahms, Chopin and some moderns.

The Spivak Quartet was formed by violinist Elie Spivak, concermaster of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra for 16 years, who, before coming to Canada in 1926 had organized another Spivak Quartet in London. The three other members of the Quartet are also prominent members of the T.S.O.: Francesco Fusco, violin; Jack Neilson, viola, and Philip Spivak, 'cello.

The Spivak Quartet, which has given many concerts over the CBC and in Ontario cities, is now making continental appearances.

PIANIST

Boris Roubakine, who joins the Quartet for Tuesday's concert, is a gifted and accomplished pianist. A former pupil of Dukas, he studied in Paris, and became known in Switzerland both as teacher and performer. He has been permanently resident in Toronto since 1946.

Launch Investigation Into Ball Black Market

MELBOURNE (Reuters) — The city council today launched an investigation into a black market in invitations to a royal ball which allegedly have been changing hands at up to £50 each.

City clerk Harold S. Wootton appealed to anyone offered black market invitations to come forward. He promised that they will be recommended for an official invitation to the forthcoming ball, to be held when the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh visit Melbourne, if they help track down black marketers.

The Melbourne Sun said today that up to £100 had been paid for double tickets issued to members of the exclusive Victoria Racing Club for a meeting Feb. 27 which will be attended by the Queen.

Reading Gives Broad Education Institute Told

BETHANY (ENS)—Mrs. Ralph Malcolm of Yelverton was guest speaker at the Women's Institute meeting at the home of Mrs. Walter Rowland.

Mrs. Malcolm, a former school teacher, is editing her own newspaper column under the heading "Reading With Ruth." Two years ago she took provincial honors in a Junior Farmer's public speaking contest in Toronto.

"All education is not received in schools," she said. Any person who devotes time to good reading can become well-educated. Books give you knowledge, the key to success and advancement. They give you poise and richness of mind. They are an insurance against loneliness, disappointment and frustration.

"A common excuse is, 'I have not time to read.' But 15 minutes each day devoted to reading can add up to as many as 20 books in a year. Another excuse offered is that books are too expensive to buy. But for a nominal sum membership in a public library avails all kinds of reading material. There are travelling libraries for isolated districts, sponsored by various clubs.

"A well-read person is a good citizen for she can share her knowledge with the community in which she lives."

PROGRAM

The program was in charge of Mrs. R. Carr with the topic "Citizenship and Education." Mrs. W. Rowland gave a humorous reading. Mrs. H. Rayson sang a solo, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. E. Lamb.

Mrs. C. Rowan gave a synopsis of an address by the Hon. W. J. Dunlop, Minister of Education, in which he stressed more fundamental instruction in reading, writing, spelling and arithmetic and not so much emphasis on music, arts and sports. A lively discussion followed, in which many members expressed opinions. Some thought pupils today are not as well-educated as those of 40 years ago; others sided with the new curriculum.

INVESTIGATE DEATH — The death of Mrs. Jacqueline Kelso, 22, of Sturgeon Falls, who died New Year's Eve, is being investigated by Ontario Provincial Police. Pathological examination of the woman's organs is being made. Her husband, Ralph Kelso, 22-year-old service station employee, has been questioned by OPP in connection with his wife's death.—(CP Photo).

Mrs. T. Jennings presided and all members joined in singing the Institute Ode, repeating the Mary Stewart collect and Lord's prayer. Mrs. T. J. Jackson read greetings from the provincial president, thanks for a donation to Korean children and from the Ninette Sanitorium for a bundle of used greeting cards.

Mrs. William Mark reported for the committee appointed to see about new dishes for the community kitchen and it was decided to purchase those recommended. Members were asked to contribute talent money to help finance this latest project. Mrs. H. Rayson reported $8 sent to the penny drive for assisance in mental health. The roll call was answered by the 28 present.

A contest was conducted by Mrs. Jackson and won by Mrs. R. Malcolm. Lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. William Cavano, Miss L. Thompson and Mrs. T. Jackson.

Flying Saucers Studied In Australia

By RAY KERRISON

MELBOURNE (Reuters) — Australia is giving serious consideration to reports of "flying saucers" and "strange objects" and officials are studying reports with an eye toward separating fact from fancy.

"We do not regard this business as a joke," a spokesman for the civil aviation department told me. "People are definitely seeing objects which have not been explained."

Capt. Douglas Barker, an airline pilot, reported seeing on New Year's Day a "semi-transparent object, shaped like a mushroom with a stalk, oscillating rapidly in and out of the thick cloud and travelling faster than any jet."

The civil aviation department's regional director, A. R. McComb, said: "Capt. Barker is a very experienced pilot and unlikely to imagine things. His report will be fully investigated."

When Barker, who has been flying for 17 years, discussed it with senior fellow-pilots, they reported that they had seen "not mushrooms but flying saucers and things." They added that they had been "too scared to mention them for fear of ridicule."

SEEK PUBLIC AID

The civil aviation department appealed through the press to all who saw unidentified aerial objects to tell the department.

Since then the civil aviation department has received as many as 50 reports in one week. The reports run to a general pattern of "discs," "saucers," "rockets" and "balloons."

Most of the objects are said to have travelled at terrific speed across the sky, leaving a trail of vapor or brilliant light. Others hovered and rotated before flashing out of sight. Some appeared to descend rapidly from high up, others rose quickly from lower altitudes.

The Royal Australian Air Force has been investigating "flying saucers" since 1947. It has received hundreds of reports and they continue to pile up.

The Australian Flying Saucer Investigation Committee, formed before unexplained objects developed official status, has received 28 reports. The committee could explain seven of the reported objects as meteors or aircraft. But they drew a blank on the other 21.

FIFTEEN TONS OF FIREWORKS are set off over Sydney to welcome the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh. The Royal couple, on their six-month Commonwealth tour, watched the display from the grounds of Government House.

QUEEN ELIZABETH and the Duke of Edinburgh, wearing sun glasses, stand on the deck of the Royal liner Gothic and watch their approach to Sydney harbor.

Smuggles Way Into Lifeboat To Rescue Crew

ALDEBURGH, England (CP)—Fifteen-year-old Patrick Cable was sitting in the theatre when the sirens wailed.

Pat knew what it meant. Five previous generations of his family in this east coast port had answered the urgent call.

The Royal National Lifeboat Institution, which operates the lifeboat service around the British coasts, has a rule that no one under 18 may join the lifeboat crews.

But Pat joined the dark shapes leaping into the lifeboat. "I got aboard before anyone recognized me in the darkness," Pat said later.

The lifeboat fought its way to the disabled steamship Kentbrook and helped rescue 14 men aboard.

As dawn broke and the rescue ended successfully, coxswain Bill Green turned around to congratulate his crew. His eyes bulged at the 15-year-old. Later he said the youngster had proved himself to be "one of the best—he'll make a fine lifeboat man."

"I hope the gentlemen in London will understand," Green said.

Canada's Attitude Influenced Britain About New Rifle

By ARCH MacKENZIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Canada's attitude to the controversial Belgian rifle was a "cardinal consideration" in the British government's decision to re-equip its army with that model rather than a British type.

This emerges from the welter of words in Britain's "great rifle debate," the sharpest of the year in the House of Commons. Labor, stung by the apparent jettisoning of a home product which had received high praise previously from the Conservative government, failed in an attempt to unseat the government.

Stating the government position, War Minister Antony Head said that key factors involved were Canada's refusal to accept the British weapon, rejected by the United States, and Canada's plans to manufacture the Belgian weapon if the rifle passed tests.

"The point is that Canada has stated that for her government to manufacture a rifle which has been turned down by the United States . . . would be a course which they could not accept," said Head.

PRODUCTION QUESTION

His other point was this: "I maintain that in any future war a government which felt happy about having the whole of their rifle production in this country would lack vision."

Canada's decision to manufacture the Belgian rifle under licence, tests permitting, "is a cardinal consideration in this matter," he added, citing the case of a bomb hit on a Birmingham small arms plant during the Second World War. This, he said, had jeopardized British rifle production for a time.

Woodrow Wyatt, financial secretary to the war office in the last Labor government, asked what difference this made.

Why could not Canada manufacture the Belgian rifle and Britain the British one, he asked, in view of the fact that both weapons could fire the .300 round agreed on by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as standard ammunition. Would not that fact make the rifles interchangeable to a degree if shortages of either developed?

Replied Head: "It ought to have dawned on the honorable gentleman that, if the government had two rifles in an army, it would mean two different lots of spare parts. That makes a difference."

In a debate that brought Prime Minister Churchill to lead the government defence, argument tended to obscure the real issue.

"Let us get it straight from the beginning," said Head, following Churchill, who had praised both weapons while stating that the Belgian rifle appeared to contain more potential for changing with the times.

"One side of the House . . . says that the E. M. 2 (British) rifle is the best rifle; it has British invention and prestige behind it. Now we have standardized on the .300 round, why not give the E. M. 2 a .300 calibre, because we have overcome the problem of standardization?

"This side of the House (the government side) says that if the difference between the two rifles is marginal, surely it is common sense to standardize on the F. N. (Belgian) rifle because we then have the prospect—I put it higher than the prospect—of manufacture of this rifle under licence in Canada and production in North America, outside this country."

RAISED CLAXTON'S NAME

Earlier, Emanuel Shinwell, defence minister in the last Labor government, raised the name of Canadian Defence Minister Brooke Claxton, whom he quoted as saying at a 1951 rifle conference:

"I am not going to take sides. What we are concerned with is who is going to produce the rifle and the round," sought for NATO standardizing in small arms.

Shinwell added: "I appreciate that Canada is a great producing country. She is concerned about production. She wants to be a universal provider, and good luck to her.

"Canadians were not going to consume the rifle on a large scale. They have not the troops and do not intend to have them in the future. They have other ideas about how to conduct military operations, but I cannot go into that now. . . . The question with which we are left is which rifle is the best to use with this round (the .300 standard round)."

Site Important As Product Lakefield Businessmen Told

LAKEFIELD (ENS)—Addressing a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and other citizens interested in bringing industries to the village, Donald E. Hollend, of the Trade and Industry branch, Department of Planning and Development, told his audience that the industrial man, looking for a place to situate, was just as interested in finding it as a community was in selling it.

"There are now, in Ontario, 230 areas of which we have complete listing—yours is one of them," said Mr. Hollend. "You are the ones that have to sell your community, the guiding spirit must come from Lakefield. When these men come to look your community over, they will want to feel that it is a place where they will belong. The competition is very keen in the industrial program. It's not easy, and it does cost money, but if you have what he wants and he likes the community, he'll stay. But he won't come just to help pay the taxes."

Mr. Hollend further stated that from 1949 to 1952 there had been 377 new industries started in Ontario. Of this number, one third were started and operating on Canadian capital, the others were financed from the United States, Great Britain and continental Europe.

Many large industries were starting branch plants in small communities, and this was very desirable.

"It's a long term proposition and you can't hurry it. The men of industry are shrewd business men. Have something to sell, know what you have to sell, and believe in what you are selling. Don't set your sights too high. You would be far better to start with a small industry than one employing 500 persons, even if you could get one," concluded Mr. Hollend.

Introduced by C. of C. industrial chairman, E. H. Northey, Mr. Hollend was thanked by A. G. Buchanan.

Walter A. Killoran, president of the C. of C. was chairman for the meeting and in a brief address remarked that he felt perhaps something in the way of a subsidy might be a good idea to encourage localization of industries in smaller places and that the localizing of industry in large centres was not a good thing.

Reeve William C. Grant, in addressing the meeting, stated that the industrial asesssment for Lakefield was only 10 percent of the total and for a healthy situation it should be 50 percent. He felt, he said, that the taxes for educational purposes were becoming an increasing burden to the taxpayers, and one which would be relieved were industries to locate here.

A question and answer period was held in which Mr. Hollend was very helpful.

Refreshments were then served to those attending.

"Leave Us Alone" Theme New Rhodesia Federation

By HUGH LATIMER

SALISBURY, Southern Rhodesia (OFNS)—One hundred and one years after his birth, the bust of Cecil Rhodes (founder of Rhodesia) looked down last week on the official opening of the Central African Federation of the Rhodesias and Nyasaland.

The speech from the Throne was calculatedly uneventful. Nothing with the least character of controversy appears in this first session's program, nor is there likely to be much work for the newly appointed African Affairs Board, formed to protect Africans against race discrimination, unless it is the Territorial Laws Amendment Bill which will simply relegislate laws. If these laws are found to discriminate against Africans, then they cannot become valid under the Constitution unless passed by the British Secretary of State.

The new premier of the Federation, Sir Godfrey Huggins, has always the same message nowadays for journalists and others from overseas who interview him. It it: "Leave us alone. We want no interfering busybodies here."

Even the Bill to stop Indian immigration has been postponed to the next session. The Government can already stop it by administrative means and typically prefers to do so without publicity.

DISCONTENT

But not even Sir Godfrey can disguise the turmoil in his three territories which 215,000 Europeans share with nearly seven million Africans. The guard of honor of the Royal Rhodesia Regiment at the opening of Parliament, as soon as the ceremony had finished, sloped arms and entrained for Wankie where 9,000 African coal-miners are on strike for more pay. Salisbury and Bulawayo have only a week's supply of coal left and the output of copper, the economic mainstay of the Federation, may have to be cut. Curfew has been declared in Wankie and the police have the power of summary arrest and deportation. The main difficulty of the authorities is to find any African with authority to call off the strike because the Government refuses to recognize the trades unions and makes striking an offence.

PROTEST COLOR BAR

In Northern Rhodesia, the African picketing of butchers' shops as a protest against the color bar there, has now spread from Lusaka to the Copper Belt.

Nyasaland is still suffering from the after-effects of the rioting last August when eleven Africans were killed, and its African representatives have come to the Federal Assembly determined to wreck the new Federation if they possibly can.

In the Federal Assembly itself, one European member, is creating trouble because he arrived late and was given a seat next to Africans: while the Africans themselves complain about segregated lavatories and say they have arrived in Salihbury to find themselves forced to carry a pass and forbidden to drink beer or spirits.

28 Penknives Removed From Stomach

NEW YORK (AP)—There were a lot of hungry people on the loose last week.

When a gentleman in Naples, Italy, complained of a stomach ache, doctors operated and removed 28 penknives, eight metal keys, three silver spoons, a half dozen metal coins and bits of glass. The man explained he was in training for a bet that he could eat an automobile—windshield, tires and all.

In Shreveport, La., a 17-month-old boy and a young mocassin snake started biting each other. The boy suffered only a small wound on a hand. But the snake died—minus his tail.

In Louisville a spaniel nibbled up a tasty—and expensive— diamond. It was recovered after a major—and expensive—operation.

In Bay City, Mich., an 18-month-old girl swallowed a safety pin. Doctors discovered the pin—and a phonograph needle.

In Waco, Tex., a young fellow named Freddie Williams entered an eating contest with a friend. He won after consuming 24 eggs, two pounds of bacon, five pieces of toast, a big glass of milk and two quarts of buttermilk.

Japan Chinese Pro-Red

TOKYO (AP — Japan's 40,000 Chinese residents have organized a council pledging allegiance to Red China, a Tokyo police department source said Wednesday. At the same time the Chinese decided to send a delegate to Peiping, the source said.

Traffic Problems

Construction of roads in Kenya's Royal National Park has one main problem. The animals in the park don't assist in road development and some seem to resent human interference, as shown in these pictures taken for the International Road Federation. Zebras and giraffes have been known to cross the roads in herds, and hold up all traffic for hours. Then there is the lioness who seems to have grown very fond of highways, creating a hazard should any motorist decide to leave his car. Park officials believe the animals block traffic because of a natural tendency to block anything that is offensive to them. The scent of tires, gas and oil presumably brings the animals to the roads.

HEEDLESS OF ANY TRAFFIC in the vicinity, these zebras casually cross the road.

THERE'S NO TELLING who you'll meet while driving in the Royal National Nairobi Park, so it's better to take it easy and go slow.

WITH A LIONESS STALKING the road, motorists would be wise to stay in their autos. That's what sign in background cautions them.

Ottawa Man Expert On Unfortunate Technicalities

OTTAWA (CP)—Ronald Judge of Ottawa is an expert on "unfortunate technicalities."

The English naval architect came to Canada in 1941 at the Canadian government's request to help launch Canada's wartime ship construction.

He served as a constructor lieutenant in the RCNVR from December, 1943, until he was invalided out a year later with tuberculosis. For the last six years he has been on the defence department's team of naval designers.

But the technicalities — compounded because of the TB record —mean he must wait until 1958 before he can become a Canadian citizen.

PORT OF OTTAWA

The tuberculosis, and the fact he came to Canada with diplomatic credentials, formed the snag that kept catching on red tape until last August. The immigration department then finally stamped his British passport:

"Immigrant—landed in the port of Ottawa Aug. 17, 1953."

Mr. Judge had spent a year and a half in the naval wing of the Royal Edward and Laurentian Sanatorium at St. Agathe, Que., after he was invalided out of the navy.

For another year "I pottered around St. Agathe on my own, convalescing," Mr. Judge recalled. "Both DVA and the navy were magnificent to me. DVA pronounced my condition arrested and just to make sure, I got an independent opinion from a doctor in Montreal."

In June, 1947, he came to Ottawa and joined the directorate of naval construction as a temporary civil servant, a position later made permanent. He began hitting snags when he dropped around to the immigration department later that year.

"They told me I couldn't apply for citizenship because I wasn't a landed immigrant and that I was prohibited from being classified as a landed immigrant because of the tuberculosis."

LONG DEFERREDD

So began five years of deferments while the immigration department studied veterans' affairs department x-rays of Mr. Judge's chest.

The ship designer's uncertain status led to various difficulties with immigration officers when he returned from trips abroad as a Canadian government representative. At one point an immigration department official reassured Mr. Judge with the remark:

"The worst that could happen to you is deportation."

NEEDED SENSE OF HUMOR

Mr. Judge, who has married since coming to Canada and now has a young son, admits that it "required an indomitable sense of humor" to carry on the struggle for citizenship.

The last straw came shortly after he was granted immigrant status last year. A health department nurse appeared at his home to inform him that, as a "newly-landed immigrant" who had previously had tuberculosis, he must have a chest x-ray.

18 Operational Awards Been Approved By Queen

OTTAWA (CP)—The Queen has approved 18 operational awards to members of the 25th Canadian Infantry Brigade for outstanding service in Korea.

Announcing the awards today, army headquarters said 20 other members of the 25th Brigade have received mentions-in-dispatches.

The Distinguished Service Order was awarded two regimental commanders of Canada's troops in Korea: Lt.-Col. Jean-Louis Gaston Poulin of Quebec City, commander of the 3rd Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, and Lt.-Col. Henry William Sterne of Kingston, commander of the 81st Field Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery.

Col. Poulin's citation said that "on numerous occasions, when his battalion was under fire or being attacked, he visited the forward positions involved to encourage and advise his men." All ranks of his battalion "were inspired by his coolness under fire."

Col. Sterne had shown tactical ability "of a high order." Demands for artillery support during the Korean war had been heavy an Korean war had been heavy and "the successful defence of territory against frequent enemy assaults is a tribute to the fine efforts of the regiment under this officer's command."

Three other unit commanders of the brigade were made officers of the Order of the British Empire. They are Lt.-Col. Kenneth Laidlaw Campbell of Perth, commander of the 3rd Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment; Lt. - Col. James Duncan Galloway of Barrie, commander of the 38 Field Ambulance, Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps, and Lt.-Col. Malcolm Francis MacLachlan, of Petawawa, commander of the 3rd Battalion, Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Mrs. Chaplin Becomes British Citizen

LONDON (AP) — Britain today counted American-born Oona O'Neill Chaplin among her newest citizens. The wife of famed comedian Charlie Chaplin has renounced her allegiance to the United States, which won't readmit her husband until he answers accusations of Communist sympathies and "grave moral charges."

"Isn't it lovely? Isn't it just cute?" the 29-year-old Oona asked as she waved her British passport at reporters Wednesday night when she and her 64-year-old husband flew into London from Switzerland.

CHARLIE PROUD

Later the British-born Chaplin, who in 40 years in Hollywood never surrendered his original citizenship, told a press conference at their hotel:

"I'm very proud to announce my wife is now a British citizen."

"I'm very glad to be taking my husband's nationality," said Oona, whose 'teen-age marriage estranged her from her late father, American playwright Eugene O'Neill.

"This is one of my proudest moments," said Chaplin. He announced last April that he would never return to the U. S., where, he charged, he had been the "object of lies and vicious reactionary groups."

Route To Indo-China

HONG KONG (AP)—The Chinese Communists have opened a new road linking Kunming and Cheli in Yunnan province giving them an additional route to the Indo-Chinese border, a report received here Wednesday from Kunming said. The Red Chinese have other and more direct avenues into Indo-China, but the new road undoubtedly was built with an eye to military possibilities.

Guerrillas Kill 14

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP)—Official reports said today that 1,000 well-armed "Darol Islam" guerrillas have raided three west Java villages, killing 14 persons and wounding 13 others. The attack on Monday in an area 30 miles southeast of Bandung was the biggest in many months by the fanatic Moslem organization which has terrorized sections of west and central Java since Indonesia won independence from The Netherlands.

Two Canadians Operating Israel's Tourist Business

MONTREAL (CP)—Two young Canadians have been running Israel's biggest tourist organization for the last three years.

It all started when Lionel Druker, 29-year-old law student from Sydney, N.S., met Arthur Goldberg of Vancouver and they decided to "put Israel on the map."

Druker, the senior partner, fell in love with the country when he left his studies at Dalhousie University and joined the Israeli forces in the Arab-Israel war. He made a name for himself, and although only in his early 20s became officer commanding the Army's tank division. Later he organized Israel's first armored officers training school.

When the war ended in 1949 Lionel returned to Canada but the plan to start a drive-yourself automobile service for tourists had already formed in his mind. His meeting with Arthur Goldberg clinched matters and the partners returned to Tel Aviv.

With financial aid from Canadian Zionist organizations the veterans —Goldberg also fought with Israeli troops during the war—rounded up 14 cars and the brand-new business began in the young state.

Since then the company, known to more than 70,000 tourists as Sightseeing Limited, has spread to three specially designed tourist buses.

The business is described as "one of the most successful investments in Israel," and Mr. Druker, who recently attended the Canadian Zionist Organization's 32nd annual convention in Montreal is acknowledged as the country's "Mr. Tourist."

OIL-CRACKING GIANT—No, it's not a toy for this little boy, it's a model of a new oil plant. The unit is called a catalytic cracker and it will split petroleum molecules to make more and better gasoline. According to officials in Norco, Lt., it will produce about one million gallons of gasoline a day besides huge quantities of other petroleum products. The model, built to ¼-inch scale, serves as an engineering aid.

Calls Collection Major Scandal

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa artist Henri Masson today called the Seagram collection of Canadian paintings, which recently was exhibited in several countries, "a major publicity stunt . . . a farce."

The world tour of the paintings was a "scandal," Masson told the Richelieu Club. "The paintings are being distributed to show what? —dirt," he said.

The Belgium-born artist said few of the 75 Canadian artists asked to exhibit for the collection were artists in the true sense. They were commercial artists.

SAYS PAY "NOT BAD"

"They paid them $1,000 to paint calendar pictures. I can paint calendar pictures in two days. One thousand dollars is not bad for two days' work."

Mr. Masson said, "Two or three good Canadian artists" were asked to exhibit for the collection, but they now were "great artists among a group of bad buttons."

He said the paintings were shown as examples of Canadian art. "That's not true . . . it's a farce . . . it's a scandal."

Mr. Masson, whose work has been exhibited in several major exhibitions in Canada, said he was asked to submit paintings for the collection but turned down the offer "because they wanted a painting of Parliament Hill."

Belgian Committee Approves Treaty

BRUSSELS (AP) — The Belgian senate's joint defence and foreign affairs committee approved the European army treaty 27 to 10 today with two abstentions.

The treaty to set up the six-nation European defence community already has been approved by the house of representatives and soon will come before the senate for debate.

Of the other EDC nations, the West German and Dutch parliaments have completed ratification of the treaty, while France, Italy and Luxembourg still must act on it.

Booming Shipyards

STOCKHOLM (CP)—The Swedish shipbuilding industry set a record in 1953 by launching a total of 730,000 tons of new craft, of which 705,000 tons was delivered before the year end. In 1938, deliveries totalled 250,000 tons.

Want Canadian Code Of Airworthiness

TORONTO (CP) — Some of Canada's top aircraft industry engineering executives plan to set up a distinctly Canadian code of airworthiness requirements for civil aircraft.

The technical committee of the Air Industries and Transport Association, meeting at the A. V. Roe Canada Ltd. plant in nearby Malton, decided to approach the federal government on the matter.

At present civil aircraft in Canada are built to requirements patterned after British and U. S. airworthiness codes.

Problems affecting airframe and engine design and accessories will be tackled by the committee, with a view to standardizing specifications and processes.

A-Locomotive Can Be Built

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A locomotive run by atomic power could be built to compete successfully with diesel power if the cost of its uranium fuel is not too high, a nuclear scientist said Tuesday.

Dr. Lyle B. Borst of the University of Utah supervised the study and designing of plans for such a locomotive. Whether it can be put to practical use depends upon "an unknown factor . . . the price of uranium, which is classified information," he told newspaper men.

A group of railroad and industrial men will discuss the project with Dr. Borst and his assistants today. Borst formerly did scientific work for the atomic energy commission.

The locomotive, driven with steam - produced electricity, would look much like those now in use. Borst estimated it would cost $1,200,000, develop 7,000 horsepower, or as much power as four of the newest diesel power units.

He said he believed that if the price of uranium were less than $11,000 a pound, the locomotive could compete successfully in heavy duty with diesel power.

Tanker Hazard

STOCKHOLM (CP)—The danger of nylon and other plastic clothing on board oil tankers was stressed by a shipping board official here. Friction between nylon and steel plate, especially in dry weather, may produce static capable of causing an explosion of gasoline fumes.

Farmers In Conference With Cabinet Feb. 19

Policies and programs in agriculture advanced by the organized farmers of Canada, as proposed in resolutions passed by the Canadian Federation of Agriculture at its recent convention sessions in London, Ont., will be submitted to the federal cabinet Friday Feb. 19.

This conference is in the tradition of the 15-year development of the Federation.

Support for the principle of producer marketing boards for farm products developed in the recent convention, and the feeling of the farmers of Canada on this matter will be conveyed to the Cabinet, although in the first instance such boards are of provincial jurisdiction. Most provinces now have producer marketing legislation of some type.

Request is to be made that some substantial part of the annual Federal-Provincial Agriculture Conference at Ottawa in the late fall be devoted to problems of marketing.

The Federation convention has declared strongly once more for some planned system of disposal of food and agriculture surpluses in the international field, and will so urge upon the government at Ottawa.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF SUPPORTS

The government will be urged to make forward announcements of proposed support prices in the various commodities on which price support is granted, in order to give producers sufficient advance notice of what the floor prices for their respective products will be.

Demand for a Board of Livestock Commissioners for Canada, a request which has been advanced before, has again come from the Federation gathering. In the livestock field, another urgent problem, that of scarcity of veterinary services throughout the nation, will be brought prominently to the fore in discussions with government heads.

The dairy farmers of Canada are seeking some plan for stabilization of their industry, particularly for the milk powder industry. In the meantime, the dairymen are asking for some protection from unfair competition with the butter industry.

Higher floor prices for eggs and a floor price program for poultry meats will again be asked of the government. Support was given in the convention for a national poulty marketing board.

The Federation will express support of a general policy reduced tariffs and acceptance of foreign currencies with encouragement of imports from Britain.

Continuance of price support program for hogs is asked by the Federation. The convention also agreed to the adoption of an increase from 40 cents to $1 in the differential between Grade A and Grade B1 hogs, a proposal advanced jointly by the Federation and the packing companies. It is expected that the new differential will be in effect shortly.

The CFA is to study and recommend a farm credit plan. The national farm organization will also make astudy of the present Bank Act and make a presentation to the Banking Committee of the Commons while revision of the Act is being considered at the present session.

Island Koreans Overwhelm Navy Priest With Response

ON BOARD HMCS CRUSADER —This Canadian destroyer, champion "train buster" of the United Nations fleet before the Korean Armistice, hasn't any trains to shoot at now, but she's determined to live up to her name—the name of "Crusader," that is.

At least that's the idea of Father James Noonan of Toronto, Roman Catholic chaplain to the Canadian destroyers in the Far East. As far as he's concerned, the Crusader's first patrol of her second tour of duty with the UN fleet can be called "Crusader's crusade."

When he sailed with the ship he had 43 Roman Catholics to look after. Two days later his flock had increased by 400.

Here is his story:

"Our patrol took us to the island of Yang Pyong-Do, on the Korean west coast, and when the U.S. Marine authorities learned that the Crusader had a priest aboard, they asked me to go ashore to minister to the Korean Catholics.

"With the permission of our captain, I landed at the island village, prepared to remain a few hours. I stayed three days, for these people—400 men, women and children—had not seen a priest in nine months, and did not know when they would see one again.

"Yet, almost destitute materially, they had built for themselves a church, and a school staffed by their own teachers. As I questioned them, through an interpreter, I became aware that they were astonishingly well organized. But I had many surprises yet to come.

"As they were subject to a military curfew, I arranged for Mass at 4:30 o'clock on a cold Sunday afternoon, and when I arrived at their little church at 2 p.m. they were already gathering in large numbers. Three hours later they were still coming.

"Many of them had come prepared to make confession and to receive Holy Communion, which I administered until 5:30 p.m., when it was decided that we must call a halt and begin Mass. Nearly 100 men and women received Communion at this Mass, and by the time we finished, twilight was lengthening into darkness.

NOT YET DONE

"But my duties were not yet done. I was informed that 22 people—five babies, eight girls and nine men—were prepared for baptism. By candle light, and with chattering teeth—the church having neither heat nor light—I began the baptismal service.

"They came forward, holding lighted candles in one hand, and in the other plain white cards, on which were printed their names in Latin. After the service, their teacher gave me certificates to sign, which they retained as baptismal records.

"I followed the same programs on Monday and again on Tuesday, administering Holy Communion to approximately 200 villagers—perhaps the last they would receive for many months to come. And, as I offered Mass for them, they sang in Korean the same hymns that I had heard as a boy in Canada. As they sang, I realized that these people, who had lost almost everything of material value, were very rich spiritually.

"When I left the village, all the people turned out to wave farewell. They offered to pray for our Canadian sailors, and I am sure the humble prayers of this little island will invoke Divine blessing on our officers and men."

Want Milk Price To Be Kept Unchanged

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario guernsey cattle breeders passed a resolution Wednesday asking that the Ontario milk control board and other control authorities be advised they feel the price of milk should not be lowered. Similar resolutions have been passed this year by other farm groups.

Delegates presented several awards, including a world's record milk production award to John Glen, of Maplewood Farm, Maple, whose cow, Wey Acres Levity Sherry, produced 17,980 pounds of milk on twice-daily milking for 305 days.

Car Light Bill

TORONTO (CP)— The Ontario government is considering legislation under which it would be illegal to drive a vehicle not equipped with stop lights in proper working order, it was learned today.

Turn Down Beer

BELLEVILLE (CP)—Voters in the annexed area of Belleville Wednesday voted down licences for men's beverage rooms, women's beverage rooms and for a lounge licence.

FATHER JAMES NOONAN'S congregation increased many-fold when the Canadian naval chaplain from the destroyer HMCS Crusader recently visited the island of Yang Pyong-Do, on the west coast of Korea. Here Father Noonan is seen with the island people beside the church they built themselves. In the lower photo are three of the children whose happy faces reflect the welcome the priest received—(Nat. Would Screen Appeals For Charity

TORONTO (CP)—Formation of a committee to screen all charitable appeals in Canada will be recommended to two national associations of welfare organizations, Preston Gilbride of Toronto, chairman of the Community Chests and Councils of Canada, said Wednesday.

Mr. Gilbride is also chairman of a special committee comprising members of the CCCC and the Canadian Conference of National Voluntary Health and Welfare Organizations.

He said the special committee will make the recommendation to its parent bodies.

USEFUL PURPOSE

"We met here to decide whether such a group would serve a useful purpose for the country as a whole," Mr. Gilbride said. We have decided it would.

It was reported the new committee would likely have 25 members, and would probably be known as the national budget review for charity appeals.

The meeting suggested it should have representatives from national agencies, from provincial and from some municipal governments and from industrial labor, agricultural and women's groups.

Explosive Not Menace

LONDON (CP) — Three times within a week police rushed out to remove sticks of highly explosive gelignite from various parts of London. After recovering the three sticks from a mailbox, the floor of a bus and the base of a flower pot, police decided they were dealing with someone with a misguided sense of humor. None of the three sticks was equipped with a detonator.

U.K. Demands Damages

LONDON (AP)—Britain Wednesday served another demand on Red China for £20,000 compensation for an alleged Chinese attack on a Royal Navy motor launch near Hong Kong last September. The government previously charged that a Chinese Communist naval vessel fired on the launch and killed seven of her crew. The Chinese rejected the charge and said the launch was at fault.

Dishwasher Admits Two Killings

NEW YORK (AP) — A Greenwich Village dishwasher who was once a mental patient has been charged with double homicide in the slaying of Maxwell Bodenheim and the poet-author's third wife, but police today remained silent on the motive.

Captured Wednesday about a mile from the Manhattan slaying scene, 25-year-old Harold Weinberg at first told conflicting stories.

He said he killed the 58-year-old Bodenheim, but that the one-time literary great had killed his wife, the former Ruth Fagan, 35. Then he denied both killings. Then he said he killed Bodenheim because the latter raised a drunken row in his room. Once Weinberg said he tried to make love to the woman and Bodenheim fought him. And several times he repeated the phrase: "Maybe there was somebody under the bed."

SIGNED STATEMENT

After 10 hours of questioning, police announced that Weinberg had signed a written statement admitting both murders. He was smiling and unconcerned at his booking.

The bodies of the couple were found Sunday in a dingy lower east side room rented by Weinberg. Bodenheim, a literary figure of the 1920s and early '30s was shot to death. His wife's body bore numerous stab wounds.

Weinberg was quoted as saying he killed Bodenheim with a .22-calibre rifle. A knife was found behind a tenement.

Africans Face Death

MASERU, Basutoland (Reuters) Esther Kabi, an African woman, and eight African men Wednesday were sentenced to death for the ritual murder of the woman's husband to make medicine from his flesh. The mutilated body of Tsehlo Kabi was found under a cliff Feb. 21 last year. Evidence was given that he had been throttled, or had his neck broken, and flesh and certain organs removed, including his brain.

Working Out Tax Payments

TORONTO (CP)—A spokesman for a Toronto reserve army unit said Wednesday night his non-commissioned officers are dissatisfied over federal collection of income taxes but the matter of payment is being worked out with income tax authorities.

Capt. H. A. Hamilton, adjutant of the Governor-General's Horse Guards, said he knew of only one man who had actually turned in his uniform in protest.

However, Sgt. George Kelly of the 48th Highlanders said he knew of "four or five" NCOs who resigned.

Capt. Hamilton said NCOs of his unit held a meeting to discuss the matter. It had been decided to take up with income tax authorities the possibility of installment-plan for those billed for income tax.

Prospects Dim For Agreement On Austria

By RICHARD O'REGAN

VIENNA (AP) — Military disadvantages to both East and West make the prospects dim that the Big Four will be able to agree on independence for Austria in Berlin this week.

Theoretically, the four major powers should have no trouble on agreeing on a state treaty, for this country of 7,000,000.

Since Jan. 14, 1947, a draft treaty has been discussed at 360 international meetings and been the subject of 37 notes between Russia and the West. Most of the difficulties between East and West have been ironed out. Not much more stands to be settled.

But the delicate balance of political and military power in Europe would be upset radically if the Big Four were to bury their differences.

OPTIMISM IN VIENNA

There are in Vienna, however, many Austrians who look with optimism to Berlin, believing that an agreement on Austria, if only a partial one, is necessary for both East and West to show their desire for peace.

If the Big Four were to agree on a treaty, it would mean that Russia would have to withdraw 44,000 troops and move jet - plus bases behind the Iron Curtain. Within 90 days she also would be obligated to pull 80,000 men out of Hungary and Romania.

And the United States, Britain and France would have to pull back some 20,000 men from the "alpine fortress" of western Austria.

A military vacuum would be created. It would be filled by an Austrian army limited to 53,000 men, including frontier guards and gendarmerie, and 90 aircraft. The Big Four already have agreed on this.

BILATERAL AGREEMENTS

East of the vacuum, Russia undoubtedly would make bilateral agreements with Hungary and Romania to keep her troops on Austria's frontier.

The West would lose control of vital trans-alpine passes between Germany and Italy as Austria has already said it will not join any military alliance.

The West, however, has indicated it is willing to lose this military advantage because it is sure of Austria's political conservatism and pro-Westernism.

The Big Four originally promised at Moscow in 1943 that they would grant Austria independence. Discussions did not get under way until 1947. Since then, Russia has raised obstructions at 260 meetings of the foreign minister's deputies, 85 sessions of the Austrian treaty commission and 15 meetings of the Council of Foreign Ministers.

Report Pope Pius Begins Convalescence

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The condition of ailing Pope Pius continued to improve today, and the Vatican announced that "his convalescence has begun."

The statement, by the Vatican press office, was the most encouraging since the pontiff took to his bed 22 days ago with a stubborn and still unexplained gastric ailment accompanied for much of the time by persistent hiccups. For several days he could not eat.

3 Peopjle Perish In Hotel Blaze

ALBANY, N. Y. (AP)—At least three persons perished today in a fire that swept through the Eagle Hotel, about three blocks from Governor Thomas E. Dewey's executive mansion.

Six of the 28 persons police said were registered in the 30-room hotel were taken to hospital. Police continued a search for other victims.

Report Queen In Happy Mood At Wollongong

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh returned today to Sydney in the royal train from Wollongong after a pleasant, comparatively calm day — one of the quietest of their Australian tour.

Although 120,000 people turned up to cheer her at Wollongong, third largest town in New South Wales, the crowds were kept under control. The Queen was in a happy mood and laughed outright several times during a civic luncheon, at which there were no speeches.

QUEEN EATS HEARTILY

The Queen tucked into the four-course lunch, belying reports that her health has been affected by the heat and crowds.

(In Melbourne, Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies said Wednesday in his weekly "fireside" broadcast that reports about the Queen being exhausted were more sensational than true.

(It is worth while remembering that the Queen and her husband are young, vigorous and natural, he said. But it was inevitable there would be a "few grumbles" during the tour.)

The road to Wollongong was lined with thick crowds, including 50,000 flag-waving children in their Sunday finery. A farmer even brought his prize jersey cow, decorated with ribbons and bunting.

The property comittee of city council Wednesday recommended advertising for tenders on the 1½-storey frame house in front of the city's greenhouse on Townsend St. The parks committee recently decided to discontinue operation of the greenhouse and use of the dwelling for storage. It is intended to sell the house and have it moved off the property.

Extend Date For Use Of Park Stable

Board Of Health Asks $5,000 Bond Guarantee Of Removal

The board of health, Wednesday, decided to extend the time the exhibition board may use the barns on Morrow Park property, under the present conditions to not later than April 15. There is also a stipulation that Hugh Stewart present lessee post a bond of $5,000 with the board of health guaranteeing the removal of his stock on or before that date.

Mayor Norman Graham said that Mr. Stewart had assured him that the stock, some $40,000 worth of horses, would be off the Morrow premises by April 15. He said it would be impossible to move the stock much before that date as there was no accommodation open. Dr. J. P. Wells (MOH) felt that this date would be satisfactory as the animals were well cared for and fly conditions would not begin before that date.

At a special meeting of the board of health on December 30 it was decided that the exhibition board had until January 31 to discontinue the stabling of horses on a semi-permanent basis in Morrow Park. Nothing was done, however, and the matter waived until the February board meeting.

TALKED WITH MAYOR

In the meantime Mr. Stewart had discussed the matter with Mayor Graham and city clerk E. A. Outram and had arranged to submit a bond to the board of health guaranteeing removal of the stock by April 15.

"I did not mention the value of the bond", said Mr. Stewart, today, "but was willing to authorize a reasonable one — certainly not $5,000. I am definitely moving my stock on or before April 15 anyway as I have made arrangements in the U.S. for that time. Since stabling my horses at Morrow Park, I have done my best to conform with city bylaws and improve sanitary conditions here."

REDUCED STABLE

Mr. Stewart said he had diminished his stable from 17 to 10 horses to further comply with the wishes of city officials, but that was as many as he could find accommodation for at the present time. The remaining 10 horses are being trained on the race track for the spring season.

Originally, the stabling of horses on Morrow Park property had been arranged privately between Mr. Stewart and the exhibition board, without the knowledg of Dr. Wells, who, Mr. Stewart says, "hasn't personally consulted me about the matter yet."

DEPARTMENT STORE OFFICIALS of Simpsons-Sears Company Limited introduced their new Peterborough store manager, S. E. Siscoe (left, above), to civic officials and other leading citizens at a small luncheon today noon. Shown with him are Mayor Norman Graham, assistant vice-president Morgan Reid and retail operating manager H. W. Grisdale. Mr. Reid said that he was impressed with the building progress of the new store (lower photo), on Lansdowne St. He and Mr. Grisdale are looking for 20,000 square feet of warehouse space. Failing to find it the company may have to have a structure built.

NOT GOING WHOLE HOG

Quaker Oats Company requested permission of the board of health to stable a calf and a hog at 256 Simcoe St., for exhibition purposes. The company has said it will conform with all city bylaws and sanitary measures, and wishes to use the animals to exhibit the effects of its stock feeds over a period of months. The board decided, upon the recommendation of Dr. J. P. Wells, MOH, to grant the company permission to stable the calf on condition that this permission be revocable at any time should the board so decide. "I don't think we should go whole hog about this thing," said Dr. Wells in suggesting that only the calf be allowed at present. J. B.

Simpsons-Sears Looking For Warehouse

The Simpsons-Sears organization is looking for 20,000 feet of warehouse space in Peterborough to serve their new department store at Lansdowne St. and Monaghan Rd.

Morgan Reid, assistant vice-president of the organization, told The Examiner today that if the company were unable to find a suitable warehouse already built, they would have to consider having one built for them.

Mr. Reid was in the city today with H. W. Grisdale, retail operating manager of the organization, and S. E. Siscoe, who is to be manager of the new Peterborough department store. They attended a luncheon at the Empress hotel, when Mr. Siscoe was introduced to a group of civic officials and leading citizens.

During the morning, Mr. Reid inspected the new store, which is at present being built. He said he was pleased with the progress of construction and expected the store to be open "in time to catch some of the summer trade, probably in August."

The store will handle a full line of merchandise, which Mr. Reid said would include "just about everything except automobiles."

As a consequence, the warehouse would need to have railway siding connections. There would also be some deliveries made from within the city to the warehouse, Mr. Reid said.

Convert Old Turner House Into Community Centre?

The old Turner house behind the Public Library may be put into shape for use as a community centre by the recreation commission if the cost is not too high. Although they refused to reverse the stand of their predecessors on the 1953 city council, the property committee Wednesday afternoon decided to obtain estimates from local contractors on the cost of rewiring, lighting, redecorating and heating the house.

Last year's property committee recommended demolition of the house on the basis of a report by consulting architect Ronald Winter, who advised tearing the building down and using the property for a parking lot.

CHANGE OVER COST

He said it would cost $14,662.50 to repair the house and convert it for office accomodation. This figure did not include cost of new partitions or changing existing partitions to suit potential occupants.

When the recommendation was placed before last year's council, it was decided to delay demolition on the grounds that the house might be used for some other purpose.

The property committee made a tour of both the library and the Turner house Wednesday afternoon, following requests from the library board for $100,000 for alterations to the Public Library and from the recreation commission for use of the house.

BELIEVES HOUSE SUITED

Recreational Director Ken Robinson told The Examiner today that, in his opinion, the house was suited to a general program of arts, crafts and cultural activities and as a social centre for older citizens.

The country has a growing population of pensioners, Mr. Robinson said, who are still physically and mentally active but are precluded from employment by the fact that they are pensioned. They lack social centres for people of their own age, a lack that is being made up by other cities.

Mayor Norman Graham also favors use of the Turner house for older people, particularly those living in boarding houses.

MAY BE HIGH

Following Wednesday's tour of the building, Ald. Stan McBride, commenting on Mr. Winter's recommendation said "sometimes these so-called experts are high in their estimates. I think a local contractor would give a much lower estimate."

"I think Mr. Winter had structural changes in mind," Ald. Art Burrows commented.

"I think we should establish the policy that we are not in favor of tearing the house down," Ald. McBride said.

"Are we in a position to do that?" Ald. Gordon Farquharson, committee chairman, asked. "I think we should wait and get the estimate of some local contractors."

Ald. Burrows added that he thought the committee should have a more definite indication of what the recreational commission proposed to use the house for. They will be asked to present definite proposals to the committee.

No action was taken on the library board's request. It will be discussed in committee of the whole council.

James Hamilton Retires As Head Of Anson Board

After seven years' term of office, James Hamilton tendered his resignation as president of the Board of Anson House at the annual meeting Wednesday. Mrs. G. Stewart Cameron was elected to succeed him.

Honorary president Mrs. F. M. De la Fosse paid tribute to Mr. Hamilton's ability and his conscientious and unselfish work for the board.

Operating result for the year was a loss of $575, plus a $700 allowance for depreciation. This was more than taken care of by the bequest of $2,000 under the will of the late Harold A. Morrow. Repairs were heavier than usual owing to the carrying out of recommendations of the Grand Jury and the Fire Chief.

Special thanks were extended to A. L. Killaly for his supervision of the building repairs. Also, sincere appreciation was expressed to Miss A. Robinson, superintendent, and her house staff for excellent work during the year.

It was noted that residents of Anson House last year subscribed $65 to the Red Cross and Community Chest fund.

RECEIVED GIFTS

Christmas donations from the Canadian Legion, Police Athletic Association and other friends were gratefully acknowledged. Also treats given during the year by Royal Arthur Lodge, AF & AM, Rebekah Lodge and the local theatres. Entertainments were given the residents by Knox, St. James' and Mark Street church

George Drew To Speak In City

Opposition leader George Drew will speak to the Peterborough chapter of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews when it receives its charter March 3.

Although Brotherhood Week, one of the main projects of the council, is Feb. 21 to the 28th this year, it was not possible to arrange to have Mr. Drew here during that week.

Until now there has been no formal organization of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews in the city. But March 3 will be charter night for the group. A similar situation has existed in many cities across Canada.

In the years that the council has been active in the city, an interim executive has conducted its business. At present there are three co-chairmen in charge, Isadore Black, William Hamilton, and Fred Overend.

Parked Taxi Damaged By Hit-Run Car

An unattended taxi, parked on the east side of Queen St., was the target for a hit-and-run driver about 7.30 p.m. Wednesday. The taxi was owned by Don Delahaye, 852 George St. and was not badly damaged.

At George and Lansdowne Sts. cars driven by E. Junior West, 548 Bethune St. and Leslie Groombridge, 292 Roger St., were involved in a minor collision.

RCAF To Establish Observer Corps Of District Citizens

Peterborough is soon to become the focal point for an RCAF-sponsored ground observer corps who will be trained to take note of aircraft flying in this district. The primary purpose of the ground observer corps is to spot enemy aircraft that have got by the radar screen unnoticed. But the observers have peacetime uses too: for instance, relaying accurate information about the flight of an aircraft that is later reported missing or down.

Within three months Peterborough will be set up as a "filter centre." That is, the plotting room will receive telephone calls from 175 to 200 observer posts that will be scattered throughout this central eastern Ontario region. The information on aircraft activities will then be passed along to the parent radar unit (location not disclosed).

NEED VOLUNTEERS

Five hundred civilian volunteers are wanted to man the centre—if necessary on a 24-hour basis. A team of about 25 will operate at any one time in the plotting room. Both men and women will be accepted; preferably they should not be of an age likely to be called up for national service.

"You'd be surprised at the number of women who volunteer," said Wing Commander J. A. Wiseman, staff officer of the Ground Observer Corps, Air Defence Command. Wing Cmdr. Wiseman was one of four RCAF officers who came to Peterborough on Wednesday to do the groundwork for Canada's 12th filter centre.

"We chose Peterborough on the recommendation of the Bell Telephone Co.," he said. "It is the toll centre for this area" (i.e. long-distance calls in this area are routed through Peterborough).

Location of the filter centre has already been chosen. It will occupy 2,600 square feet of floor space on the second floor of the Clapper Building. On Wednesday, Wing Cmdr. Wiseman and the others were making arrangements with Dit Clapper for the rental of the floor space and its conversion into several rooms for the centre.

About $40,000 worth of communication equipment will be installed in the building. Apart from the plotting room, where a huge plotting table representing this geographical area is to be installed, there will be offices for the couple of RCAF officers who will be in charge, an orderly room and even a snack bar.

SEEKING POSTS

Wing Cmdr. Wiseman said that the RCAF will begin lining up observation posts throughout the district in about three weeks' time. It will probably be another three months before the filter centre in the city will be ready for use.

At present the only observation posts are the 20 or so fire towers manned by department of lands and forests' rangers. As many as 200 may be organized eventually.

"They will become aircraft conscious and will make a note — mentally, or jot it down—of every plane they see," said FO. S. L. Swanton, who will be the detachment commander in Peterborough. "For instance, if one of the corps was a farmer and he was plowing his field and he noted the details of an aircraft going over, and later another farmer, also a member of the corps and some distance away, didn't see or hear the plane —then we'd have some idea where to search if the plane was reported missing."

The boundary of the area served by the Peterborough centre goes from Barrys Bay along the south end of Algonquin Park to Clear lake, near Gravenhurst; then south along the east shore of Lake Simcoe to Lake Ontario; east to a point 20 miles west of Brockville; and north again to Barrys Bay.

First Sight Of City Pleases Store Manager

Destined to play an important role in the business life of the city, S. E. Siscoe, got his first look at Peterborough today and what he saw pleased him. He is to be manager of the new Simpsons-Sears department store at Lansdowne St. and Monaghan Rd.

Mr. Siscoe was introduced to a group of civic officials and leading citizens at a luncheon in the Empress hotel at noon.

A quiet-spoken man with an easy, flashing smile, Mr. Siscoe's six feet and athletic 175 pounds are evidence of his interest in the sports for which he will find natural facilities in the Peterborough district—swimming, fishing and tobogganing.

What interests him at the moment, however, is to find a house for himself, his wife and their five children. With the optimism which marks his United States citizenship, Mr. Siscoe expects to be able to move here in "a couple of weeks".

This optimism may be the result of his anxiety to become established here as soon as possible. Mr. Siscoe told The Examiner today that he had spent most of the morning driving around the city in search of a house. What he saw sustained the favorable impression he had earlier gained from the brochure of the Chamber of Commerce.

JOINED SEARS-ROEBUCK

Born in Clinton, Ill., in 1915, he received his early education there and later attended business college in Champagne, Ill. After graduation, he joined the Sears-Roebuck department store chain.

Mr. Siscoe became assistant manager of the organization's department store in Decatur, Ill., a post he held for six years, before being promoted to manager a year ago.

He is married to the former Hazel Bartlow of Decatur. They have five children: Scott, 9; Stewart, 7; Cynthia, 5; John, 3, and Brent, a year old.

Mr. Siscoe will supervise the preparation of the new Peterborough store for the opening which is expected to take place late in August or early in September.

Guests as today's luncheon included Morgan Reid, assistant vice-president of Simpsons-Sears; H. W. Grisdale, retail operating manager; Cris Deck, Peterborough agent; Miss Helen Brooks of the local order office; Mayor Norman Graham; City Clerk E. A. Outram; Industrial Commissioner William Birnie; Sam Whitehouse, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Earl Armstrong, local manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; William Garner, assistant general-manager of The Examiner G. W. Craw, managing editor of The Examiner, and Don Lawrie, manager of CHEX.

Sketch History Education Upper Canada

LAKEFIELD (ENS) — Gerald E. Staples of the Lakefield Preparatory School staff was guest speaker at the Lakefield Home and School Association meeting, held in the public school.

Mr. Staples outlined the beginning of the education system in Upper Canada and gave a brief outline of the background of the early settlers in this immediate district, many of whom were former officers of the British army and navy, who were given grants of land by the government.

They felt the need of a school for their sons, where some of the classics could be taught.

An uncle of Col. A. T. LeFevre donated the land and a headmaster was appointed who was qualified to teach Latin. Since that time the Grove, as it is known, has grown considerably and still carries on the traditions of English schools.

A book, "The Loan Trapper," written by a former Grove boy, was presented by Mr. Staples to Mrs. C. Galvin for guessing a nearest correct number.

As it was "Founder's Day" the president, Mrs. Stanley Burger, explained the significance of the occasion and Mrs. Clarence Foster conducted the candlelighting service depicting the aims of Home and School work and the necessity of hope, courage, co-operation, wisdom, diligence and comradeship in its members.

Those taking part in the service were Mrs. E. Dracup, Mrs. Orville Payne, Mrs. Donald Nichols, Mrs. Ralph Jackman, Mrs. B. Hennessey, Mrs. J. Andrews, Mrs. F. Kemp, Mrs. F. Frost, Mrs. H. Millar, Mrs. F. Northey, Mrs. R. Graham, Mrs. J. Chittick and Mrs. A. W. Hudson.

Mrs. Horace Kaye then sang "My Task," the favourite hymn of the founder, Mrs. Courtice.

Mrs. T. Corkery, a charter member, gave a resume of the history of the local association, founded in 1947 and told of some of the projects carried out.

The Rev. Horace Kaye conducted the devotional period.

Mrs. J. Kennedy reported for the school fair and the following conveners were selected: Tea tables, Mrs. G. Northey, Mrs. W. C. Grant; adult hobbies, Mrs. T. Corkery, Mrs. A. O'Donnell; children's hobbies, Mrs. H. E. Gastle, Mrs. T. E. M. Last; home baking, Mrs. S. R. Henderson, Mrs. C. V. Coons; candy, Mrs. E. Orr, Mrs. B. Hall; fish pond, Mrs. T. Westall, Mrs. R. Welsford; ice cream, Mrs. R. Harding, Mrs. T. Payton; movies, M. Paterson; fashion show, Mrs. W. O'Brien; publicity, Mrs. J. Keller, Mrs. A. Kingdon.

The attendance prize was won by Miss Kidd's room and refreshments were served by the mothers of Miss Beavis' room, convened by Mrs. Fred Kemp.

Judge Cautions Kitchener Jury

KITCHENER (CP)—Mr. Justice J. L. Wilson, hearing a manslaughter charge against Joseph M. Finnegan of Guelph, Wednesday cautioned the jury against giving undue weight to evidence of use of alcohol.

The charge arose from a traffic accident Oct. 11 in which Mrs. Lena Leader of Guelph was fatally injured.

When court adjourned, Mr. Justice Wilson asked the jury to "keep the main issue in mind." Those main issues were "the kind of driving he was doing at the time of the accident," and "whether there was a high degree of negligence."

He said that in evidence so far there had been "much talk" of alcohol.

Chief Thomas Livingstone of Waterloo township police said he questioned accused after the accident. He "only mumbled and wasn't understandable," the chief said.

Intend Keep U.S. Out Of Indo-China War

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Eisenhower said Wednesday every move U.S. government takes with respect to aid to Indo-China is carefully calculated to keep the United States from getting involved in a hot war there.

The president told a press conference he could not conceive of a greater tragedy than for the U.S. to get involved in an all-out war there or anywhere.

Eisenhower made the statements after Senator John Stennis (Dem. Miss.) voiced fear that the sending of American technicians to help French union forces in their fight against communists in Indo-China might lead to U.S. involvement in the fighting.

Hospitals Get Grants

TORONTO (CP)— The Ontario government Wednesday announced special grants totalling $225,000 to two hospitals to assist in construction projects. The Lord Dufferin Hospital at Orangeville receives $75,000 and the St. Catharines General Hospital $150,000.

NINE-YEAR-OLD Raymond Badger, of Weston, Ont., was today selected as the 1954 Timmy to represent the thousands of crippled children in Ontario during the forthcoming Easter Seal Campaign which will be held from March 18 until April 18. The campaign, which is sponsored by over 190 service clubs associated with The Ontario Society for Crippled Children, has an objective of $500,000 for the province.

RAYMOND BADGER, chosen as "Timmy" symbol of Easter seals campaign in aid of crippled children, beams proudly at his hockey hero, Ted Kennedy, captain of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

1954 Timmy, Fair Swimmer Plays Goal For School Team

Raymond Badger of Weston, Ontario, a nine-year-old youngster who doesn't let a cripple's brace stand in the way of enjoying life as a schoolboy who gets into everything that's going on, has been chosen as (Ontario's) Timmy during the forthcoming Easter Seal campaign.

As Timmy, young Ray will represent all the thousands of handicapped youngsters in Canada for whom the campaign, sponsored by the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, will seek $500,000 between March 18 and April 18. Associated with the Society will be 195 service clubs scattered across the province.

Ray is the eighth youngster honored by being selected as Timmy since the Society started is annual campaign in 1947 with one of its young proteges as a symbolic leader. Through the Weston-Mount Dennis Rotary Club, Ray was brought to the attention of the Society, and the club paid for two lengthy stays at the Hospital for Sick Children, bought him his brace and two pairs of special shoes, and sent him away each of the last two summers for a vacation at Blue Mountain camp, one of five crippled children's camps owned and operated by the Society.

More than two years ago Ray's hip began bothering him and an alert family doctor diagnosed the trouble as Legge-Perthes disease, a bone condition which can become very serious if unattended. Today Ray wears a brace which relieves the hip of his weight while it is mending, and some day, it is hoped, he will be able to abandon the brace entirely.

Ray is a big boy for his years, 5 feet 3 inches tall. He is a grade four student at Meloyd Road public school and, according to his teacher, is an above average student. He is an avid sports fan, and follows the Maple Leafs hockey team religiously. He is looking forward eagerly to the annual sportsmen's dinner which preludes the Society's annual appeal, because then, he hopes, he will meet most of his favorite athletes. He takes part in some sports himself, despite his leg brace, and plays goal-tender for his team in the school soccer league. He is a fair swimmer and last year at Blue Mountain Camp passed his beginner's tests and has completed half of the junior's which he expects to finish this year. His favorite hobbies are woodcarving, collecting matchbox covers and watching TV.

Ray is confident that he won't wear his brace for very long, because he is firmly determined to be a soldier when he grows up. He takes considerable kidding from his father, Leslie Badger, a service department specialist with the Mall Tool Company. Mr. Badger was in the navy during the war, finishing his service as an antisub instructor.

"Ray's a good, keen youngster," says Mr. Badger and Mrs. Badger echoes his attitude. "He has never complained and he gets along fine with all the family, an older brother and three younger sisters. We're very proud that he is to be Timmy this year."

The next big thrill in Ray's life will come Feb. 18 when he will be a head-table guest at the [illegible] a-plate sports celebrity dinner in Toronto. The dinner, sponsored by the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association, is in aid of crippled children.

At the head table, Ray will sit with such sports notables as Cyclone Taylor, Frank Boucher, Eddie Shore, John Ross Roach, Tris Speaker and Tommy Burns.

MINARD'S "KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

Howe Cautions Workers Watch Wages

OTTAWA (CP) — Acting Prime Minister Howe Wednesday cautioned farm implement industry workers to be careful that wage demands do not help to price the industry's products out of competitive markets.

Mr. Howe was speaking to a delegation of workers seeking federal measures to relieve unemployment in farm implement production in such Ontario centres as Toronto, Hamilton, Brantford and Smiths Falls.

He also expressed the view there is no short-term prospect of the industry regaining its post-war peak, and he advised displaced workers to seek jobs in other industries.

Production of farm implements is entering a buyer's market, Mr. Howe said, and wages were a factor in determining whether Canadian output could be sold abroad.

"I think the industry can help itself by seeing that costs do not soar so much that you are put out of business in export markets," he said.

"We are prepared to do what we can," Mr. Howe said, "but let's not fool ourselves that the government can put the industry back where it was in 1952."

Mr. Howe agreed that both wages and profits have to be watched. "But now I'm talking to the people concerned with wages. I talk tougher to those concerned with profits."

Won't Sell Surplus

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks announced Wednesday U.S. government will not allow the sale of government stocks of surplus farm products to Russia or her satellites.

Difficult Year Seen Facing West Germany's Shipyards

BONN (OFNS)—News from Lloyd's Shipping Register that West Germany was last year the world's second largest shipbuilding country has not evoked such self-congratulations here as might have been expected. While the German shipyards are obviously pleased that the 1953 record output of 633,904 gross registered tons exceeded for the first time—and by a large margin—the 1938 figure, they view the future with considerable misgivings.

For the most part in fact, the 1953 output is due to the fulfilment of orders placed in the Korea war "boom year" of 1951. Following the removal of Allied restrictions on German shipbuilding, this was the first year that the industry really got under way. Yards, then still empty compared with those of foreign competitors, could offer most attractive delivery dates to customers from abroad. Orders came flooding in, and considerable financial support from the Federal Government was granted the shipyards both to help them meet export orders and rebuild the home merchant fleet.

PICTURE ALTERED

Since then the picture has altered greatly. Fully committed facilities and temporary steel and labour shortages forced shipyards to retard delivery dates, which meant losing foreign orders to competitors abroad. Higher prices of steel-plate wiped out the costing advantages over British shipyards that low wages gave to Germany. And the slackening in demand for shipping which has become common the world over since the end of fighting in Korea, has thrust Germany into fierce international competition on terms which are by no means as favourable as many of Germany's competitors would depict. The boom days are over.

Last year new orders, both home and foreign, fell to less than a quarter of the 1952 total. In October, 1953 Dr. Krutzfeldt of the Association of German Shipyards told me in Hamburg there was already a slump among the small shipbuilders. And during the past twelve months the only major foreign order placed with the industry as a whole is the contract recently negotiated between Howaldt's of Kiel, and Russia for a number of fish-processing vessels of 3,000-tons apiece.

NO COMPENSATION

A few of the larger German shipyards may be secretly relieved at the falling-off of orders, since reduction of pressure on the ways will again enable them to offer more favourable delivery dates. But the shortage of orders from abroad is in any event far less menacing to the industry than the fundamental financial situation at home. West German shipping firms emerged from the war with 120,00 gross registered tons left of the pre-war total of more than four million tons; and no capital. There was no form of war insurance or war compensation to recoup the firms' losses. In some case, shortage of capital forced yards to forsake foreign orders on the grounds that they could not accept the long terms of credit requested. As a result, considerable amounts of public funds had to be advanced by the Federal Government to put the industry on its feet again.

Of the 2,000 million deutschmark (just over £166 million sterling) which has been invested in shipbuilding since the war, only 25 per cent has come from the industry's own resources and the German capital market. More than 40 per cent has come from government funds and other official loans. Certain tax benefits end on December 31, 1954 under the provisions of the Finance Act of 1950; and Herr Schaeffer, the federal finance minister, has offered no hopes that the tax benefits will be renewed next year. On the contrary, the shipbuilders' expectations were abruptly shattered by an article in the Christmas number of "Hansa," the shipping periodical, in which Herr Schaeffer told the industry that in future it must look to the capital market for any further financing.

SEEK NEW AVENUES

"I hold it to be impermissible," he said with some acerbity, "that any new avenue should be explored to provide the shipyards with new orders, or to enable shipowners to replace their obsolete ships and further extend their lines." He thinks the West German fleet can well stand on its own feet again.

The industry, as represented by Professor Rolf Stoedter, president of the Association of German Owners, called Herr Schaeffer's ideas "pure illusion." And Herr Stoedter added the ominous warning that with the end of government assistance, the yards "threaten to come to a complete standstill."

The impression here is that German resourcefulness will not permit any large-scale recession in the shipping industry. Nor can one exclude the possibility that Herr Schaeffer will be forced to relent and incorporate some new benefits for shipbuilding in his "great tax reform" scheduled for 1955. But in the meantime, the industry has difficult times ahead.

SMOOTHER THAN A FLYING CARPET—Here's one Indian who's not concerned with flying carpets. He is learning how to operate a C-119 "Flying Boxcar" at Hagerstown, Md. The Indian government has ordered a number of the planes from American manufacturers for their air force.

Plasma Flown From BC Saves Life Of Bleeding Boy

FORT WILLIAM (CP)—Six-year-old Brian Hickman smiled and played with toys on the covers of his hospital bed Wednesday. There was nothing to indicate that 24 hours before he was bleeding to death.

Above his right arm hangs a bottle containing anti-haemophiliac plasma. It was rushed 1,900 miles by plane from Vancouver to help Brian's non-clotting blood to clot and thus stop the nosebleed that endangered his life.

Brian is resting comfortably. His nose isn't bleeding any more. His mother, who lives at Bowsman, Man., was coming up to see him after arriving by train following receipt of the news his life was in danger.

FLY IN THREE BOTTLES

Three bottles of the special plasma were flown into Fort William early Wednesday following an emergency appeal to the Red Cross by Dr. R. C. Browne, the boy's physician.

Brian, according to Dr. Browne, is known as "a true bleeder." For the last two to three weeks he has suffered severe nosebleeds. The bleeding could not be controlled by ordinary methods in spite of numerous transfusions.

Brian has been staying with Mrs. Hickman's mother, Mrs. C.H. Kilbank of Fort William, for the last five years. His father is a farmer at Bowsman, but he was left in the care of his grandmother because there are no hospital facilities in the Bowsman area.

The Hickmans have three other children, two boys and a girl.

BASINGSTOKE, England (CP)—The British Army plans to spend £2,000,000 on purchase of mechanical moving and lifting equipment. Gen. Sir Ouvry Roberts said the machines are necessary to save manpower in army warehouses.

MP Pay Raises Don't Cause Senate Ripple

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliamentary pay raises, a controversial issue in the Commons, stirred only a procedural ripple in the 102-member Senate.

The upper chamber Wednesday approved the principle of a bill increasing parliamentary pay to $10,000 from $6,000. The measure now needs only final approval and royal assent to become law. Second reading was given without opposition in 31 minutes. In the Commons the bill met a stormy passage at every stage since its introduction Jan. 26.

Little debate followed the explanation of the bill's provisions by Solicitor-General Macdonald, government leader in the Senate. However, Senator Norman P. Lambert (L—Ontario) was ruled out of order for reading remarks made last week by Prime Minister St. Laurent favoring equal pay raises for senators and members of the Commons.

Senator Wishart Robertson, Senate speaker, said members cannot refer to debates in the Commons. It was a long-established practice.

Senator Lambert said he assumed he had the unanimous consent of the Senate to depart from this rule but Senator John T. Haig, Progressive Conservative leader, objected and said he refused his consent.

ALREADY FINISHED

However, Senator Lambert had completed reading Mr. St. Laurent's remarks when Senator Roberton ruled him out of order and second reading was given without further discussion.

Senator Macdonald said the indemnity has been $4,000 a session since 1920. It now would be boosted by $4,000. In addition, members of the Commons receive a $2,000 tax-free expense allowance and senators an equal sum on which they pay tax.

He said that the sessions of Parliament have lengthened since 1920. It was true the Senate did not sit as many days as the Commons but the length of the session was the same for both.

Members of both chambers had to remain in Ottawa unless they lived near enough in the capital to go home on week-ends.

Under the bill, parliamentarians will receive $8,000 a year in monthly instalments. Formerly, the $4,000 indemnity was paid for each session—twice if there were two sessions in one year. The government has said there will be no change in the $2,000 expense allowance.

Senator Macdonald said the penalties for absences will be $60 a day for each day of absence after 21 days compared with $37.50 after 15 days at present.

Sheep Losses Not Problem

TORONTO (CP)—W. P. Watson, Ontario livestock commissioner, told the Ontario Sheep Breeders' Association Wednesday it is well backed by legislation to deal with the problem of sheep losses from roving dogs.

"Since there are a lot more dog owners than there are sheep owners, I am surprised that we haven't been accused of extending privileges to sheep men with respect to the disposal of dogs," he said.

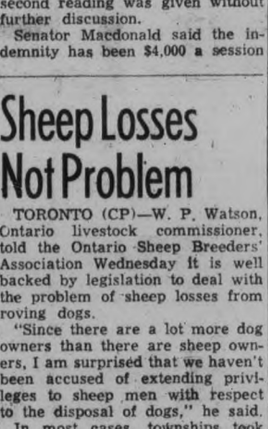
In most cases, townships took in more money from dog taxes than they paid out for sheep killed by dogs. Last year, of the 8,592 flocks in 305 Ontario townships, 1,744 had been attacked and 3,744 sheep killed. Compensation paid to sheep owners totalled $107,583.

Given Extra 2 Years On Assault Charge

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Henry Elliott, 24, Wednesday was sentenced to an extra two years imprisonment on the last of 18 charges laid against him after a series of break-ins and one shooting last fall.

On the charge of assault with attempt to rob, Elliott pleaded guilty and had two years added to the six to which he was previously sentenced.

Elliott previously was found guilty of shooting up a farm house with a sten gun and trying to get an auto from another farmer.



SLAIN — Maxwell Bodenheim, 64 (above), famous novelist of the 1920's, and his wife, Ruth, 35, were found murdered in their New York City apartment. Police have sent out a 13-state alarm for Harold Weinberg, alias Joseph Greenburg, 25, who is a suspect in the double-killing.

"I tried them all— and went back to MONARCH FLOUR

By actual comparison it proves best for all home-made cakes and pastries," says Mrs. R. V. Vanderspek of Guelph.

"When I first started housekeeping here in Canada, three years ago, I asked friends and neighbours which flour they used for non-yeast baking. They recommended Monarch Cake and Pastry Flour, and gave me very good reasons for their preference.

"So, I tried it—and was delighted with the flakiness of my pastries, and the tender lightness of my first Canadian-made cakes. Curiosity prompted me to try other kinds of flour, but each new baking experience only gave me further p. of that Monarch has no equal.

"As my friends had explained, Monarch Cake and Pastry Flour is specially milled from soft Ontario wheat, and that's why it's perfectly suited to get the very best out of non-yeast recipes. It certainly does, every time. I know. I buy it regularly now!"

New Proposal Submitted To Miners At Timmins

TORONTO (CP)—Labor Minister Daley said Wednesday a proposal for settling the strike of 300 miners at Preston East Dome mines will be submitted to the men at Timmins.

The minister said the plan was submitted to him at a meeting with company officials and the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), representing the workers.

William Mahoney, assistant national director of the union, said the proposal had come from the company. The union committee had not accepted it, but would submit it to a membership meeting without recommendation.

CONSIDERED SOON

The proposal will possibly be submitted for the miners' consideration tonight.

Meanwhile, miners at the Delnite mine at Timmins voted unanimously to accept terms of a settlement recently signed between management and the United Steel Workers.

Strikes now have been settled at Hollinger Consolidated, McIntyre, Porcupine, Coniarum, Aunor, Hallnor and Delnite mines.

An eighth mine, Broulan Reef, still is officially on strike, although most employees are on the job following a back-to-work movement which began last November.

Scolds Church For Not Living Up To Theory

LONDON (CP)—Canon L. J. Collins, chancellor of St. Paul's cathedral, says the church is losing the confidence of Africans because it fails to practise its theoretical opposition to racial discrimination.

Canon Collins told his congregation that the church, although it identifies itself with the just claims of Africans, tends to adopt a "white man's attitude."

"The church as a whole has declared itself opposed to every form of racial discrimination.

"But however commendable these pronouncements might be, the African will really judge our integrity not by what we say but by our behavior towards him, and our response to his aspirations."

He said the "acid test" for churchmen lay in their answer to the question of mix marriage.

"Do we boggle at giving an answer to those who think they clinch the matter with the question, 'How would you like your daughter to marry a black man?'"

"If we believe that all Christians are members of the body of Christ, how can we oppose a mixed marriage between Christians, whatever may be said about marriages between non-Christians."

GAY BLADES—The Navy will once again be full of gay blades now that orders have restored the sword as an accessory to officers' uniforms. Strictly ornamental, the swords were laid aside when World War II started. Carmen Borges inspects a large shipment of hand-made swords at a New York factory, which has been flooded with orders as a result of the new regulation.

Nova Scotia Develops Own Tartan

HALIFAX (CP) — Pretty soon any native of Nova Scotia, however remote from Scottish ancestry, will be able to claim a tartan of his or her own.

A new tartan, designed in the province and accepted as official for Nova Scotia by the provincial government, will soon be registered with the Scottish heraldic office of the British government.

The tartan itself reflects the life and nature of the province which early settlers named New Scotland and which today boasts more Gaelic linguists than Scotland itself.

The background shows the October blue of the sky and the light and dark greens of the evergreen and deciduous trees of Nova Scotia.

Across this background runs a line of white for the surf; a gold line for the royal charter and a red line to represent the lion rampant of the Nova Scotia coast.

The tartan was designed by Mrs. Douglas Murray, a native of Crewe, England, now living at nearby Jollymore. Once it is registered and copyrighted, manufacturers are expected to start production of several items.

Clowns Less Imaginative But Everday Is Circus Day

By BILL BOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW (CP) — Every day is circus day in Moscow.

Acrobats, trained dogs and birds, Cossack riders on charging horses, child musicians and dancers provide the entertainment that thrilled an eight-year-old Russian boy who accompanied me to one performance, even though it lacked such Canadian attractions as lions, tigers and elephants.

There are three performances every day of the year, two matinees for children, who must be accompanied, and an evening show for adults.

RESTRAINED CLOWNS

Clowns cavort about the one ring in the brick and stone circus building. They are not as imaginative as those seen in Canada, limiting make-up to false noses and wigs and wearing costumes that are largely a take-off on ordinary attire.

The acrobats, however, are outstanding, better than any I have seen anywhere else in the world. Russian-speaking parrots join parakeets in spinning miniature merry-go-rounds and performing other tricks. There is a magician, too, but his magic is mediocre. Costumed dogs dance, box and jump over hurdles.

Music and dance routines by 40 children, all under 12, made up the second half of the circus program.

CHILDREN'S BAND

The ring was set up to resemble a shooting agllery. At the back, on a tiered stand, was the band, all children dressed as teddy bears, bunny rabbits and billy goats. Other children, in front of them, were the "targets" who broke into dance routines when "hit" by pellets from air rifles manned by two young marksmen.

Half-way through the program the marksmen went to bed, the lights went out and their dreams were acted by the targets and other children wearing luminous costumes.

The whole performance lasted about 45 minutes and the accompanying musicians played without a sheet of music or a conductor.

Pearson Takes Vacation

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson left Wednesday night for a 10-day vacation in the United States, his first holiday of that length in four or five years. He and Mrs. Pearson fly first to New York and then continue on to Florida.

Saved From Fumes

GUELPH (CP) — Mrs. Abella Reid Wednesday saw Mrs. Kay Bolton collapsed on the latter's back porch. Mrs. Reid went into the house and found Mrs. Bolton's young daughter, Joanne, semi-conscious on the floor. Firemen said mother and daughter were overcome by gas fumes from a furnace. Both were revived.

Spanish Police Arrest Wanted Man

IRUN, Spain (Reuters)—Spanish police Wednesday arrested a man wanted by British police on a charge of strangling an 11-year-old girl.

Police here stated they were holding a Briton named William Sanchez de Pina Hepper on instructions from British police.

A murder warrant was issued in that name by British police today following an international manhunt.

The girl, Margaret Spevick, was found strangled in the apartment of the 62-year-old artist last Sunday in Hove, English south coast resort town.

The girl, only child of a British government worker, had been visiting Hepper, a London neighbor and father of her closest playmate, while recovering from a broken arm.

Food Shortages Worsening Under Red Rule In China

By ROBERT FRANKLIN

HONG KONG (OFNS)—The food shortage now afflicting most of Communist China underlines the chief difficulty facing the Peking regime: how to meet heavy grain payments for imported industrialisation equipment and at the same time prevent the spread of domestic unrest resulting from deprivation.

This deprivation has already begun, with the next harvests many months off. Flour, the staple food of North China, is already rationed there. Cooking oil, used by every Chinese family in the preparation of almost all meals, is in short supply throughout the nation; in many areas, it is reported, adulterated oil is being sold; and all the signs point to a lean year for China's millions.

TIGHT CONTROL

There is no reason to believe that any serious threat to Communist control is implicit in the worsening food situation. Peking's control is secure, and steps are being taken to tighten political and economic controls to counter any dissatisfaction; however widespread. Although that there may be dissatisfaction can be judged from news filtering across the Hong Kong border from neighbouring Kwantung which tells of inferior-grade rice being sold in the country districts of that province, and piecemeal accounts which suggest that the food shortage in the interior is more severe.

China is short of food today not so much because of export commitments but because 1953 was a bad year, the result of floods, drought and unseasonable frosts. The amount of the 1953 grain production set aside for export was a small percentage of the total; but that percentage was lost.

WORSENING

Early in 1953 Peking officials were talking of a 9.1 per cent. increase over 1952 production; by mid-year estimates had been scaled down to six per cent.; in the last quarter Peking was asserting that it was still possible to equal 1952 production. But the most careful outside analysis indicates that the 1953 harvests did not equal those of the preceding year.

Meanwhile, earlier grain export commitments — and before the war China imported grains — were certainly increased as a result of the Sino-Soviet agreement signed last September after a year of negotiation. This provided for Soviet assistance in the completion of one hundred and forty-one projects in the industrial field by 1959.

It emerged, however, that all were to be paid for by the Chinese. Raw materials for industry are an important item in Russia's bill; but so are marketed grains. In addition China has donated the equivalent of more than £100,000,000 to North Korea, to be spread over the years from 1953 to 1957.

To meet export commitments and the food shortage at home, a "produce more, eat less" campaign has been under way in China for some months. And a new bond issue, to be subscribed by the end of March, has been floated. It it significant that more than half the amount of this issue is to be subscribed by private enterprise and merchants, less than one-third by the peasants, who earn more than eighty per cent. of China's national income.

Detroit Police Question Lotharp

SIMCOE (CP) — Detroit police Wednesday questioned Joe Glen Lotharp, 23-year-old Detroit man held here on a murder charge, about undisclosed offences at Detroit.

The Detroit officers first conferred with Inspector D. V. Whiteley of the Ontario criminal investigation branch. They did not announce the offences on which they sought information.

Lotharp and Jerry Simmons, 47, of Syracuse, N.Y., are charged with the murder of Bruce Beatty, 38-year-old service station operator. Beatty and his wife were found Feb. 3 beaten and bleeding in their station at Renton, four miles east of here. A blood-stained ax lay on a couch.

Beatty died soon after and Mrs. Beatty, 65, is in hospital at London in critical condition.

A MONTHLY SELECTION OF HELPFUL HINTS AND RECIPES

Recipes to please your man...

THE MAN YOU LOVE will love these tempting dishes—scrumptious fried chicken, onion rings, salad, toasty biscuit twists and a special cherry pie to end up a real man-appeal dinner! I have created these recipes for you in my test kitchens and they're sure fire! Provided you stick to the ingredients I have listed, particularly the Jewel Shortening. That's important if you want to make your pastry, biscuit mix and fried foods the best ever for that lucky man!

GOLDEN-BROWN CHICKEN

Pan-Fried in Jewel Shortening

2½ to 3 lbs. tender-grown Swift's Premium Chicken
½ lb. JEWEL Shortening for frying
½ cup butter
1 cup all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 tablespoon paprika
2 tablespoons water

Follow these simple directions and the chicken will just melt in your mouth. You'll love the rich, tempting goodness the Jewel Shortening gives it! In fact you'll want to use Jewel shortening for all your frying, as well as your baking. So here's the special Jewel recipe for old-time, pan-fried chicken:

Cut chicken into frying pieces. Rinse in cold water. Drain. In a heavy skillet heat shortening and butter, enough to make a half inch layer. Shake flour and seasoning in a paper bag. Put 3 or 4 pieces of chicken at one time into the bag. Shake to coat each piece thoroughly. Place chicken in hot fat, skin side down. Brown thoroughly. Turn. Brown the other side thoroughly. Add water. Cover the skillet.

Reduce heat and cook slowly about 35 minutes or until chicken is fork tender. Remove cover.

Let chicken cook about 5 minutes to crisp the crust. And there you are. You know, it's easy to cook fowl and meat properly if you have simple directions to follow. Especially cooking times. And that's just what you'll find in my Handibook of Meat Cookery. It tells you how to cook every kind of meat and fowl, and it contains exact, kitchen-tested cooking timetables. For your free copy of the Handibook of Meat Cookery, print your name and address, and send it, with one Jewel carton top to: Martha Logan, Swift Canadian Co., Limited, Toronto 9, Ontario.

Cherry Glaze Pie

for your King of Hearts

Yield: 1 deep 8-inch pie

½ cup NEW QUICK-MIX JEWEL Shortening
1½ cups sifted flour
1 teaspoon salt
5½ tablespoons water

Into sifted flour and salt, cut Jewel—the shortening that gives you the best results with the least effort and the least money. Use a pastry blender, fork, two knives or the finger tips, and blend until mixture is the consistency of coarse cornmeal. Sprinkle enough water gradually over flour mixture, blending with a fork until dry spots disappear. Place dough in waxed paper. Use paper to shape into a ball. Let rest 15 minutes.

Turn onto lightly floured board. Knead twice to blend thoroughly. Roll out about two thirds of dough lightly from centre to edges, keeping circular shape. Fit into pie pan. Make a fluted edge. Prick the crust thoroughly. This crust will be flaky and tender, thanks to New Quick-Mix Jewel!

Roll out remaining dough and cut into heart shapes with cookie cutter. Place on cookie sheet. Prick well. Bake both crust and hearts. Baking temperature: 450°F. Baking time (hearts): 8-10 minutes. Baking time (crust): 10-15 minutes.

CHERRY FILLING

1 tablespoon gelatine
1½ cups cherry juice
2 tins cherries (30 fl. oz.)
½ cup sugar

Drain cherries. If necessary, bring cherry juice measure to 1½ cups by adding water. Soften gelatine in ¼ cup of the cherry juice. Add sugar to cherry juice in saucepan. Heat to boiling point. Add softened gelatine and stir until dissolved. When cool and slightly thickened, add cherries and pour into baked crust. Top with pastry hearts. Hearts may be decorated with sweetened whipped cream if desired. And then you'll have the sort of pie that wins all hearts—and wins praises too. So write me about it! I'll give $100 for the best letter received before midnight, March 15, 1954, telling how Jewel helps you turn out flakier, more tender pastry. Send your letter, with your name and address and one Jewel carton top to: Martha Logan, Swift Canadian Co., Limited, Toronto 9, Ontario.

Can Walk Without Injury Across Red Hot Stones

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—An old legend is used by inhabitants of Beqa in the Fiji islands group to explain how descendants of an ancient chief can walk without injury across red-hot stones.

A party of Fijians have been demonstrating their ability in New Zealand. Their ceremony has become a religious ritual, and they perform only at intervals of four days.

According to the Fiji legend the chief of the village of Sawau many years ago was fishing for eels when he discovered a "little man," who pleaded for his life with the promise of great gifts.

The "little man" promised immunity from fire, and the chief put the offer to the test. They built a pit filled with stones, lit a great fire over it, and when the stones became white hot the chief and the "little man" walked over the searing stones without harm.

So the chief spared the life of the "little man," and the chief's descendants ever since have been fireproof from the ankles down.

The present fire-walkers brought their own stones with them from the islands, two tons of large boulders. In a typical demonstration here a fire was built in a pit containing the stones, and the Fijians tended it throughout the afternoon and evening.

As the stones became hot, some split, hurling chips of burning rock out of the pit.

CEREMONIAL GARB

As the time for the demonstration drew near they dragged off the embers with looped poles to the accompaniment of loud cries and chants. Then with apparent ease, 10 islanders in ceremonial garb walked into the pit and ran slowly over the red hot stones.

The crowd was even more excited than the Fijians at the spectacle and pressed closer until several were forced into the pit. Although wearing shoes, several were badly burned on the feet.

To finish their performance, the Fijians threw thick bundles of green leaves into the pit, rushed back in and sat down amid the steam and heat.

After the ceremony the feet of the performers were examined. They were covered in ash, but showed no sign of burning.

Prospects Of German Jews At Last Looking Brighter

FRANKFURT (AP)— Prospects of the 125,000 Jews now in West Germany are the brightest since the Nazis unleashed a reign of terror against them 21 years ago.

The Central Council of Jews in Germany estimates there were 600,000 Jews in Germany when the Nazis took over. Those who remained and survived are back in business and taking part in the country's social and cultural life.

There are 400 Jewish lawyers in West Germany. Three Jews are in the federal parliament. About 350 Jewish merchants own businesses. the Association of Jewish Trade reports. The Jewish Women's Association of Germany boasts 2,000 members. Almost 200 Jewish students are at German universities. A Jewish newspaper claims a circulation of 48,000.

The West German government pays compensation to Jews who suffered under the Nazis. Their confiscated property has been returned. They get preferential treatment for jobs and housing.

A government survey estimates 380,000 German Jews live abroad. They were among the thousands who fled Germany after "Crystal Night" Nov. 9, 1938, when stormtroopers burned Jewish shops, homes and synagogues. The less fortunate died in Nazi concentration camps.

Conspicuously absent from the Jewish scene today are children. For example, the government survey shows that of 250 Jews who live in Hannover, only 11 are children under 13. There are two between 14 and 19.

Snowy Owl Winter

Great White Bird Of Arctic Comes South Seeking Food

By HENRY BAKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — This is a "snowy owl winter," with the big, ghost-like birds of the Arctic migrating south in search of food.

Every four years the snowy owls are starved out of their tundra home by the disappearance of the lemming, an arctic rodent. Every four years the lemming virtually disappears in a plague or in mad migrations to the sea.

And in these bad years the snowy owls are forced southward, most of them to stay.

Some fly as far south as Texas, Georgia or southern California, feeding by day on mice and rats. A few have even turned up in Bermuda. Most of the migrants settle on the eastern coast of the United States or in the Great Lakes region.

STATELY FLIGHTS

James Baillie, assistant director of ornithology at the Ontario Museum of Natural History, says Ontario and Quebec observers this winter have spotted some of the biggest flights of the owls ever seen in this part of the country. In the Toronto area alone, 17 birds were sighted in one day around Christmas.

With five-foot wingspread and a froth of white feathers covering them from claws to beak, they're impressive creatures and often frighten superstitious people by their ghost-like appearance. Accustomed to the long Arctic night in the north, they see equally well by day.

In their flight south, some of them stop in farmlands of the Canadian provinces. Others continue to the open country of the middle Unite States.

Known as "garfant" to ornithologists, the snowy owl differs in several respects from his cousin, the horned owl. He has a completely rounded, smooth head; the horned owl, like most other types, has ear tufts. The garfant's lifespan is only five to 10 years.

AERIAL HUNTER

South of the Arctic, he feeds in the daytime. Though lemmings are his bread and butter dish, he won't pass up a hare or a fat ptarmigan. Shore birds of the north and wild ducks also are his prey.

Unaccustomed to humans, the snowy owls are ridiculously tame and are easy prey to wanton hunters.

In the winter of 1926-27, Mr. Baillie says, an estimated 1,500 birds were slaughtered in Ontario and Quebec.

Dr. C. H. D. Clarke, supervisor of wildlife, Ontario lands and forests department, says the birds are not protected by law anywhere in Canada. Audubon Societies in some U.S. states, however, have succeeded in getting protective legislation passed. Dr. Clarke doubted, nevertheless, if the snowy owl would ever become extinct.

G. Marshall Bartman, executive secretary of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists, said the federation which represents some 27 naturalist clubs across the province, has been trying for years to get protective legislation for the birds.

He said the owls are "in no way injurious to man—rather they are beneficial and of great interest to naturalists." Public support is needed, he said, to protect the beautiful, white birds of the north which some hunters prize as mantel-piece trophies.

Church Club Resumes With New Officers

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)—The U. R. Welcome club of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church reconvened in the church basement. A new slate of officers took over for a new term.

Bruce Grills presided, with Mrs. Stewart Hay as secretary. Mrs. Murray Meiklejohn read a passage of scripture and Mrs. Fred Rabethge was pianist for the hymns.

It was decided to hold a crokinole party and pie social at the next meeting. A committe was named to arrange to insure the church projector against any possible loss or damage.

Three films were shown after which sandwiches and refreshments were served.

Ocean Fertilizer

OSLO (CP)—A pilot plant for the extraction of potassium fertilizer from sea water has been completed by the Norwegian hydro in co-operation with a Dutch company. The pilot plant is being built near Amsterdam and if it proves feasible separate plants will be built in Norway and the Netherlands.

World's Economists Split On Free-Trade Decisions

By SUSAN STRANGE

LONDON (OFNS)—The United States is not the only country in which this is likely to be a year of decision in matters of foreign trade policy.

In Britain, in Europe and in the Commonwealth, a debate is now in progress whose final outcome will affect, for better or worse, the jobs and the bread-and-butter of millions of people in the years ahead. The issues in this debate are much less clear-cut than in the U.S. and there are no Randall Commissions (commission of foreign economic policy set up by President Eisenhower) to advertise and explain them. Indeed, there are strong reasons — particularly in official minds — for playing down the debate and postponing a final decision at least until it can be seen how many concessions to the world outside the U.S. are likely to be made by the U.S. Congress.

Nevertheless, the signs are multiplying that in the non-dollar countries, the division of opinion is now growing deeper and wider between the One-World and Two-Worlds school of thought in economic policy.

QUOTA-FREE SYSTEM

By One-World is meant those who, broadly speaking, hope for the eventual elimination of the barriers dividing the dollar area from the rest of the world; who are aiming at the kind of freely-trading, non - discriminating, quota-free and tariff-free system described so glibly in textbooks on economics and achieved so rarely, if ever, in practice; and United States is the economic who believe that so long as the giant among pygmies in the non-Communist world the attempt to build a separate system alongside the American economy is merely self-deception and doomed to disappointment.

By Two-World is meant those who regard the dollar problem as basically insoluble and who see for the non-dollar countries the need to combine together to make themselves as independent as possible of America.

On both sides, there are many variations and shades of opinion, and in each country the case on either side is differently presented.

In Britain this week the issue emerged with a new clarity in the course of the House of Commons debate on the Commonwealth Economic Conference at Sydney last month.

The government was under fire both from its own Empire-trade back-benchers and, on the other flank, from the Labor opposition. The accusation in both cases was that the Sydney Conference had failed to maintain the outer economic defences of the Commonwealth and Empire as an international mutual aid and benefit society. It had abandoned government bulk purchasing by returning trade in commodities such as wheat to private traders and thereby had taken from Commonwealth producers the guaranteed markets which had largely taken the place of Imperial Preference as the chief economic ties binding the Commonwealth together in an uncertain world. The criticism implied that the government was wrong in pinning its faith too firmly to the improbable utopia of One - World economics.

Earlier in the week, the issue had been presented in London in a slightly different form. At Westminster over the weekend, the European Movement held an unofficial economic conference at which the Two-World school held the majority position but came under fire from the One-World multilateral free traders.

The European Movement has long been committed to supporting the so-called Strasburg Plan which would unite Western Europe, the Commonwealth and European colonial territories in a Low Tariff Club discriminating, in effect, against the United States and the dollar exporter.

NOT INCOMPATIBLE

The majority line, reflecting in upside-down fashion the Sydney conference communique, was that some mutual aid between the members of "Big Europe" was not incomptaible with a general lowering of tariff and other barriers between the two worlds. This was hotly attacked by the free traders—who included most of the German delegation, some of the French, and the Canadian delegate, Dr. Robert Clark. They inconveniently argued that the "Big Europe" concept was essentially protectionist and was bound to weaken attempts to progress, through Gatt (the General Agreemen on Tariffs and Trade), towards a freer multilateral trade system.

How rapidly this debate, long dormant and disguised, will develop is hard, at the present time, to say. The growing conviction in Europe that the prospects are poor even for the fairly cautious trade liberalization proposals of the Randall Commission is certainly likely to hasten it. But should the prospects in the U.S. appear to improve on the expectations of European pessimists, the more likely is it that the governments of the Commonwealth and Europe will postpone the issue and keep ajar the door to One World.

Cheese Cloth, Fibre Glass Used In Plastic Car Body

WINNIPEG (CP)—A plastic auto body that won't dint when pounded with a heavy timber has been produced by a group of students at the Manitoba Technical Institute using cheese cloth, some fibre glass mats and liquid plastic.

The body—a snappy sports roadster in coral red—was mounted on a standard small-car chassis and placed on display in a Winnipeg department store. The weight of 12 men standing on the body causes no strain.

The builders are students in the institute's body repair class working under instructor Alex Tait.

To make a mould, the boys took six rear fenders from a metal scrap heap and shaped four fenders and door openings. A scrap hood helped provide the hood and two old door panels were cut to make the rear panel.

The students tack-welded the pieces together and braced them with angle iron.

To give a smooth, professional touch they plastered the inside of the mould and sanded it smooth. A coat of vibrin (liquid plastic) sealed the plaster and prevented chipping.

Most difficult job was to develop a "releaser" to prevent the plastic from sticking to the mould. This was made by mixing liquid plastic to a consistency like syrup.

Glass mats, tailored to fit the mould and dipped in vibrin, came next, followed by vibrin-dipped cheese cloth.

Two days later the mould was removed and after a standard body finishing with glazing putty, surfacer and lacquer the job was done.

The trim, fittings and bumpers were provided by a woodworking class under instructor John Redmond.

June Haver Interested In MacMurray

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — June Haver admitted today that she is dating no one else but Fred MacMurray, but said: "It's too early" to discuss marriage.

The MacMurray-Haver combination became the talk of Hollywood when they first started dating a few weeks ago.

Talk of a romance will increase when the two movie stars leave for the Brazilian film festival next Thursday. They will be in the Hollywood goodwill contingent that will also include Rhonda Fleming, Jeanne Crain, Irene Dunne, Edward G. Robinson, Jeannette MacDonald and Gene Raymond.

So far both are cautious about statements. "She's a wonderful girl to be with," MacMurray says. "I've known her for a long time, and I love her company."

"I'm not going with anyone else," says June. "Anything serious I can't say now. It's too soon."

TRAGEDY HIT BOTH

The pair met when they co-starred in "Where do We Go From Here?" in 1945. Since then both lives have been marked by tragedy. MacMurray's wife died last year after a lengthy illness.

Miss Haver's first marriage to musician Jimmy Zito ended in divorce. Friends believed she would marry Dr. John Duzik. She was hard hit when the young dentist died suddenly.

Feb. 8 last year she entered the Roman Catholic Sisters of Charity convent at Xavier, Kan. After nine months and three weeks as a novitiate she returned to Hollywood, saying she was physically unable to continue her religious training.

Miss Haver resumes her acting career next Monday. She will appear with Jack Carson, the comedian from Manitoba, in a radio theatre version of "Trouble Along the Way."

AWAITS DEATH—Neron Gaudreau, 60, member of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect and father of 12 children, lies in hospital at Montreal after refusing blood transfusions. Doctors said at first that Gaudreau had lost two quarts of blood in a haemorrhage and was in danger of death unless he received the transfusion, but his condition has improved since then. From his hospital bed Gaudreau told reporters that his religion forbade a transfusion.—(CP Photo).

Family Of Eight Live In Hearse

DETROIT (AP) — For three weeks, James Elmer Craft, 46, his wife, Elizabeth, 36, and their six children have been living in a hearse.

Craft reported today the entire family is tired of the hearse and would like to find a house.

The Crafts acquired the old hearse after they were evicted from their farm home in suburban Oakland county. They parked it in front of a friend's home and set up housekeeping.

The friend occasionally allows the family to cook a hot meal and clean up in his home. At other times, Craft and his wife feed their children, aged 2 to 15 years, cold sandwiches and milk.

Craft said he had been laid off from his job as a grinder in September when his employer went out of business. Since then he has supported his family by selling novelties.

FIVE IN A ROW—These five lambs tagging after their mother in a Michigan City, Ind., farmyard are unaware that they are rarieties. Howard McDonald, owner of the quints, said three were born on one day and two followed the next day. Quintuple births to sheep are a rare occurrence.

Continue Probe Of Plane Wreck

TROIS-PISTOLES, Que. (CP) — United States and Canadian air force investigators today continue their probe on the wreckage of a giant service helicopter in which three men plummeted to their death Tuesday.

A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday night that the three were killed accidentally when the twin-rotor USAF aircraft exploded in mid-air near this little town on the south shore of the St. Lawrence river.

The service investigators are accompanied by representatives of the company which manufactures the helicopter—the Piasecki S-21.

It was reported that one of the three men killed in the crash, William P. Blankin, identified by provincial police as an engineer, was checking performance of the craft.

1,500 Buildings Razed In Fire

BALTIMORE (AP)—Fifty years ago this week a flaming hurricane in the space of some 30 hours devoured 1,500 buildings, gutted an area of 140 downtown acres and caused nearly $150,000,000 in damage.

Twenty banks were smashed in the "great Baltimore fire." Eight hotels, nine newspaper plants and nine transportation offices were destroyed. The clothing manufacturing centre was reduced to ashes, wharf facilities were wrecked and big chunks of the wholesale, jobbing and produce districts were wiped out.

A burnt district commission was formed and when its work was finished, 12 streets had been extended or widened, a plaza had been established on the west side of the court house and modern docks and piers replaced ancient wharf facilities.

So marked was the improvement that today the only complaint you hear about the "great fire" of 50 years ago is "it didn't burn far enough."

Withdraw Murder Charges Against 2 Indian Sisters

COCHRANE (CP) — At a preliminary hearing conducted in Cree and English through an interpreter, the crown Wednesday night withdrew murder charges against two Indian sisters in connection with the strangling of a newborn infant and proceeded with a charge against the sisters' stepfather of seducing one of the girls.

Assistant crown attorney Wilfred Dupont asked that the charge against the sisters, Lottie and Mary Theresa Sutherland, aged 18 and 20 respectively, be dismissed for lack of evidence. They were accused in connection with the death of an infant last November near Moosonee at the souther tip of James bay.

The stepfather, Emilien Sackney, 42, pleaded not guilty to the seduction charge.

Lottie Sutherland said she went on a trapline trip from last February to last April with Sackney, her brother, Peter 16, and her stepbrother, Joseph Sackney, 17. She said all four slept in the same tent and she permitted her stepfather to have intercourse with her because she was afraid of him. She said she became pregnant and gave birth to a child late last October.

SHARED BLANKET

Peter Sutherland and Joseph Sackney said that on the trapline they each had a blanket while Lottie shared the stepfather's blanket.

The stepfather said the statements were untrue and he accused the stepbrothers of trying to get him into trouble.

Sackney said under cross-examination that another man came to the camp while they were on the trapline.

Sackney, who conducted his own defence, said he would prefer to be tried in his hometown of Moosonee. Asked if he had any defence witnesses, he said he would like to call his wife, whom he married nine years ago, and two friends but could not afford to bring them to Cochrane from Moosonee.

Mr. Dupont said:

"In the interests of justice and of the accused, the crown will call these people as witnesses."

The trial was then adjourned for a week.

Canadian Army Looking For Better, Bigger Tanks

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—The army is looking for better, and possibly bigger, tanks even before it completes its conversion to the 52-ton British Centurions.

The estimates for the 194-55 fiscal year, tabled in the Commons last week, show an appropriation of $26,064,000 for tanks and armored fighting vehicles, a $8,254,000 increase over the amount earmarked for such equipment in the year ending March 31.

The army may buy a later model of the Centurion or the monster British Caernarvon, a new tank which has passed tests and is about the same size as the standard 70-ton tanks in the Russian army. British tanks are considered the best available.

The Canadian army has been gradually replacing its United States Sherman tanks with British Centurions and delivery on orders placed about a year ago are expected to be completed in March or April.

SHERMANS IN KOREA

The 1st Canadian infantry brigade in Germany, is equipped with Centurions, but the infantry brigade in Korea still has Shermans, now considered outmoded. The Lord Strathcona's Horse of Calgary provides the tank units for both brigades—D squadron in Germany and A squadron in Korea. A squadron is to be relieved in March by the Royal Canadian Dragoons of Petawawa, Ont.

At home, Canada's two armored regiments, Lord Strathcona's and Dragoons, are equipped mostly with Shermans, but they also have some 65 Centurions.

Each regiment requires about 85 tanks and others are needed for training and reserve.

The Centurion, which mounts a 20-pounder and travels 20 to 30 miles an hour on the flat, is cheaper than the Sherman, which carries a 17-pounder. The U.S. Army has 500 Centurions on order.

DIABETIC THREAT

Diabetic sufferers are usually between 40 and 60 years old, and overweight, when symptoms first appear.

Manitoba Farmer Gave Start To Rust Resistant Wheat

MINNEDOSA, Man. (CP)—The 15-B rust resistant Selkirk wheat might never have been developed had it not been for the sharp eye of a Manitoba farmer.

In 1929, Malcolm S. J. McMurachy of McConnell, discovered by accident one stem of wheat in his fields that was not covered with rust. He plucked the stem and, crushing the head, found 70 kernels which he put away in an envelope.

In the spring of 1930, McMurachy found mice had eaten all but 11 of the 70 kernels. Despite the disappointment, he planted the remaining kernels and each plant responded to personal care and produced from three to seven stools.

McMurachy planted kernels of the new strain each spring thereafter and was asked to forward samples to Ottawa. These proved inconclusive and seemed to drop out of sight said the McConnell farmer.

Then scientists, seeking a grain which would resist 15-B rust, brought back the McMurachy kernel. It was eventually bred and blended into the Selkirk.

Next year 110,000 bushels of Selkirk will be seeded in Manitoba, and although Mr. McMurachy, now 75, has not made a cent from his contributions, he is proud of the part he played in the production of the new wheat.

Vancouver's Honey Blonde Makes Hit On Britain's TV

by MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Fifteen theatre agents telephoned Vancouver's Wendy Martin after the honey-blonde soprano made her debut on Britain's home television program.

"I was the most unpopular person in my hotel that day," she said with a laugh. "They were trying to cope with frozen pipes when most of the calls came through."

The diminutive Canadian singer with a strong soprano voice, made her first TV appearance as Britain suffered the coldest spell in a decade. The TV critics liked her voice and the telephone calls started after Miss Martin admitted to a reporter that she had no agent.

TAKING HOLIDAY

Till then Wendy, blue eyed and 20, had been too busy holidaying on the continent to worry about agents. After a summer season singing the lead in "Desert Song" at Vancouver's "Theatre Under the Stars," Wendy came to Britain last October with her mother for a late holiday.

Almost immediately the slim, good-looking youngster was asked to appear in a film made here for the opening of Vancouver's new TV station and featuring several Canadian actors and actresses, prominent in London's theatre circles. She also made a TV film in aid of Canada's polio fund, singing a duet with Edmund Hockridge, also of Vancouver.

Now Mrs. Martin has returned to Canada and Wendy is seriously attacking the problem of finding theatre work here. For some time she has been studying under old-time opera star Maggie Teyte, and thinks she'd like to "try" opera.

OF TWO MINDS

But Wendy is still of two minds whether she wants to become a straight actress or singer. "I guess I'd like to be both," she said.

She's lucky enough to have private funds for tiding herself over emergencies, but she will not stay long unless she lands a theatre job that she likes. Miss Teyte leaves in April for a concert appearance in New York and Wendy will be without a teacher. She feels if she's not getting anywhere then, she'd be better off back in Vancouver.

Wendy is trying for singing and straight drama roles and is under consideration for a radio series for Canada, featuring stories about the RCMP.

HAT STYLES FOR 1954 SPRING

Small, Cheeky, Festooned and Feathered

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—The hat styles chosen by London's "top" designers for wear with the latest spring fashions are small, cheeky, festooned, feathered and tipped over the eyebrows.

There are tiny shells of feathers perched half-way down the forehead, upturned roses and water lilies with stalks spiking from the centre and scallops of feathers garlanded with floral twists.

With slick tailored suits conventional enough for any occasion you can wear a tiny cap of geranium petals pointing over the forehead like an elongated widow's peak. Or, if taste runs to bigger hats, there are shallow-crowned spotted linens and light - weight pastel straws with brims that touch the shoulders.

KEEP EYES OPEN

Fashion-conscious working girls who can't afford a couture suit or top-price hat are quick to note which shape of bonnet is worn with what new neck or shoulder line. Before Easter it will be possible to buy something similar at down-to-earth prices.

Two hats chosen by Scots-born Ronald Paterson, husband of Toronto's Stevie Stevenson, show the ultra-frivolity of styles worn with the latest dark town suits.

For a slim-skirted charcoal suit sporting one of the newest necklines, Paterson chose a shallow-crowned flame grosgrain hat with downward-curving brim encircled by a long fringe of matching osprey plumes. When the mannequin stood still the fringe covered her eyes like a veil.

A minute white linen pillbox with side swathe of ostrich feathers was also worn with a dark, classic suit.

ROYAL FASHIONS

Those wondering what the Queen will wear when she returns to Britain for warm weather social events might look at the hats worn with royal designer Norman Hartnell's spring and summer fashions. These were made by Claude St. Cyr, one of the milliners chosen to make hats for the Queen's tour.

For spring, Miss St. Cyr designed tiny straw caps trimmed with leaves and flower petals and every sort of feather. An aquamarine toque with under-the-chin veil curved over the hairline in leaves of silk jersey.

A trim town suit with cut-away neckline was worn with a curving half-hat of lily-of-the-valley flowers, its side curbe broken by a round hole that seemed to have as little purpose as the hole in a Henry Moore statue.

Another hat in the same show was a circular toque-bonnet of shining grass-green straw decorated with a single, long-stemmed red rose. The rose head bobbed around at least four inches from the face.

Collie-shaped short jackets were coupled with coolie hats, for fitted suits there were tiny sailors, bowlers, pancakes of flowers and feathers and pillboxes with devils' horns. A wild riot of colored hats was chosen to brighten the caramel to tobacco beiges that replace last year's greys.

Kinettes To Send Further Support To Italian Orphan

A most interesting evening was spent by the Kinette Club of Peterborough Tuesday at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club. It was an open meeting, and seven guests were introduced by their hostesses and welcomed by president Mrs. Cameron Craig. Grace was said by Mrs. N. Kelley preceding dinner.

Mrs. H. Powell gave a report and read a letter from Emma Mariani, the Italian orphan the Kinette Club has "adopted" through the Foster Parents Plan. The child's life is barren of so many things accepted by Canadians as a normal standard of living, that it was decided to send her additional funds, or boxes of food and clothing. Mrs. Powell will ascertain which course would be most feasible, and report further on this.

Highlight of the evening was an amusing report given by Mrs. W. Jones on the club's very successful January rummage sale. It resembled a Cornilia Otis Skinner monologue, and concluded with a poem "The Typical Rummage Sale" or "Who Sold Martha's Hat Will Always Remain a Mystery".

The entertainment committee presented an hour long color film "Canada at the Coronation". The film depicted Canada's part at the Coronation in interesting manner, featuring colorful red-coated Mounties, Canadian servicemen and statesmen.

The evening concluded with a practice for the stage show to be presented at the Kinette "Gentlemen's night" on March 11th.

Murphy-Airhart Marmora Rites

MARMORA (ENS) — With pink and white chrysanthemums and ferns on the communion table of St. Andrew's United Church the wedding was solemnized at 11 a.m. on Saturday of Evelyn Jean Airhart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Airhart of Deloro, to John William Murphy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Murphy of Marmora.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. K. J. Crawford. Wedding music was played by Mrs. H. C. Carlow. Before the service, Miss Edna O'Neill of Belleville sang "Because" and during the signing of the register, "The Wedding Prayer".

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was prettily gowned in white nylon tulle over taffeta, embellished with inserted tiered lace on the bouffant skirt. The fitted bodice was topped with a bolero of lace and she wore matching mittens. Her veil of nylon tulle was caught to a crown of pearls and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Bridesmaid was Miss Ella Tandy of Marmora, wearing a strapless gown of blue nylon topped by a lace jacket with matching mittens, and carrying yellow chrysanthemums. Flower girl was the groom's cousin, Judith Codlin of Lindsay. She was in pink organdy with matching headdress and carried a nosegay of pink rosebuds and mignonnette.

Mr. Andy Murphy of Port Hope was his brother's groomsman and Grant Airhart, brother of the bride, was usher.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. Her mother received wearing a gown of plum faille and a black crepe velvet hat and black accessories. Her corsage was of yellow tea roses. The groom's mother chose a gold bengaline gown, winter white accessories and corsage of yellow tea roses.

For a wedding trip to points in Western Ontario, the bride wore a navy and white two-piece suit, navy hat, gloves and shoes, white topcoat and corsage of red roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy will live in Marmora.

Plan Coffee Party Instead Of Tea, Organize Rental

Plans for a new venture in the form of a Springtime Coffee Party were made by the Trinity church Baby Band Mothers at their meeting Wednesday evening. This is to take place on the evening of April 28 in the Trinity Hall, and is to be instead of the afternoon tea held in the past.

It was also decided to organize a rental service for nursery supplies, during the business period over which president Mrs. Earle Wellman presided. Plans for the fathers' party at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club on March 5 were completed.

One new member, Mrs. A. D. Bell, was introduced.

Devotional theme was "Willing service". Scripture was read by Mrs. W. B. Gordon. Mrs. G. Jamieson gave a reading and Mrs. James Fraser led in prayer. The mission study story was told by Mrs. W. Evans. Reports from the WMS Presbyterial meeting were given by Mrs. A. Thompson, Mrs. D. Tanney and Mrs. Evans.

Guest speaker, Mr. Trevor Clarke, city lawyer, chose the topic "Introduction to Wills". He pointed out the importance of making a will and discussed some disastrous results of improperly drawn-up wills. A lively discussion of the subject followed.

Mr. Clarke was introduced by Mrs. D. Lillico and thanked by Mrs. O. Jamieson.

Delicious refreshments served by the Ashburnham group were enjoyed after the meeting.

Rural Woman's University Provided In WI Program

In these days of popular interest in "adult education", we might well take a look at a piece of adult education that has been going on for fifty-seven years — the educational programme of the Women's Institutes. Every month of the year some 1,000 groups of rural women in Ontario meet together in a home or a hall, and their programme is likely to relate to home economics or health or agriculture or education or citizenship. Along with this the Institutes have access to a government educational service that provides a pretty liberal education.

The extension services provided by the Women's Institute Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture are not intended for Institute members alone. They are for all rural women. The local Institute is the agency that sponsors the service, provides the hall or other place where a course is to be given and invites in all the women of the comunity.

And what do they learn? In earlier days extension courses were mostly in foods and cooking, sewing and home nursing. These subjects are still among the most popular. It seems, the better cook a woman is the more she wants to learn about it, so both experienced and inexperienced homemakers come to hear how to feed their families to keep them well, how to get their money's worth in buying food, how to have a variety of food the year round by canning or freezing, to get some new ideas for supper dishes or even meals. There is a course especially for young mothers on food for children; and a course that usually causes a good deal of amusement — "Your Food and Your Figure".

Education in clothing is not limited to sewing. There are courses in dressmaking and making clothes for children — a special service for young mothers; but the women also learn all about the new fabrics and how to buy clothes and the types of clothes most becoming to them, most suitable for the wear they have to give them.

Right along the lines of practical homemaking many women are adding to their own education by leading Girls' Homemaking Clubs. Last year, under the Junior Extension Service of the Women's Institute Branch, 5,594 Ontario girls in homemaking clubs were trained in foods and clothing and gardening and being good hostesses. County Home economists supervised the work and women of the community acted as local leaders.

A registered nurse teaches the women home nursing, general health education and how to safeguard against accidents. There are classes in home furnishing and all sorts of homecrafts from needlepoint and rug-making to leatherwork. A psychologist is in great demand for courses in family relationships, child guidance, understanding the teenager — and indeed to help women to understand themselves and why they sometimes act the way they do.

The homekeeping woman in the Women's Institute is very much aware that she has responsibilities outside her home, so at the women's own request the Government has provided courses in citizenship, cultural interests, public speaking, how to conduct meetings and in general how to be an efficient club woman.

When the Women's Institute extension service included only what were considered "practical" subjects it gave the rural woman what the city woman could get in a technical school. As the service broadened through the years it now gives the rural woman something in the nature of a university education.

Attitude Of Women Seems Correctly Gauged By Dior

By ALISON SETTLE

PARIS (OFNS) — Once again, M. Christian Dior has correctly gauged the attitude of women towards clothes. His new collection is a miracle of femininity, grace and what appears to be a complete simplicity, achieved by remarkably clever cut.

M. Dior would be horrified if told that he had debunked current fashion trends, for he is a gentle man with good manners. But that is exactly what he has just done. His sense of time and occasion has told him that the theme of ultra-smartness and artificiality has become out of touch with life as women live it today.

Clothes designed for just one part of the day he sweeps aside. He redesigns day clothes so that they are appropriate for any daytime hour. He bids women say goodbye to clothes elaborated with trimmings and details: weave, texture and colour of fabric must determine the cut and use. Only when party-going hours come, he suggests, should women change into silks, satins and chiffons embellished with the richest embroideries.

All this is at variance with most of the other dress houses in Paris which, meeting a period of great financial trouble and doubt, have broken away to offer a different line apiece. So far Jaques Fath has dominated the collections with eighteen-inch waistlines achieved (if indeed the normal woman can achieve them at all) through the firmly-whalebboned interior corseting of suits and dresses. His chief inclination is for dresses with stiffened bustle backs, to wear which the model girls must walk with a forward bend for balance. It is to be recorded that, however aritficial this line, it is being enthusiastically bought by American trade buyers.

Jaques Griffe sponsors Greek dresses with fullness of drapery cascading from the centre of the bust-line: other dresses are made like chemises bound with criss-them he associates navy-blue as slinky, figure - fitting clothes which break into circular flounces at finger-tip levels downwards. Pierre Balmain has so far best sensed the feeling of women in a collection which is fresh, feminine and beautiful, with suits neatly tailored and dresses corseleted above and below the waistline. He uses great richness of handwork and elaboration of detail which marks his models as right for the wealthy private client.

Dior says goodbye to princess dresses as not being supple enough nor yet young enough in looks for today. In their place he restores belts put at the natural waistline. Sailor collars which were shown last year by Lanvin and Balenciaga (and recently by Michael in London) also by Fath and Desses in Paris during the week, receive Dior's blessing in a big way. With cross cords. Jacques Heim offers a color, navy serge for dresses and navy pilot cloth for topcoats. Like Fath he uses a softened version of a man's tie under collars, but without the exaggeration of Fath, who has been witty at women's expense in making giant-sized cravats which fall to the skirt hem.

The Dior coats, mainly double-breasted, are straight-falling topcoats with set-in sleeves. He does not even mention skirt lengths in talking about his new fashions: for daytime wear they stand at about fourteen inches from the ground but rise to sixteen inches off-ground for softly circular short-skirted evening dresses.

In his little two-piece dresses, a gentle quiet version of the American "middy line" is given an inconspicuous belt. What appear to be schoolgirl dresses with pleated skirts and baggy backs above leather belts often turn out to be slim shoulder-strap models worn under a blouse-jacket. The Dior collection says goodbye to button-through dresses, and there he is at odds with other designing houses. Heim uses the button-through closing even with his flounced skirts. Fath shows button-through suits, dresses and even elaborate party gowns. Patou's new designer, Marc Bohan, ended his charming collection with a lace wedding gown buttoned through from neck to hem.

Schiaparelli joins with Dior in acclaiming simplicity. Most of her dresses are cut in princess shape but with a gentle, fluid line, free from all boning. Then she goes further than Dior and makes clothes innocent not only of belts but of buttons, hooks, or even zip fastenings. That this "magic freedom" does not alawys operate was shown by one model girl who had to run for the changing room when the elastic that held up her skirt gave way.

All houses combine to show exquisite flower prints. Both Dior and Griffe call these "English garden prints," and Dior honors the English vegetable garden by using Ascher of London's radish-print in red and green on silks.

Hi-Y Boys Study Dancing At After Four Hops In YM

Hi-Y boys of the YMCA are going to become accomplished in all the modern dances if the series of "After Four Hops" commenced Wednesday continues as planned.

Seventy-five junior collegiate students, girls and boys, gathered in the YM after school Wednesday for the dance arranged by the Senior Hi-Y Club. For a half hour they danced in the usual manner to recorded music with Dave Clark of CHEX as their master of ceremonies.

Then, Mrs. Sophie Zakos and Miss Helen Zakos began teaching them the "bunny hop." In a short time nimble feet had mastered the steps and were dancing so vigorously that Y members on the floor below thought an earthquake had struck, as they watched chandeliers swing and plaster tremble.

Next dance on the list is the Charleston, to which old-timers may take a more kindly attitude. The boys also have listed the tango, rumba and the Viennese waltz for future hops.

These dances are being held to raise money for delegates to attend the conference at Windsor next summer, and also to help in the service work at the Y.

DOROTHY DIX

Second Wife Wants To Find Job To Aid Her Fine Stepson

DEAR MISS DIX: Several years ago I married a divorced man who had one son. I have raised the boy from babyhood, and he looks upon me as his mother. He seldom sees his own mother and she has no particular affection for him. The boy is now 10, and we have no other children. We are not too well off financially, but our son has a decided talent for the piano and I'd like to do all I can to further it. Since buying a piano and giving him lessons would be beyond our present budget, I want to go to work. My husband says that anything I decide will be all right with him. My folks and my husband's, however, are providing the snag. They all think I'm very foolish to make this sacrifice and say that I'd be downright stupid to go into debt for the piano. They look upon music as a lot of nonsense. I have a fair musical background, so to me it's important to give the child whatever chance I can. Who is right?

Ella G.

UNSELFISH DEVOTION

ANSWER: Your long letter was one of the most heart-warming I've received in a long time and I wish I could print it all as a beautiful example of one family's co-operation. The boy's appreciation of your efforts on his behalf and his willingness to help you with home tasks, while maintaining high grades in school and practicing diligently on a borrowed piano, might be an inspiration to those endowed with more worldly goods than you have.

In view of the boy's attitude, his undoubted talent for music, and your husband's being agreeable to anything you decide, I heartily endorse your suggestion. Working for a time might be a sacrifice to you, but the reward will be great. In a couple of years the boy will be able to get after-school work himself, which will take care of the financial end. If his talent comes up to expectations, he might win a scholarship at a music school. Surely this is a goal worth working toward.

In the vent that he proves an average, rather than an exceptional student, he will at least have the satisfaction of being able to perform for his own, his friends' and, especially, your enjoyment. Some day we may see him on Godfrey's Talent Scouts. I hope so.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: After five years of married life, my wife has asked for a divorce, giving no reason other than that she wants to have a good time and is tired of being tire down. We have a four-year-old son. I've talked and talked to her, but she won't change her mind. Do you think I should get a lawyer to advise her, or do you think I should give her the divorce?

Peter L.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Since you know there is no other man it shouldn't be too difficult to make your wife see reason. A lawyer, or your minister, might help. But perhaps the most effective argument could come from you, not in words, but in deeds. Have you given her affection, sympathy when she was ill, and helped a bit around the house? Women need the security of being loved as well as needed; perhaps you have been lax in showing your love.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm a young bachelor with a good job. Recently, I met a girl to whom I was immediately attracted. She's 16 and going to school. Should I ask her for a date?

M. L.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Though you don't give your age, I assume from the tenor of your letter that you are too old to date a 16-year-old schoolgirl. Of course, the final decision rests on your respective temperaments, and her family's approval. But I think you should be dating girls of or near your own age.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Valentine Marble Cake For That Special Party

An innocuous little game you might suggest to your young people to play at their Valentine party is called matched hearts, unless they consider themselves too advanced for such innocent fun.

MATCHED HEARTS

Take all the hearts out of two pack of cards, or if you have four packs all the better. Lay the cards face downward on the table in no order, but not overlapping. Each player turns up a card and lays it on its back just where he found it. Suppose it is a jack. Leaving it there the player turns up another card which he hopes is another jack. If it is he picks up the two cards, scores one point and has another try. If the second card turned up is not a jack, he then must turn both cards downward again and the next person on his left takes a turn. Concentration is an asset in this game for the player with a good memory for the places and numbers of cards after other players have failed to score, of course, soon gains a few points.

After they have played their games you know very well you have to feed them. A white and pink marble cake with cherry-decorated topping might make a hit. What do I mean "might"?

VALENTINE MARBLE CAKE

The basic batter is white and calls for four egg whites.

Cream together until very light 2/3 cup soft shortening (or ½ shortening and half butter) and 1¾ cup sugar. Sift flour (preferably cake flour) and measure 3 cups and sift it with 3½ teaspoons baking powder and ¾ teaspoon salt. Sift this, about ⅓ at a time, over the butter-sugar mixture and stir in alternately with 1⅓ cups skim milk (or half whole milk and half water) and 2 teaspoons vanilla, until all of the flour mixture and liquid are used up. Stiffly beat 4 egg whites (½ cup) and fold them in. Pour 2/3 of this batter into generously buttered and lightly floured large square cake tin. To the remaining ⅓ of the batter add red vegetable coloring until it is a good strong pink. Pour this part of the batter here and there over the white batter in pan. Cut carefully through batter with knife several times for marbled effect, but do not scrape bottom of pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 40 to 45 minutes.

VALENTINE TOPPING NO. 1

(Fluffy white frosting is the basis of this.) Mix together in a saucepan 1 cup sugar, ⅓ cup water, ½ teaspoon cream of tartar. Boil slowly without stirring until syrup will spin a thread (243 deg. F. on candy thermometer). Saucepan should be covered during first 3 minutes to prevent sugar crystals forming. While syrup is cooking beat until very stiff 2 egg whites. When syrup comes to temperature pour it very slowly in thin stream into stiffly beaten whites, beating constantly. Add 1½ teaspoons vanilla. Beat until frosting will hold its shape. Add red vegetable coloring to tint it a delicate pink.

Spread on cold cake, making little mounds like nests around edge. Into centre of each mound drop a whole maraschino cherry, which has been well-drained.

VALENTINE TOPPING NO. 2

Make above fluffy white frosting and leave it white. To it add 1 8 drained maraschino cherries chopped finely. Spread on cake. Make a border at the outside edge of red cinnamon hearts, touching, or thinly sliced red gum drops. cup moist shredded cocoanut and

Papers Raise Sceptical Voices About Plan

LONDON (Reuters) — Western European newspapers raised a chorus of sceptical voices today over the new Russian proposal for a collective security treaty of European countries.

West Berlin papers bluntly called it "a great bluff," and even more significantly, at least one left-wing newspaper in Paris was inclined to agree.

The anti-Communist Franc Tireur chided that Foreign Minister Molotov had put the old slogan, "Americans Go Home," in an official text for the first time.

The paper was referring to a provision in the proposal that the United States be excluded from the pact except as an observer.

It commented, "One has to smile at the idea of making the Americans go back across the ocean while the Russians merely pull back (about 94 miles)."

U.K. COMMENT OPPOSED

British editorial comment was unfavorable, with two leading newspapers—the right-wing Daily Telegraph and the liberal-minded Manchester Guardian—seeing the proposal as an attempt to break the Atlantic Pact.

The London Daily Telegraph called Molotov's plan "his old, unacceptable demands for the dissolution of the North Atlantic treaty and the abandonment of the European Defence Community."

The Guardian suggested "more equality of sacrifice"—including Russian withdrawal, under supervision, from Poland, Romania and Hungary if British and American forces left the Continent.

CGIT Doings

HAVELOCK

HAVELOCK (ENS)—The CGIT met Monday evening in the Sunday school room of the United Church.

A sing song with the leader, Mrs. R. G. Newman at the piano opened the meeting.

The president, Doris Newman presided for the worship and business periods.

It was decided to cancel the Valentine party which was planned at the last meeting. Plans were made to make a donation to the Missionary and Maintenance fund of $5. The meeting closed with taps.

During the period between the last two meetings, the Rev. R. G. Newman and Mr. B. Jewell took the CGIT members and their leader to Peterborough to see "The Robe". On returning home they were entertained by Mrs. Jewell at her home. The Rev. R. G. Newman was the accompanist for a sing song. After lunch was served, Jean Kennedy thanked Mr. and Mrs. Jewell for the lovely evening. Those who went to Peterborough were: Doris Newman, Ruth Newman, Marilyn Quinlan, Margaret Ann Stevenson, Jo-Ann Kennedy, Jean Kennedy, Evelyn Stevenson, Fern Emery, Shirley Jewell, Anne Hubbel, Terry Carleton.

Deny Queen's Visit To Ceylon Cancelled

LONDON (AP)— Rumors circulated in Colombo, Ceylon, that Queen Elizabeth may not visit the island on her Commonwealth tour were denied flatly at Buckingham Palace today. Fatigue of the Queen apparently gave rise to the story, but the palace pointed out she would have an 11-day sea voyage in which to rest before reaching Ceylon April 10.

Home and School Association News

MILLBROOK PUBLIC SCHOOL

MILLBROOK (ENS)—The Home and School Association met in the school on Monday evening, with Mrs. B. B. Dawson, president, in the chair.

One minute's silence was observed in memory of Melburn McDowell, a former school board member, who died on Sunday. George Patton played "The Holy City" as a trumpet solo. He played again later in the program, with Miss Beverley Patton as his accompanist.

Mrs. L. Raper, parent education convener of Peterborough Home and School Council, was the guest speaker. Mrs. F. Gray, council vice-president, was also present and brought greetings.

Mrs. Raper stressed that patience and a profound respect for children were necessary in their rearing.

Parents were the first teachers, then playmates, school and Sunday school teachers, cub leaders, hockey and baseball coaches, books, magazines and papers. Parent education actually included all of Home and School.

She urged members to accept leadership by practicing leadership, doing whatever job they were asked to do; to keep up with the times by attending conferences and by reading and private study. She recommended strongly the leadership training courses held at the Couchiching camp each summer.

Mrs. Raper listed the seven deadly sins for associations. They were: Not having the agenda for the meeting ready; not having music available for the National Anthem or "O Canada"; not starting on time; too much business, or else, the other extreme, having everything cut and dried beforehand; having too lengthy introductions to speakers; having too long reports; and finally taking people too much for granted not commending them when they do a job well.

Talking on world understanding, the Rev. A. M. Butler told of Christian groups in China, Paraguay, Great Britain, United States and Germany who owned all things communally. They drew their inspiration from the New Testament, and came from all walks of life. Although little known at the present, these groups by practicing brotherly relations founded on the reality that love is behind all made for a better world.

Mrs. J. H. Raper, publications convener, told about the Courtice Memorial Library.

Mrs. Spencer Chesire of the high school staff asked for the opinions of the mothers before showing two health films to girls in the school.

The award for having most parents present went to Mrs. L. J. Stuart's room.

Refreshments were served, under the direction of Mrs. Wilfred Elson, social convener.

Will Organize New Association For Ross Hospital

LINDSAY (ENS)—Organization of the new Ross Memorial Hospital Association in Lindsay will begin at once, it was decided at Wednesday night's regular meeting of the hospital expansion committee. A report on the preliminary steps in organizing the town and county-wide group was adopted in full after the chairman of a special committee, Jasper Forman, explained its points.

The new organization will elect representatives to the enlarged board of governors of the hospital, after an amendment to the act of incorporation to the hospital is passed by the legislature at this session, will hold its first meeting as soon after the end of the present session as possible, it was decided.

The members of the committee, representing several local and county organizations, were urged to enroll their membership 100 per cent in the association, and plans will be laid for a public membership campaign conducted by the committee. The pro tem secretary of the committee will be Miss Harriet Bate, of Lindsay, while T. H. Eberlee, collegiate principal, will be temporary secretary until the first meeting of the association, when officers and representatives to the hospital board will be elected.

Membership fees will be set at $5 per year for individuals and $25 for organizations with comparable rates for life and perpetual memberships.

AMENDMENT

Mrs. D. M. Thomson, legal advisor to the expansion committee explained that the ammendment to the Act of Incorporation of the hospital is now in the hands of the clerk of the legislature. It recommends the change in number of the board of governors, the establishment of the hospital itself. When given royal assent at the end of the session, she said it would be in force and the newly formed association would have to hold its organizational meeting shortly thereafter to elect the board of governors, since the present board will be displaced as soon as the bill becomes law.

Meanwhile plans were continued along the lines of the financial campaigning for the hospital. As the report of a fund-raising group had discarded any further use of the present hospital which the committee had depended on, representatives of the department of health have inspected the building and will make their recommendations as to its possible service after the new building is finished. Current accounts payable were ordered paid by the securing of a loan, which may be repaid when the hospital association holds its first meeting in late April or early May.

The members of the large expansion committee were of the general opinion following the meeting that more progress had been reported and planned during the meeting than had been realized by the committee for almost three months.

CHIPPING A CHANNEL in Jackson Park Creek to eliminate, they hope, excessive spring flooding, Board of Works crews are opening a ten-foot trench by brawn and picks. Though the ice looks thick it is soft and from Monday to Wednesday evening the icebreakers had hewn their way from Townsend to Hunter Sts. In the spearhead attack, coming out from under the Hunter St. overpass, are George Lamore and Basil Dubblestine; four other workmen followed closely and widened the channel.

Mennonite Colonies Are Making Steady Progress In Paraguay

ALTONA, Man. (CP) — Despite drought, grasshoppers and inflation, Mennonite colonies in Paraguay are making steady progress, a colony official said during a visit here.

Jacob A. Braun, head of the Choritzer Komitee at Colonia Menno visited the principal Mennonite centre in Manitoba here while on a North American business trip. He said he was seeking an extension of a United States loan obtained in 1947. Poor crops, inflation and a government shortage of American funds made this year's payment on the loan impossible.

Manitoba mennonites were included in migrations to Paraguay in 1926 and 1947, but many returned home in 1948 after extreme hardship in mountains, swampy farmland and impenetrable forests. A spokesman said too many went at once and were forced to live in tents because there were no houses. At present, Mr. Braun said there are 12,000 Mennonites in Paraguay, occupying 800,000 acres.

STARTED IN SWITZERLAND

The Mennonites are a religious sect, established at Zurich, Switzerland, in 1525. Some of their descendants, numbering 41 families, arrived in Manitoba from Russia in 1890. They have increased to 1,000 families and live around Altona, Morris, Steinbach and Winkler in southern Manitoba.

In 1926 about 1,200 Mennonites left Canada to establish the first settlement in Paraguay. Another colony was established in 1930 by Mennonites who had been permitted to leave Russia as late as 1929. Refugees of the Second World War established another colony in 1947, and 1,689 more Mennonites went from Canada the same year.

Mr. Braun said the administrative body of the Menno colony in Paraguay is the Choritzer Komitee, a co-operative which operates industries, ranches and stores, purchases land, administers hospitals and schools and builds roads.

The colonists use little money themselves but let the co-op sell their produce. In return the co-op buys everyday essentials which are marketed through its stores. A retail store in Asuncion sells Mennonite wooden bowls and wood carvings to tourists. The earnings go into the colony treasury and are used for roads, hospitals and industries.

MANY OWN LAND

The people remain individualistic. Most own land, machinery and homes but combine their produce because of the distant markets. Young men too poor to buy land are given a farm and machinery by the co-op.

Mr. Braun said rampant inflation at present makes it difficult to import goods. He said settlers received less than four guaranis for every dollar in 1947 and to repay the loan now would cost them about 60 guaranis for one American dollar. As the price of their produce has not advanced proportionately, they will have to pay back 10 times as much as they borrowed, Mr. Braun said.

The colony has just completed a 30-bed hospital, opened a leper station and paid for a cotton gin.

Mr. Braun believes the sect will surmount its present hardships with the same tenacity with which previous obstacles were overcome.

Douk Parents Serving Terms In Jail Children's Resistance Remains High

NEW DENVER, B.C. (CP)—Children of parents who belong to the Sons of Freedom branch of the Doukhobors are attending school here and appear to be enjoying their new experience.

Although the children's resistance to Canadian ways and customs is still high, and they cling to the ways of their parents, the youngsters are beginning to take an interest in school life.

"Under the circumstances, they seem reasonably happy," Robert Ross, welfare superintendent, said. "But, like normal children away from home, they miss their parents."

The 22 children, whose parents are serving penitentiary terms for nude parading, range in age from five to 14 years.

NORMAL REACTIONS

In the class-room they react like any normal children, said Mrs. A. M. Steven, one of the teachers. "Their intelligence varies as it does in any school—and they need a bit of watching as all Canadian youngsters do."

They reflect their parents' teachings in the prayers they chant morning and evening. But they also like English songs which they sing for their teacher.

They now are translating a Doukhobor song into English, a step toward mutual understanding between children and teacher.

The food is Russian and is prepared by Japanese women who were taught by Doukhobor women.

Although they may have visitors every Sunday, the youngsters miss their parents. The interest taken in them by those responsible for their welfare compensates to some degree.

On Left Side But Not Careless Driver Argues

Anyone driving a car is entitled to travel on any part of the road they might choose, left, right or centre. In fact, legally, there is no right or wrong side to any road.

But there is just one catch. If traffic officers can convince a court that a person was driving without due consideration for other users of the road, then driving "a la lefthand side" is apt to become a little expensive.

In court today lawyer Donald Bark argued that his client, Gordon J. Bigelow, had not committed a breach of the traffic act by driving on the left side of the road.

Bigelow, who was charged wtih driving without due consideration, pleaded not guilty before Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC. The charge followed an accident at the Brock St.-Sheridan St. intersection on the morning of January 7.

Approaching the intersection by either street, drivers have to climb a fairly steep hill and the intersection has been described as "rather unusual" in that a car proceeding north on Sheridan must veer slightly left at the corners.

FOLLOWING TRACKS

Bigelow admitted to having been on the left side of Sheridan approaching the corner. He had been following tracks in fairly deep snow and estimated his speed about 10 m.p.h. He had not seen the other car, driven east on Brock St. by Robert Outram, until it was too late to avoid a collision.

Constable W. G. Scott said that skid marks behind the Bigelow car measured about 8 ft. There was very little evidence of skid marks behind Outram's car.

Outram testified that he had intended to turn right down Sheridan St. when the collision occurred. His speed had been about 8-10 m.p.h.

Mr. Bark, moving for a dismissal, told the magistrate that it was obvious for any car going north on Sheridan to veer to the lefthand side. Even though Bigelow had been on the lefthand side. Even though Bigelow had been on the lefthand side, he still had the right-of-way from the other car. Also Bigelow had had to keep an eye open to his right and was not so concerned with his left.

"In a case of negligence we are dealing only with the average man —that is the usual man," said Mr. Bark.

Magistrate Philp asked, "Are you suggesting that the usual man always cuts corners?"

Mr. Bark: "No, but at this particular intersection, yes. It is known to be a bad intersection and and the road surface was bad."

Magistrate Philp reserved his decision for a week.

Mother, Daughter Can Enjoy Decorating Girl's Room

Let's look at something for a teen-aged girl. One rule applies let her make decisions about the decoration of her room and, although it may not always please you, remember that it is her room.

Teen-agers like to be up-to-date and usually enjoy high-styled decorative schemes. Sometimes these may seem a little expensive. Here are some up-to-date ideas that don't cost too much. Bring pattern into the room with big bright colorful wallpaper on the ceiling. Then finish the walls in one of the modern, deep-colored textured papers. The window treatment could be a simple dotted swiss, or simple plain colored cotton made up into window length side drapes. Complete the color scheme with a plain bedspread and painted furniture to match the colors in the ceiling pattern.

Or even the scheme with patterned curtains and bedspread and plain painted walls and ceilings.

When buying fabrics for curtains, bedspreads and dressing table skirts for a bedroom try the cotton dress goods department. There you will find pretty designs and plain bright colors which are inexpensive, washable and simply wonderful for a teen-agers bedroom. If she can sew, bedspreads, curtains, etc., will be much less expensive. Maybe this would be an excellent time for you to teach her to sew. All these articles are easily made with straight seams and involve little fitting. They would be a comparatively simple first sewing problem.

If you and your daughter decide on a patterned wallpaper for the ceiling, here are a few considerations. First, if the ceiling is low choose a pattern light in colouring and with a white background. If the ceiling is a normal height or very high, then go ahead with one of the more modern bold, deep-colored designs.

Next, how much natural night is there in the room? If it is inclined to be dark, then again keep the colors light and, if possible, let yellow and light rosy reds predominate. But if the room has large windows and lots of natural night there will be no worry about depth of color so you and your daughter can have fun choosing anything from the wide range of exciting designs. The same general rules of light and color apply with painted walls.

A third consideration is the type of pattern which looks best on the ceiling. Look for a paper with what we call a "non-directional" pattern. That is, a pattern which can be viewed upside down, from the side or any angle and it will appear to be right side up. These designs are usually spotty in effect, the flowers being gathered into small bouquets with no upward growth to the stems. Plaids and allover leaf and flower designs can be happily used on the ceiling.

Consider these three points in selecting your pattern for the teen-agers' ceiling, then match the plain cotton fabrics to the colors which appear in the pattern. This will give your daughter a co-ordinated, modern, youthful bedroom.

Planned Ireland Trip Girl Hit By Train

TORONTO (CP) — Margaret Spiers, 21, of suburban Scarboro, who recently booked passage back to her native Ireland, was killed Wednesday when a car was struck by a train at a level-crossing.

The car which police said was driven by her brother, John Spiers, 24, was carried 56 feet along the railway track. Hospital officials said Spiers is in critical condition suffering serious head and leg injuries.

H. Tomlin, Belleville, engineer of the Belleville-to-Toronto train, said he did not see the car until his train struck it.

New Lining Keeps Shape

NEW YORK — (NEA)— Now that the short evening gown is firmly established (many spring collections show no long evening gowns,) designers are devising ways to keep these gowns permantly fresh and crisp.

Prominent in the spring collections is a nonwoven fabric that is both mystery and miracle. It's almost invisible as lining for both the skirts and taffeta slips in bouffant gowns. But once it's in, the clothes that it lines can be wadded into a suitcase and come out days later without need for pressing. Similarly, hats given a pellon lining can be squashed flat, then will spring right back into shape.

This "mircle" lining is used even inside swimsuits, to cling close as skin without need for boning. Petticoast of lace-embroidered net will retain their full, rounded lines even after long use.

All of this means that all fashions given such lining can pack well, be crushed and still spring back into shape, and maintain indefinitely the attractive lines that they had when they first came from the store.

This short spring evening gown of beige peau de soie with pellon lining shows it off. Top has ball-gown elegance, while bodice has perfect fit.

Use Television In 500 Schools

LONDON (Reuters) — Biology, geography and history will be taught by television in 500 selected schools in Britain next year or early in 1956. The British Broadcasting Corporation says that if the project is successful, tele-lessons will be extended to thousands of schools in Britain, which have used radio and movies as aids to education for the last 20 years.

Of the 146 local education authorities in England and Wales, 100 have already agreed to support the experimental TV program. Not one authority has opposed it.

Plans are ready to broadcast 50 tele-lessons, each lasting from 20 minutes to half an hour and most of them covering biology, geography and history. The course least likely to be taught by TV is mathematics.

It will cost about £200 to equip each of the selected schools with television.

Will lessons by television diminish the role of the classroom teacher? Said a BBC official: "Lessons will be arranged so that teachers fit in ordinary school work with them."

Wide-Open Battle Looming For Control Of N.Y. Railroad

NEW YORK (AP)—Rejection of Robert R. Young as a director and chairman of the board of the New York Central Railroad threatens to touch off a wide-open battle for control of the vast system.

Young, who controls the railroad's largest individual stock holding, denounced the present board of directors after learning that it Wednesday had rejected his request to be named head of the Central.

In a statement from his Palm Beach, Fla., home, Young called the directors a "Morgan, non-ownership board". He indicated he would appeal to the railroad's 44,461 stockholders to give him control of the central.

MEETING MAY 26

The railroad's annual meeting, at which all shares can be voted in an election for a new board of directors, is scheduled for May 26 in Albany, N.Y.

Young had requested that both he and his associate, Allan P. Kilby, be named to the board, but after a five-hour closed meeting, the directors announced:

"The board unanimously decided that it would be inimical to the best interest of the company to grant Mr. Young's request."

Young denies that he sought to take over the post of William White, president of the Central. "This Morgan board," Young said, "now seeks to confuse the issue by asserting that I, the largest known individual stockholer, desire to substitute myself for Mr. White as chief operating executive. Nothing is further from the fact."

WANTS INNOVATIONS

Young, 56, has long fought old-line railroad men and criticized many traditional railroad methods. He has advanced plans to win back business to the railroads by heavy advertising and promotion, and new and better equipment.

For years he has sought a voice in running the Central. In 1947 he was invited to become a director, but the Interstate Commerce Commission barred him because he then was chairman of the Chesapeake and Ohio. The ICC forbids interlocking directorates on grounds that they would cut competition.

Young made himself available for election to the Central board by resigning his post with the Chesapeake last Jan. 19.

Reliable sources figure holdings of Young and his associates amount to about 300,000 shares, or about five per cent of the total shares.

$500,000 Fire Destroys 3 Stores, Loblaw Supermarket Heap Of Rubble

JUST COLLAPSED — The Loblaw sign (upper photo) sags tiredly to the sidewalk at the height of the $500,000 fire which destroyed three George St. stores Thursday night. Smoke and flames leapt into the air as the building collapsed, allowing people five miles away to see the glow in the sky. Today the interior of the Loblaw store was reminiscent of war ruins as steel girders stand in fantastic shapes (lower photo) covered with layers of ice. A grotesque stack of bricks, all that's left of the rear wall is shown at the rear. The basement was filled with six feet of almost frozen water. —(Examiner Staff Photo)

Battle Blaze For Hours Handicapped By Cold; Citizens Move Paint, Goods

By DICK CAMPBELL

The most conservative estimate of damage at the devastating Loblaw block fire Thursday night is $500,000. Three stores: Loblaws, Western Tire and Auto and Superior Propane were completely gutted and Loblaws was razed to the ground. This morning there was nothing left of Loblaws two-year-old supermarket, but a twisted mass of girders and haphazard stacks of bricks pointing grotesquely at the sky. The other two stores are not much better off. Says fire chief William Sorrie: "Half a million would probably be too low an estimate." It was the worst Peterborough fire since the Quaker Oats Co. burned in 1916.

Like human ants, firemen choked their way through the acrid, stifling flames in zero weather Thursday night. From all sides and above, endless jets of water poured down on the blazing building, but it was like shooting rhinos with a pop-gun.

STARTED IN BASEMENT

The fire started in the basement of the Loblaw store sometime between 6 and 6:30 Thursday evening. The oil furnace in the northwest corner caught afire, and flames licked crazily up the northwest retaining wall between Loblaw's and Western Tire.

Bystanders gawked, firemen sweated and smokeclouds eddied from the fast-burning building, fed by a brisk north wind. Crisco, cornflakes and chili con carne provided an endless fuel supply for the hungry, swirling flames.

Two hours after the fire started, the smoke and flames appeared to be tamed. Bystanders went home, sure that damage would be relatively minor. But the giant, almost-human fire was only resting. The knockout punch was yet to come.

Suddenly, at 9:50 p.m. the whole rear wall of the Loblaw store collapsed. There was no warning. Flames hissed madly around the steel superstructure as the wall crumbled outward, scattering toocurious onlookers and almost burying firemen in a storm of broken brick.

Photographer Has Busy Day Chasing News; Things Happen In Threes

By DON GRANT

"We have a fire at Loblaw's." That brief message from the fire department to me at 20 minutes to seven Thursday night filled a superstitious belief of mine, that things travel in threes. They surely did. It started at 9:30 a.m. when little Ronald White was mangled under a 10-ton transport on Lansdowne St. Then in the middle of the afternoon the Rev. Albin Anderson, an elderly Norwood retired minister, was crushed to death under a fuel truck at his home.

Firemen were coming in and out of the blanket of smoke, readying up lines to the front doors. They coughed and sputtered until finally the gas masks appeared. Chris Comiskey and Frank Shearer were among the first to go inside with this gear. Although the heavy smoke rolled through the front door, the firemen advanced well inside and down. They seemed to be making headway from the front.

Around at the back firemen were edging through the back doors into the smoke-filled interior; others were hacking at a steel freight door with axes.

The fire was believed just inside the back doors and in the dense smoke no one could make headway. The freight door apparently was an alternate way.

BREAKS THROUGH FLOOR

"It's broken through!" someone cried. Until then the fire had been confined to the basement.

A few flames, about a foot high, danced near the cashiers' desks at the back. They seemed to be enjoying eating through the hardwood floor.

Two lines of hose were quickly directed from downstairs and doused the small glow. That was the only flame seen until three hours later when the roof caved in.

Oddly enough there was a time when firemen and spectators believed the blaze in the basement well under control. Firemen penetrated deep inside, peering through the smoke for flames, and reported back that there was plenty of smoke but no flames. The heat inside was practically unbearable.

LOST IN BASEMENT

Comiskey and Shearer were among those in the basement. In the thick white smoke they became lost in the huge fire-filled basement for a few minutes. But eventually after some worry by

Cigarette Tax May Be Cut By 5 Cents

OTTAWA (CP) — Spokesmen for Canada's tobacco growers urged the government today to cut the cigarette tax by five cents on a pack of 20, came away with the feeling their request will be granted, they said today.

F. C. Cunningham of Windham Centre, Ont., delegation head, said "Our people are very hopeful." Mr. Cunningham, board chairman, headed a committee of five representing the Ontario Flue - Cured Tobacco Marketing Association which covers about 93 per cent of Canada's growers.

The delegation met with Finance Minister Abbott — a non-smoker, and later reported him as saying the committee's brief will be "Most helpful" to his department.

MONEY SCARCE — ABBOTT

He told them, however, that the government in the next fiscal year will have to raise about $4,750,000-000 to finance government operations.

"It isn't as easy to raise money this year as it has been in some other years," the delegation reported him as saying.

The government would have to consider the request in the light of "Can we afford it?"

The delegation emphasized the tax cut would boost sales and help eliminate smuggling from the United States. It would cut federal revenues in the next few years, but eventually revenues would be higher than they now are.

The tax cut would drop the retail price of smokes in most provinces to about 27 cents a pack, but it would cut federal revenues by about $19,000,000 in the next fiscal year, starting April 1.

The delegation, in a brief, said the tax slice would boost cigarette sales by eight or 10 per cent a year.

Prime Minister Reaches Rome

ROME (AP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent landed at r aswept Ciampino airport today for a three-day goodwill visit to Italy.

His scheduled visit to the Canadian Sabre jet fighter base at Zwiebrucken was cancelled because of bad weather.

The special RCAF aircraft taking him on his round-the-world tour was unable to land, and continued to the next scheduled stop, Rome.

The visit to the RCAF's Gros Tenquin fighter base in France was carried out as planned this morning after the takeoff from Bonn ended the West German stage of the tour.

TAKES SALUTE

Thursday he visited the Canadian Army's 1st infantry brigade at Soest, in the Ruhr, and tears filled his eyes as he received the general salute from the 2,800 men of the brigade.

The prime minister left behind him in Bonn the idea of a closer integration of the powers bordering the Atlantic for "economic betterment, political stability and self-defence."

It was pointed out that there was nothing in the suggestion, made at a state dinner with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and the West German cabinet, that would represent a change of policy among the North Atlantic powers. However, the idea was described in London by a government spokesman as "interesting and stimulating."

Union, CBC Get Agreement

TORONTO (CP) — An agreement between the CBC and the Association of Canadian Radio and TV Artists (AFL-TLC) has been reached, it was announced today.

Terms of the agreement, reached at a meeting Thursday, were not disclosed. Earlier this month, as the CBC studied proposals submitted by the union, reports of a threatened strike against the CBC were circulated. Union officials termed these reports "unfounded and premature."

Basically, the union sought jurisdiction of its members during their appearance on news and public affairs programs. The union took issue with the CBC's view that union members appearing on such programs are not subject to the union's jurisdiction, rates and working conditions as they apply to all other programs.

1,000 Babies Smuggled; Make $3,000,000

MONTREAL (CP) — Combined Montreal and provincial police forces were reported today to have uncovered a $3,000,000 black market in babies in which more than 1,000 have been sold out of the Montreal area in the last 10 years.

Information obtained leads police to believe most of the babies were sold in the United States to Jewish couples who were led to believe the French-Canadian and other Christian infants were born of parents of the Jewish faith.

MONTREAL (CP)—Police said today that Hermann Buller, a Montreal lawyer, was arrested for questioning in connection with operations of what law authorities described as an international black market in babies.

Reports here said evidence was uncovered both in Montreal and New York and that the Jewish couples paid from $3,000 to $10,000 for babies.

BIRTH RECORDS FAKED

Falsification of birth records is reported to be the basis of the racket, said to involve local lawyers, doctors, nurses, nursing home operators, contact persons in recognized institutions and their social welfare court connections.

The combined police investigation has been under direct orders of the Quebec attorney-general's department. The racket is said to

Seeking Man With Earring

LONDON (Reuters) — Police throughout Britain searched today for a bearded man wearing a gold earring, wanted by Scotland yard to help unravel a double murder in a London home for elderly people.

The Yard, London's metropolitan police, flashed descriptions of the man and one other wanted for questioning to police stations through Britain.

Both were well known at the gloomy 16-room home in west London where Thursday night 70-year-old "Lady" Menzies—her right to the title has been disputed—and her daughter, blonde Mrs. Isobel Chesney, 42, were found strangled.

Mrs. Chesney's body was found naked in her bathroom at the home which she and her mother managed. "Lady" Menzies, a frail, kindly woman with a mass of white hair, was also bludgeoned about the head in her Victorian-furnished sewing room.

Falls 1,000 Ft. Lives To Tell It

QUEBEC (CP) —A young army private plunged 1,000 feet from a a partly-opened parachute during a routine jump at nearby l'Ancienne-Lorette airport and lives to tell about it.

Pte. Raymond Jacques of Thetford Mines, Que., a member of the 1st Battalion, Royal Canadian 22nd Regiment, landed in two feet of snow bordering the airport and suffered several broken vertebrae in his back and shock.

He was taken to Quebec military hospital where his condition was reported critical. However, hospital officials said he is improved today and they expect him to recover.

Meantime, the army has set up a board of inquiry to investigate the cause of the mishap.

Canada Sells Vacationland To Americans By Film

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada is starting a program to sell her vacation-land to Americans by film. Leo Dolan, director of the Canadian government travel bureau, Thursday told the Senate tourist committee that the bureau plans to make five films this year advertising areas of Canada as good holiday spots. The color films will be shown to groups in the United States and probably on U.S. television networks.

The first film, entitled "Maritime Holiday" has been completed. It runs 12 minutes and promotes a "package tour" of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. It also includes shots of the northernmost New England states.

The second film will be called "Wardens of Waterton" and will cover a trip through the northwestern United States to Waterton Lakes National Park in southwestern Alberta. Filming will be done this summer.

HAVE 87 OUTLETS

Mr. Dolan said the Maritime film will be shown in 87 outlets in the U.S., including travel clubs, universities and libraries. It is also planned to buy time on U.S. television networks to show the films.

Mr. Dolan said the bureau spent $931,000 last year out of a budget of $1,500,000 for newspaper and magazine advertising in the United States. The results of a questionnaire indicated that 23.6 per cent of the American visitors came here after seeing these ads.

QUESTIONNAIRE RESULTS

This questionnaire was sent to 200,000 Americans and 4,981 replied. The complaints were: 517 about rough, dusty or poor roads; 143 about accommodations; 118 about food; 101 about high prices; 39 about discourtesy; 13 that Canada doesn't live up to its publicity; 129 that the fishing isn't as good as advertised and 21 that the hunting fell short of expectation; 19 about immigration officers and 37 about customs officers.

Expressions of approval were: 3,802 about accommodation; 3,815 about food; 2,172 about prices; 4,315 about courtesy and hospitality; 2,450 about the scenery; 1,862 about courteous customs and 951 about courteous immigration officials; 353 about the fishing and 89 about the hunting.

He said there were about 28,000,000 visitors to Canada last year.

Capt. D. L. Howson Christens 5 Children

SOEST, Germany (CP) — Five children were christened in the first such service here for dependents of servicemen with the 1st Canadian Infantry Brigade group.

The service, conducted by Capt. J. D. L. Howson of Peterborough, Protestant chaplain with the brigade, was for the two children of Maj. F. E. Chamberlain of Vancouver, Hugh, 10, and Irene, 6, and for Linda, 6, Beverley, 2, and David, five weeks children of Lieut. C. E. Dency of Ottawa.

Sub-Zero Air Grips Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A blast of sub-zero air—the coldest of the winter in some sections—hit Canada from Saskatchewan to the east coast Thursday night.

The Dominion weather office, however, says it will warm up "a bit" Saturday. Just how much is uncertain.

"The frigid weather probably won't last more than 36 hours in one place," a forecaster said. "Moderating winds from the west will have blown it out of all but the Maritimes by Saturday."

Sunny skies are expected from Saskatchewan to Quebec today. A cold front brought some snow to the Maritimes.

Toronto recorded six below zero Thursday night—the winter's lowest temperature. The previous low was five below Jan. 17. Peterborough recorded 15 below.

Coldest reported spot in Ontario was White River, with 42 below.

Other cold-belt temperatures Thursday night: Regina -5, Winnipeg -16, Sudbury -30, Ottawa -15, Montreal -18.

Bus Goes In Ditch

ORILLIA (CP)— Passengers on a north-bound Gray coach received a shaking-up but no injury late Thursday when the bus skidded off highway No. 11 into a ditch about eight miles south of here.

CNR Lays Off 1,500 Workers

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian National Railways had laid off at least 1,500 employees because of declining traffic.

Transport Minister Chevrier said Thursday in the Commons that CNR officials are "most anxious" to hire the men again as soon as traffic improves. He was replying to Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre), who asked if the minister could "allay fears" of further CNR layoffs.

Mr. Chevrier said the government-owned company's freight traffic has declined in several commodities, including coal and grain. There had been less interchange traffic with connecting United States railroads and the changeover program from steam locomotives to diesel engines also had caused layoffs.

The question arose following an unsuccessful CCF attempt to start a debate on the unemployment situation.

Canadian Vessel Tows Crippled Yacht

ACAPULCO, Mexico (AP)—The president of the Acapulco Yacht Club said today the 60-foot Florida racing schooner Dirigo II was taken in tow Thursday by the Canadian ship Imperial Edmonton, which indicated it was bringing the crippled yacht to this Pacific coast resort city.

The club official, Jose de la Viga, said the Canadian vessel reported to the Acapulco navy radio station that it had picked up the Dirigo II, missing since Monday after a severe buffetting in stormy Central American waters.

Ship Goes On Rocks Payroll Vanishes

LOS ANGELES (AP)—When the freighter Harry Lundeberg went on the rocks near the tip of Baja California last Monday ship's officers were investigating the disappearance of the vessel's $22,000 payroll.

The ship's operators made this known Thursday night, adding that the loss of the payroll was reported to the company after the Lundeberg left Vancouver for San Marcos island, in the Gulf of California, to pick up a cargo of gypsum.

The ship was reported to be proceeding at 11½ knots, on what was thought to be its normal course, when it went on the rocks in the early morning darkness Monday. The captain, second mate and radio operator stayed aboard and are believed to be still with the ship, but 36 seamen and officers took to the boats, and were picked up and brought here Wednesday.

His Troubles Just Beginning

Canadian Executive Faces $90,000 Bond Theft Inquiry

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—A 60-day jail sentence and $500 fine for illegally entering the United States and using a false passport may be only a trifle of the trouble confronting Abraham Isaac Grosser, 41-year-old Canadian business executive.

Canadian authorities say that when he finishes his term in Albany county jail, they want to quiz him about $90,000 worth of stolen bonds.

Federal judge James T. Foley sentenced Gross Thursday and observed that the defendant had had "an amazing career" in both countries.

Foley referred to testimony that pictured Grosser as the organizer and president of several Canadian business enterprises, a one-time Washington newspaper circulation man and a youth leader.

ALSO CALLED LeGROSS

He also was known as William Philip LeGross.

United States attorney Theodore Bowes contended that Grosser, or LesGross, had been ordered deported from the U.S. in 1940, had lived in the U.S. during the Second World War, and was believed to have been involved in smuggling aliens into the country.

Grosser's wife, an American citizen, said her husband had helped organize the metropolitan police club in Washington in 1944.

In Toronto, police said a Phil LeGros is wanted by Toronto and Quebec police on three charges of receiving bonds stolen at Beaverton, Ont., Toronto and the Quebec City area.

Police said Grosser had maintained a New York city apartment, a summer home, servants and three automobiles. He organized a machinery company and an insurance company while in Toronto between 1950 and 1953. He was described by friends as having "wonderful organizing and business ability and a magnetic personality."

Mrs. Grosser told reporters her husband had been president of a Toronto brokerage firm and currently owns a landscape and gardening firm there.

Say Austrian Pact Hinges On Germany

Russians Refuse Any Settlement On Vienna Yet

BERLIN (AP)— Russia refused in effect today to give Austria its independence until a German peace treaty is signed.

Foreign Minister Molotov proposed at the Big Four conference "certain additions" to the Austrian independence treaty which has been fought over since 1946. The major stumbling block among his "certain additions" was this:

Withdrawal of troops from Austria will be postponed "pending the conclusion of a peace treaty with Germany" in order to "prevent any new attempts at a new anschluss" (German-Austrian union. This meant the Soviet army has no intention of quitting Austrian soil.

Molotov also demanded that the issue of Trieste be considered along with the Austrian question, a proposition rejected by the West before.

He topped off his "new" approach with a refusal to accept Austria's request for scaling down "harsh and inequitable" economic concessions to Russia.

Foreign Secretary Eden, State Secretary Dulles and Foreign Minister Bidault joined in a new plea to Russia to end the "long and shabby" story of denying Austria her freedom. They backed up Austrian Foreign Minister Leopold Figl after the mild-mannered diplomat presented his country's case inside the Big Four conference chamber.

MAKES STRONG PLEA

Figl made his appearance at a regular session late in the afternoon which followed a restricted meeting on Asiatic questions.

The mild-mannered Austrian made an impassioned plea to restore his nation's sovereignty and deliver its 7,000,000 people from occupation for the first time since 1938. He asked that the economic terms of the draft treaty be revised "in a sympathetic and generous spirit."

These terms would benefit Russia as the treaty now stands.

They would give Russia the lion's share of Austrian oil production for a period of 25 to 30 years; Figl argued that the disposal of the country's mineral resources is "an inalienable right for every free people."

MIGHT MAKE DEAL

There was strong indication that if Molotov would drop his insistence on a Big Five parley including China, State Secretary Dulles would be willing to reverse the previous U.S. position that Russia should attend the proposed Korean political conference only as a partner of China and North Korea rather than as a non-billigerent.

Following today's private session the conference secretariat released only this information:

"The ministers continued their discussion on item one (Russia's Big Five conference proposal) of the agenda and their restricted session at the Allied control authority building ended at 1:15 p.m."

Western officials said the use of "continued" to describe the discussion indicated it was not terminated today as would be taken up in a fourth closed meeting at a time as yet not fixed.

The Western ministers made plain to Molotov in Thursday's closed session, it was understood, that they have no intention whatever of accepting his five-power conference demand, but that they are deeply interested in having the Berlin meeting break the Communist-United Nations deadlock over arrangements for a Korean peace settlement.

NEGOTIATE ON INDO-CHINA

Progress along this line could lead directly into negotiations for peace in Indo-China, Molotov was reported told.

Following the session Thursday, one Western source said the four ministers had made "a shade of progress." Another said there now is evidence that the East and West are looking for common ground.

British and French diplomats found hope in Thursday's meeting because Molotov's reaction was not one of firm opposition or rigid insistence on all points of his views.

The British and French delegates apparently got the idea that he might be willing to make a new approach to a Korean conference. No one can be sure, however, that the Peiping government would go along with Molotov.

State Secretary Dulles was quoted by a Western source as proposing that the Big Four call a conference on Korea with Red China as a participant along with North Korea, South Korea and other belligerents wishing to attend.

If this version is correct, it would amount to some change in the U.S. position on the projected Korean political conference. Heretofore the United States has insisted that conference be two-sided. The North Koreans and their associate, including Russia, would be on one side. On the other side would be the South Koreans and their 16 co-belligerents from the United Nations. This would group Russia with those labelled by the UN as aggressors.

OBJECTS TO STATUS

Foreign Minister Molotov is reported to have objected to such a non-neutral status for Russia.

According to the reported Dulles plan, if the conference succeeds in settling the Korean question, the next step would be a second parley on Indo-China.

To refuse to call such a conference just because of the U.S. position on China would be a difficult thing for France to accept, and perhaps equally difficult for Britain, which recognizes the Peiping government and would like to see relations restored more nearly to normal.

What Dulles, Foreign Minister Bidault and Foreign Secretary Eden want is resumption of the Korean armistice talks and a move toward an end to the seven-year-old war in Indo-China. Russia is believed to want peace there too, but with Western acceptance of her big Asiatic partner as part of the price.

Chambers Commerce Traced For Kinsmen

Tracing growth of the chamber of commerce movement to medieval times, Bob Hamilton, assistant Peterborough Chamber of Commerce manager, spoke Thursday night before the Kinsmen club. The group met at the Kawartha Golf and Country club.

Prototypes of the present chamber were the fairs and merchants' guilds of the 12th century. From that time Mr. Hamilton brought his audience up to when the first chamber was established in Canada. It was located at Halifax and opened its doors in 1750.

Peterborough's was founded in 1888 and since then the movement has spread to three levels; local, provincial and national; all molded into one body working together with the same interests.

The speaker stressed how the membership is made up; of both rich and poor with the common bond of helping to guide people and bettering the community.

Sunny Welcome For Queen

BATHURST, Australia (CP) — The western district of New South Wales gave Queen Elizabeth a sunny welcome when she arrived today at Bathurst, 150 miles west of Sydney, in a Royal Australian Air Force Dakota.

More than 100,000 people from Bathurst and other centres within a radius of 200 miles cheered the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh during their drive from the airport to the town hall.

Later the Queen and the duke went to a fair ground where 14,000 school children gave them a big welcome.

During the drive through the ranks of the children the Queen was worried by the common Australian fly.

The cheering of the children stirred up the flies and other insects, and the Queen and the duke found it difficult to wave, chase flies and at the same time to hold on to the rail of their jeep.

Later the Queen and the duke visited the town of Lithgow before returning to Sydney by train.

Week Remand For 2 Suspects

SIMCOE (CP)—A one-week remand was granted Thursday in the hearing of two Americans charged with the murder of 68-year-old Bruce Beatty at Renton Feb. 2.

Beatty died soon afterwards and Mrs. Beatty still is in critical condied in hospital in London.

U.S. Planes Fly Airlifts For French

TOKYO (AP) — American air force units in Japan are flying support airlifts for French troops in Indo-China, the Nippon Times said tonight.

Still on a small scale, the flights are being made to help the French keep flying their American C119 "Flying Boxcars" and to maintain the 200 American air technicians already there.

The route taken is via Formosa and Clark Field in the Philippines to "two secret bases in Indo-China," and the first flight has already arrived, the paper said.

Far East air force headquarters refused to comment.

fellow firemen they finally reached the back door.

Outside firemen still worked with axes and bars to open the freight door. It just wouldn't budge. Finally a call went out for a "torch" to cut through the tough metal.

The firemen who had once been well inside were now at the front doors. They had been gradually forced to retreat. The fire was far from out.

Crouched on the icy sidewalk firemen attempted to aim the streams of water down the front stairs. Suddenly one trio was thrown back as the line escaped momentarily.

The smoke belched out the front door, forcing the men down, low, low.

It was then the fire broke through in the centre of the store. No one could see any more flames.

I looked down to change some film, just for a moment. I looked up and through the large glass windows was a rolling mass of rosy smoke. It looked like a sunset with red rays of the sun glancing off the clouds.

BROKE WINDOWS

That glimpse of flame was only for a moment, but long enough for firemen to realize the danger of the windows blowing out. They grabbed long poles and punched the front panes out one after the other.

Chief Bill Sorrie was jumping about. He had been in and out of the building a dozen times, with and without a gas mask. Streaked with dirt he yelled at the men to fall back slightly.

Where once there was a feeling of victory over the fire, the feeling was now "it's just like the Zacks fire."

Going across the street into Dick Miller's garage Young Dick took me to the fire escape and up we went to the third storey roof.

The westerly wind swept the smoke and sparks across the Miller-Elliott building but fortunately they were well-covered with snow.

Down the street there were lines of hose criss-crossing the road now covered with a thick layer of ice and water. Through the smoke you could catch glimpses of the firemen close to the burning store fronts, the large crowd pressing against the ropes, the Boy Scouts and reserve army soldiers trying to hold the mob back.

PEOPLE MOVE BACK

Wave after wave of thick black smoke eddied throughout the area. Then the people gladly moved back.

The dirty, wet, frozen firemen leaned on the pumpers and aerial truck for a breather. In their frost-nipped fingers they clutched cups of coffee, distributed by the Scouts, the Salvation Army and the Red Cross.

The crowd could hardly see anything. Now and then when the wind drifted the banks of smoke away, the crumpled store sign and the red-hot interior could be seen.

Someone said, "There's good pictures at the back."

I started around the Great West Saddlery building and just as I reached the back, there was a long, slow swoosh. The Loblaw store was collapsing. Sparks, flames and smoke hit the dark sky, brilliantly lighting the whole block.

They knew then that the Loblaw store was a total loss.

TRY TO SAVE OTHERS

The firemen promptly concentrated on saving the adjoining stores, Western Tire and Auto and the Superior Propane Ltd. There was a fire wall extending along the wall of the Loblaw-Western Tire store and firemen directed their line of hose there.

But somehow in a time-lost period the flames arched over the roof, crept through small openings in the fire wall and the firemen were battling a three-store blaze.

It was only a matter of minutes and both stores were silhouetted as fire rippled through the interior despite the streams of water which poured gallons inside.

About midnight, nearly six hours after the fire started, the flames gradually began to fade.

In that dim light the fire fans could vaguely see the shell of the burned stores and the saved fourth store, bearing smoke and water marks but safe from the fire.

About two a.m. the stores were a frozen, smoking mess. Firemen were dragging each other about, so tired they could hardly stand. Their clothes, once thoroughly wet, were now frozen hard.

Chief Sorrie, now dressed in his blues, still made his rounds, ankle-deep in water, slush, ice and snow.

"The boys did their best. They're good firemen," he said.

Soviet Would Make War Within 10 Years—Gouzenko

WASHINGTON (AP)—Igor Gouzenko, the former Soviet code clerk in Ottawa who gave Communist espionage secrets to the West, says the U.S.S.R. would be at war with the Free World within 10 years "if it is left up to the Soviet high command."

But he added, in an interview with columnist-commentator Drew Pearson, that "if you take the will of the Russian people alone, independently from their masters, they wish peace will be forever."

The interview was recorded in Canada for telecasting tonight. The text was made public here today.

Gouzenko went back over statements he first made several years ago, which were taken by United States Senate investigators as corroborating evidence that Alger Hiss was an agent of the Russian government.

NEVER GIVE NAME

But Gouzenko said today, as apparently he had before, that he was never given the name of a person described to him as a Soviet agent who was an assistant to the late secretary of state, Edward Stettinius, at the San Francisco conference of 1945. That conference set up the United Nations Organization.

Gouzenko said in the interview with Pearson that a cipher clerk named Kulakov told him he learned in Moscow "that the assitant of Stettinius is a Soviet agent, but he didn't say her name or his name and I believe he didn't know it."

Pearson asked whether "there was ever any evidence that Alger Hiss was associated with the Russian spy ring."

Gouzenko replied: "To this I can answer that I didn't have direct evidence, but there were the words of cipher clerk Kulakov."

Hiss, who was an assistant to Stettinius, now is serving a prison term for perjury based on his denial that he passed U.S. government secrets to a Soviet spy ring.

FBI MEMORANDUM

The U.S. Senate internal security sub-committee in a report last summer quoted from an FBI memorandum touching on an interview with Gouzenko soon after he broke with the Soviet embassy in Canada and disclosed the existence of a spy ring.

The memorandum as quoted directed attention to various statements about Hiss and "to the statement by Gouzenko regarding an assistant to the secretary of state who was a Soviet agent." It also referred to Gouzenko as one of the "sources of information on Hiss' connection with the Communist underground."

Gouzenko has been reinterviewed for the sub-committee by chairman William E. Jenner (Rep. Ind.) and others, but the information obtained has not been made public.

Can't Decide If Youngster Real Wolf Boy

LUCKNOW, India (AP) — The most debated topic here is whether a nine-year-old crippled boy now convalescing in Balrampur hospital is a wolf boy.

Picked up by police at Lucknow railroad junction Jan. 17 in a deserted freight car, the boy has been named Ramu.

Leading the opposing views are the hospital superintendent, Dr. D. N. Sharma, who says he is "perfectly convinced" Ramu is a wolf boy, and Kali Prasad, professor of psychology at Lucknow University, who says he is equally convinced Ramu is "anything but a wolf boy."

Prasad investigated Ramu for two days. His inquiry, he said, is still incomplete but from what he has seen he is "convinced Ramu is not a wolf boy." But what exactly his difficulty is "has yet to be ascertained after further investigation."

DOES NOT CRAWL, RUN

"Ramu does not crawl. He does not run nor show any of those symtoms which other wolf boys and wolf girls exhibited — especially Kamala and Amala, the wolf girls rescued by an Indian Christian missionary, Rev. J. A. L. Singh, at Midnapore near Calcutta in 1920.

"We plan continuing behavior studies this month, at the end of which it will be possible definitely to say what exactly is the type of mental difficulty which Ramu is suffering."

Dr. Sharma has ready answers to Prasad's arguments:

"All wolf children need not behave in the same manner. Wolf boys need not necessarily crawl, nor even walk or run. It all depends how the wolf brought up the child. Possibly Ramu was reared in a wolf hole or dark cave where he might have had space to extend his legs and hands only occasionally but not always.

"I am convinced Ramu is not an imbecile. . . . He no longer scratches the floor, nor, except occasionally, licks water or milk with his tongue instead of sipping.

"When hot he used to put his tongue out as dogs and wolves do, and when cold he crouches. He sleeps also like a dog or wolf. The first symptoms of a return to human habits was seen when he began to weep like a child instead of howling, and showed interest in balloons."

have been "in utter and complete disregard" of Quebec adoption laws, which state that adoption must be by parents of the same religion as the child.

George W. Hill, Montreal lawyer representing the attorney-general, recently returned from an investigation trip to New York City. He was accompanied by Detective-Sgt. Edgar Belair of the Montreal police department.

Two provincial police officers, detectives Jules Arsenault and Michel Deltorquio, have been occupied with the local investigation for the last month.

Mr. Hill said the investigations may lead to "a complete remodelling of the Quebec adoption laws."

RELUCTANT TO TESTIFY

Early investigations were hampered by reluctance of persons who adopted children to testify in any local case. But they then were advised by United States authorities that their status in relation to the presumably legally adopted children would remain unchanged.

Several rings are believed to have operated in the general racket scheme. Transportation of the babies, born to unmarried mothers, is reported to have ranged from shoddy to top luxury. Some went by air lines, with professional couriers as attendants; others, only a few days old, were bundled up and whisked across the border hidden in trucks.

The system is reported to have involved mysterious telephone numbers and enigmatic pass words.

Some unwed mothers were given amounts up to $50 and their lying-in expenses paid. Others had their babies snatched away virtually without the mothers' consent.

The rings are said to have thrived because official child-placement agencies in the United States have long waiting lists, particularly of Jewish couples.

EXPECT MANY ARRESTS

Official sources in Montreal indicated they now expect arrests to begin today and continue possibly for 10 or 15 days.

One source indicated the whole system operated with utter disregard of the slightest moral or social phases. There were advance agents and sales representatives; forgers and border-jumpers; perjury, deception and fraud.

Authorities said few, if any, of the adopting parents have signified any intention of breaking the contract into which they entered, no matter how illegal it was. The parents have insisted on promises that the children remain with them and that, because of co-operation with police, the parents' names be withheld.

$60,000 Fire At Aylmer

AYLMER, Ont. (CP)—Fire fed by exploding gas and oil drums caused $60,000 damage to a combined service station, garage and snack bar here today.

Two trucks, a farm tractor, and a car were destroyed.

Firemen from the Malahide township brigade fought the blaze in sub-zero temperatures near this town 10 miles east of St. Thomas.

Several explosions of gas and oil drums shook the building at the height of the blaze, but no one was hurt.

A passing transport driver saw the flames in Don Rawlins' premises and notified firemen. Cause of the fire was not immediately determined.

Market Groups Mixed In Quiet Trading

TORONTO (CP)—Market groups were mixed in quiet early afternoon stock market trading today.

Constructions, foods and steels were slightly stronger to lead the industrials up a little. Papers, utilities, manufactures, refining oils and textiles were steady. Financial institutions were slightly lower. Ford dropped $1.25.

Western oils were lightly traded and only slightly ahead.

Noranda was weak in base metal seniors. It lost 30 cents although it had been down $1 in early trading. Other seniors moved slightly lower. Juniors attracted little interest.

Uraniums and Bathurst-area base metals were quiet. Kerr-Addison was down 12½ to lead senior golds lower. Holding companies also slipped.

Two Cars Damaged

Two cars were fairly extensively damaged in a collision at George and McDonnell Sts. about 10.30 a.m. today. Drivers of the cars were Raymond McAvilla, 277 Bethune St., and Robert Geddes Harper, of 12 Harper Ave.

The Harper car was travelling west on McDonnell and the McAvilla vehicle south on George when the accident occurred.

Constable Don Erskine investigated.

Housewife Burned Working Near Stove

A 23-year-old Indian River housewife, Mrs. Ruby Moore, wife of Eldon Moore, was fairly seriously burned Thursday when her clothing caught fire while she was working near the kitchen stove.

Brought to the Civic Hospital, Mrs. Moore was treated for second degree burns. Her condition this morning was reported as satisfactory.

Find Safety Begins At Home

They say that charity begins at home. After listening to one of America's top authorities on safety in industry, G. Russell DeReamer, safety manager for General Electric, speaking to a large audience in St. Peter's auditorium Thursday night, it would appear that safety, too, begins at home.

Such was Mr. DeReamer's personality and forceful argument, that everyone must have been convinced that accidents in most cases come from carelessness. They are unnecessary and just as we teach small children to be careful, so must people be taught danger awareness.

But he came in for some ribbing this week. On Sunday, his wife decided to do a little skating. It was just a case of once up and once down — so he says — and whoops, the little lady had a broken leg. So while she takes a little time off to ponder on the "awareness of danger," Mr. DeReamer continues his full time job.

Incidentally, he considers his wife's accident to be among that class which people (shall we say the more philosophical), term as the two per cent due to "acts of God."

Tighten Laws To Prevent Pilfering

TORONTO (CP) — Highways Minister Doucett Thursday ordered tightening of departmental regulations to prevent pilfering.

The order follows the disclosure that Donat Dubeau, patrol chief of 39 miles of Ontario highway from Rockland to the eastern end of Plantagenet bridge, near Ottawa, had been suspended for alleged irregularities.

Mr. Doucett said $1,800 to $1,900 in highways department materials and labor had been used by Dubeau to build two houses. The major building material used was large fence posts, allegedly recut to a size suitable for house-building. Departmental laborers were said to have helped build the houses on government time.

TURNED OVER TO POLICE

Mr. Doucett said the Dubeau case had been handed over to provincial police.

The case was an "incident" and not connected with the "gang" operations alleged in the Fort William division of the highways department where five men were arrested and charged last month in connection with irregularities.

The minister said under tightened regulations amounts of materials supplied to employees will be kept to a minimum and detailed procedures in requisitioning materials would have to be followed to the letter. Checks were to be made to ensure padlocking of all stores when not under guard of an attendant.

Two Battalions To Be Relieved

OTTAWA (CP)—Two Canadian infantry battalions in Korea are to be relieved next month, the army said today.

The 3rd Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment, and 3rd Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, are to be replaced by the 2nd Battalion, Queen's Own Rifles, and the 4th Battalion, Canadian Guards. The 2nd Battalion, Royal Highlanders of Canada (Black Watch) will remain on duty in Korea until next fall.

The announcement shows that Canada intends to keep her infantry brigade in Korea at full strength. The United States is withdrawing two divisions from Korea and President Syngman Rhee of South Korea has offered troops for Indo-China.

The navy here also said it has no plans to reduce its forces in Korea. They will remain at three destroyers. Two were relieved recently. The RCAF says it has no plans for withdrawing its one-squadron airlift to Korea.

Report Haymes Plans Return To Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The Buenos Aires newspaper Clarin says today crooner Dick Haymes will return soon to his native Argentina to live. It says there is no indication whether his wife, movie star Rita Hayworth, will accompany him.

Quoting relatives of Haymes, Clarin says the singer is tired of legal difficulties that have plagued him in the United States. The 34-year-old night club star is facing a U. S. deportation action. He is accused of re-entering the U. S. illegally after a visit to Hawaii last spring. Haymes first went to the United States in 1937 but never became a citizen.

Bank Robbers Strike Twice

TORONTO (CP)—Bank robbers struck twice within three hours in the Toronto area Thursday and escaped with loot totalling $3,600. Three masked men robbed the Bank of Commerce branch at King City, 15 miles north of Toronto, of $1,000 while a woman customer calmly smoked a cigarette in the manager's office. Their getaway car later was found abandoned on a sideroad. About three hours later, a tall, thin man wearing dark sunglasses walked straight for the teller's cage of the newly-opened Bank of Montreal branch at Park Lawn and Lake Shore roads in suburban Etobicoke township. Accountant Robert Muir, assuming he was a customer, said:

"Good afternoon."

'DON'T BE FUUNNY'

"Don't be funny," the swarthy bandit snapped, plunging one hand in his overcoat pocket and pointing something at the accountant. A few minutes later he walked out of the bank with $2,600 in two leather bags tucked under his arm. He jumped into a late-model powder blue car parked in front of the bank and drove east towards Toronto.

First reports placed the total loot in the robberies at close to $7,000.

FIREMEN BATTLE FIRE AT SUPERMARKET IN NEAR ZERO WEATHER

THROUGH A SMOKY SCREEN workers could see the ruins of Loblaw's ultra-modern store and two other smaller stores today after Thursday's fire, the worst since the Zacks' fire three years ago. The front caved in on the Loblaw store and the frozen fronts of the others stand in the foreground while the gutted Loblaw store is a mass of twisted girders, ice and water.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

WATER FROZEN on the store fronts presented a weird winter wonderland (above) today as lines of hose still poured water into the gutted stores on George St. The lines were propped, eventually frozen into position. Several firemen stood guard, keeping an eye on the still burning buildings, while the remainder of the force answered a call to another fire which damaged a Water St. home.

DISCOVER FIRE — It was just about 6.30 p.m. when Arthur R. Long (left) and Allan J. Doney noticed smoke seeping from the Loblaw basement. They turned in an alarm which brought out all the Peterborough Fire Department.
—(Examiner Staff Photos).

BUD CRUIKSHANK cuts his way through a small opening at the rear of the Loblaw store to allow firemen to get at the blaze in the basement. The firemen hammered and hacked at the rear steel doors to gain another place to fight the fire. Shortly after they opened the doors, the building collapsed as the fire broke through in the centre of the store.

PERCHED HIGH on the aerial ladder a fireman directs a stream of water into the Western Tire and Auto store and the Superior Propane Ltd. These stores caught fire about three hours after smoke was seen pouring out of the Loblaw supermarket. Heavy, thick smoke, seen under the ladder, hindered the fighting efforts of the firemen.

JOHNNY CASEY, Peterborough Utilities employee, perches high on a hydro pole breaking circuits which led into the three burning stores from the rear. The large crowd which gathered at the back repeatedly went under the hot wires despite warnings from the Peterborough police.

Railway Asked To Remove Ridge Of Land

COBOURG (ENS)—Proposal of the town council that the CPR remove a ridge of land which obscures the view of northbound motorists approaching the D'Arcy street level crossing, has not met with action from the railway company and a reminder will be sent out by the town clerk that the matter needs prompt attention.

This street, in view of the ordnance depot at the north end, is a busy thoroughfare. Motorists have seven tracks to cross, as the level crossing is within the yard limits of both the CNR and CPR lines. The ordnance depot authorities have, erected additional safety signs but the ridge of land is the bone of contention.

A suggestion of a wigwag signal there is considered out of the question as it would cost the town of Cobourg, for the initial installation, $40,000 plus yearly maintenance costs.

"A big help would be if the CPR would only get busy and remove this ridge of land," said Councillor Jeff Rolph, chairman of the police committee yesterday.

Campbellford May Purchase Extra Hydro, Retain Plant

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS)— A special meeting of the utilities commission was held in the board room of the commission, when matters pertaining to the electric power situation in the town were discussed with representatives of the Ontario Hydro Commission.

Special arrangements had been made previously to bring the representatives here to discuss various propositions. The representatives were F. A. Adsett and C. H. Lusk.

Iu August last year, a joint meeting of the town council and PUC was held to discuss the power situation in the town. As a result of this joint meeting, town council sent a letter to the HEPC head office, asking for information on three propositions which were then before the town.

THREE PROPOSALS

The three propositions were as follows:

1. That the corporation of the town of Campbellford purchase outright a block of power from the HEPC and continue to maintain and operate their own plant under their own rates and jurisdiction.

2. That the town purchase a block of power and come under the Hydro Act but still maintain and operate their own power plant, as permitted under the act.

3. That the town sell to the HEPC the town power plant and become a municipality under the Hydro Act for the supply of electric power.

These three proposals were discussed at the special meeting with Hydro representatives.

The third proposal, that the HEPC purchase the Campbellford power plant, appeared to be of little or no interest to the Hydro officials. After discussing the first and second proposals at great length, it was decided that the second was what appeared to be the most suited to both parties.

Before deciding anything concrete on the matter, it was decided to ask Hydro for detailed information on the proposition.

The commission accordingly passed a motion by William Whittum and Mayor R. J. Locke (who is an ex-officio member of the PUC) asking the HEPC to present the second proposition at an adjourned meeting of the PUC in the board room early in April.

Merchant's Body Found In Store

CAMPEBLLFORD (ENS)—The body of a prominent local merchant, Stewart A. Anderson, 41, was found on the floor in the front of his Queen St. hardware store shortly after 8 a.m. today. There was a bullet hole in his chest.

The body was discovered by Sam Wilson, who had been employed as a clerk in the store since Mr. Anderson took over the business from his father in 1936. There was .30-.30 calibre rifle lying on the counter by the body.

Mr. Anderson had been in poor health and had spent four years in sanitoria in Brantford, Kingston and Hamilton. He had been home since June.

He was born at Morganston, a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Anderson, and moved with his parents to Campbellford at the age of six. His father founded the family hardware business.

He received his public and high school education in Campbellford and took an active part in sports and dramatic and literary activities at school.

ARMY SERVICE

Prior to the Second World War, Mr. Anderson was a widely-known officer in the Reserve Army, taking part in recruiting drives and attending summer training camps. In 1942 he reverted from the rank of captain in the Midland Regiment in order to go overseas as a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. He served overseas from 1942 until 1945 in the United Kingdom, Italy and northwest Europe.

He attended St. Andrew's Presbyterian church and had been Most Excellent Master of the Royal Arch Masons. He was a member of Branch 103 of the Canadian Legion.

He is survived by his wife, the former Helen Thomas; two daughters, Laura Lee, 16, and Mary K., 5, of Campbellford, and two brothers, Dr. J. R. Anderson of Toronto and Dr. E. J. Anderson of Kirkfield.

Indecent Literature

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP) — Cape Breton county council has approved a report of its law amendments committee, endorsing a resolution asking for a strict ban on indecent literature. The resolution also asks for appointment of a provincial board of censors.

Plan Re-opening Recreational Centre

COBOURG — Official opening of the recreational centre is scheduled for February 20. The building was erected three years ago but it was almost totally destroyed by fire last summer and there had been no official opening by that time. Rebuilt on a better scale and with greater attention to elimination of fire hazards, the centre is now completed. It has been in use for hockey and skating since early this winter.

Spicy Crop

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. — About 2,000,000 pounds of commercial mustard seed have been shipped out of here since last Autumn. Most of the seed, grown in this district, went to the United States.

Vanishing Coins

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Newfoundland nickles and 20-cent pieces are fast going out of existence, although banks have not been asked to take them out of circulation. Bankers believe most of the coins are being taken out of the province as souvenirs.

Named Secretary Chamber Of Commerce

COBOURG (ENS)—Miss Anita Boucher, who has been assistant to H. O. Taylor, secretary-treasurer of the Cobourg chamber of Commerce, was Thursday night appointed to succeed Mr. Taylor, who has resigned to take the post of registrar of deeds at the West Northumberland Registry Office here. She has been employed at the chamber of commerce office for the past two years.

P.L. Quip-of-the-Week

Several children in the kindergarten class were discussing the large families they came from. My nephew, not to be outdone, told his teacher and classmates that he too had a large family — a mommy, a dad, a little brother, a bird and about twenty fishes — "and all of us are boys except my mother."

City Accounts

Peterborough's balance sheet for 1953 showed a surplus of $29,315.03. Compared with an estimated surplus of only $259.42 this makes a good showing. It is always well to be in the black rather than in the red, and when the surplus is so substantial, it is indeed good news.

* * *

An examination of the accounts alters one's enthusiasm a little. The fact is that the city overspent its budget by $2,343.38, and as our news report last week showed, many departments overspent their allocations by much more than a few thousand dollars; if it had not been for other allocations not used, or some estimated expenses not actually incurred, the overspending would have been considerably greater. What saved the city from a deficit was a surplus in revenue, $31,398.99 more than estimated. Let us not, however, be uneasy about a deficit that did not occur, or minimize the happy fact of a net surplus being achieved.

* * *

The errors in budgeting were, on the whole, understandable because government grants could not have been exactly estimated; and they were minor in relation to the total size of the city budget. Peterborough's business now is nearing three and a half million dollars. Total revenue last year was $3,390,271.87 and total expenditure was $3,360,956.84. On such big business a few tens of thousands of dollars' imperfection in estimates is unavoidable.

* * *

The size of the budget leads us to say the following, and we have in mind the estimates now being prepared for the present year, the estimates on which taxes will be based. Every appropriation must be closely examined, so that there is neither waste nor extravagance; and we feel sure that the Finance Committee, Boards, and heads of departments will be scrupulous in making their estimates. On the other hand, a city of this size, with its opportunities, problems and nearly 3½ million dollars' worth of business, cannot risk being penny wise, pound foolish. It is possible to be niggardly, and to pare an estimate unwisely or refuse a grant. Sometimes a few hundred dollars or a few thousand in the right place can save more money than they have cost the taxpayers, and can give the citizens double the value of the cost.

It Is Not Up To Ottawa

In a sweetly forebearing editorial the Montreal Gazette says, in effect, that because the Duplessis Government is imposing income taxes on Quebec residents, Ottawa should let them off paying Federal income taxes, to the amount Mr. Duplessis collects. In other words because Quebec income taxpayers are to be taxed doubly, Ottawa should take pity on the poor people and leave the field to the Duplessis Government.

"Some 300,000 taxpayers in Quebec are now faced with the depressing possibility that they will have an increase in their income taxes. But whether they will pay the increase or not will depend upon the attitude that Ottawa adopts".

"It is now up to Ottawa", says the Gazette. It is not up to Ottawa. Who is proposing to do the double taxing? Who is making the increase? None but Mr. Duplessis and his Government.

If the taxpayers of Quebec do not want double taxing, let them go to Quebec City about it; it is up to Mr. Duplessis. If they do not like what he is doing, why do they continue to elect his Government?

The rub, of course, is that the people whose income tax will be increased because of the new Quebec levy are not, in the main, the ones from whom Mr. Duplessis draws his support. The new legislation is cunningly contrived not to affect Mr. Duplessis' farmers, who never pay income tax. One way and another (and not necessarily because their incomes are small) they are able to avoid Federal income taxes. Since the new Quebec levy is to be 15 per cent. of the Dominion rate, these people will be able to avoid the Quebec income tax. It will not affect anybody whose income is under $4,000.

Federal legislation allows Provincial income taxpayers to deduct up to five per cent. of the total Federal income tax, from what they have to pay Ottawa. Since the Duplessis tax is 15 per cent., the Gazette wants Ottawa to allow a 15 per cent. deduction. We presume that, if in the future, Mr. Duplessis were to raise his sights to 30 or 40 per cent., the Gazette would want that amount of reprieve from Ottawa.

The new tax is not the fault of the Federal Government. Ottawa had nothing to do with it at all. Mr. Duplessis, pursuing his stubborn independent Quebec path, is doing it at the expense of the people of Quebec. If they like it that way, let them pay for it. Incidentally, we see no reason at all why Ottawa should foot the bill for collecting the new Quebec income tax. We think, too, that it should not allow its income tax offices and forms to be used for this purpose; for thus, in careless Quebec minds, it may be made to seem that Ottawa, not Mr. Duplessis, has foisted the Provincial and extra income tax on them.

The Ceremonial Haulage Of Mayors

An interesting discussion has been going on in Toronto about the kind of car which should be provided for the use of the Mayor. As things stand at present, he is to have a Buick, but there are those who think this not good enough; the Globe and Mail hints that a Cadillac, as provided for the Mayors of Ottawa and Montreal, might be more in keeping with the city's dignity. It is only fair to say that the Star—last stronghold of rustic virtue and Common Mansmanship in the Ontario Babylon—thinks a Buick plenty good enough, and would probably prefer that the Mayor ride in a buggy.

This moves us to reflect upon the ceremonial haulage of mayors. The most famous Mayor in the world is unquestionably the Lord Mayor of London, who rides in a golden coach, now and then, and a Daimler when he is creeping about unnoticed. The Mayor of New York has the use of several cars, some with armour-plate and bullet-proof glass. The Mayors of Big Cities seem to lean toward Cadillacs, in Canada, and the Mayor of our Biggest Small Town will end up, we predict, with a Buick. Now where does that leave the Mayor of Peterborough?

With characteristic wisdom, Peterborough does not provide its Mayor with a car. We do not want to embarrass Toronto by maintaining a State Buick, and we would not want to see our Mayor in anything less. Our Mayors usually have cars of their own, and if they haven't they can generally thumb a lift with any passing citizen, for that is the kind of city this is. But our Mayors do a lot of walking, and we think it a good plan for a Mayor to go on foot as much as possible; it keeps him in close touch with the electorate, who will gladly buttonhole him on the street, though they might think twice about jumping aboard his car. A Mayor ought to hear a lot of talk, and he can best hear, and be heard, when he is moseying quietly along the main arteries of trade.

If Peterborough should ever decide to get a car for its Mayor, we suggest something distinguished — no marmoreal Cadillacs or paunchy Buicks, but a Jaguar, with nice bright upholstery.

The Queen's Taste

Complaints of a familiar kind are appearing in Australian papers about the royal tour; it appears that the Queen is being asked to do too much, and much of what she is being asked to do is dull. It was the same story when she visited Canada.

There is an easy way of curing this trouble, but we are sure that it will not be taken. It is simply to let the Queen do as she pleases; if she wants to spend her time with elderly politicians and their wives, eating large meals in circumstances of constraint and discomfort, let it be arranged for her to do so; if it is her pleasure to inspect thousands of troops, arrange for her to do it; if she is particularly fond of civil servants, let her mingle with those, and if manufacturing is her delight, arrange to let her walk through some factories; if she particularly enjoys shaking hands, there will always be plenty of hands that want to be shaken. In fact, let things be done to the Queen's taste, without consulting the convenience of others.

As, but that is not the Democratic Way of Life. Our system of limited monarchy demands that the Queen be the virtual prisoner of the wishes of her subjects. Not her taste, but theirs, must rule. Her task is to smile, and bow, and pretend that she likes what she is compelled to do, even though she may be weary beyond endurance, or swooning with boredom. Therefore, in Australia as in Canada, she will do what the local politicians think desirable so long as she has the strength to endure it.

Let us not deceive ourselves. Would any sane mortal choose the life the Queen has to lead? Would anybody, from choice, be pleasant to the people at whom she must smile? The last consideration in the Queen's life, is the Queen's own wish.

When a screen starlet tried to kiss a baby alligator it bit her lips. This is supposed to show foolishness on the part of the alligator but we should like a few more details about that starlet.

LONDON LETTER

The Millionaire In Decline

By KENNETH HARRIS

BRITAIN now has only thirty-six millionaires, according to the latest figures from Inland Revenue collectors. Last year there were sixty. In 1939 there were just over a thousand.

"It's like this," an income tax official told me with a self-satisfied, sated, gleam in his eye: "in the year ending March, 1953, only thirty-six British citizens had incomes of £6,000 a year after tax. To be left with that, you've got to be earning £56,000 a year, or have a million pounds invested at, say, five per cent. As a matter of fact, not all the thirty-six have a million pounds — some of them earn huge directors' fees. But they're just as well off as the others living on a million pounds worth of investments."

What happened to the twenty-four who fell by the way? "You never know — some of them may have died, some may have given a lot away. But in any case, when there were sixty in the bracket the tax on the bulk of their income was nine shilling in the pound; the following year it went up to nine shilling and sixpence."

✧ ✧ ✧

POKING around among other figures published by the Government, I find Britons are spending more on smoking, drinking, motoring and gambling, than they were a year ago.

I asked one friend of mine how he accounted for this, he said: "Escape — the people here are so frustrated they just want to spend their money on having a fling." Another chap in the same room, said: "Nonsense. They spend more because they earn more — thanks to living a better life." Several other people joined in at this point, and it was soon pretty clear that no one knew the answer.

I suppose it is a complicated answer. For instance it is not clear, even though we are spending more on drink, whether we are any more or less inebriated as a nation this year than we were last. We are drinking more in the sense that we are drinking more spirits, but so far as the consumption of beer and wine goes, we are drinking a lot less.

✧ ✧ ✧

MOST of the money spent on gambling goes on football pools. Every week some millions of Britons sit down with a printed form drawn up into little squares and predict the outcome of the football games to be played on the following Saturday. You can stake anything from a shilling to several pounds. Rewards vary from several thousand payments each, to a few very large prizes. In the last few months, one man has won about £80,000 and a dozen or so have won prizes of more than £20,000.

Last year our Chancellor the Exchequer took a cut of £20 million, out of a total turnover of £68 million, from the "pools." I remember when I was a boy at school being shocked on being told that in some countries the Government raised money by running State Lotteries. In Britain we are above that kind of thing. We let private individuals run the lotteries, and then the State helps itself to the profits.

THE CASE of Mr. Apa Pant, who was until recently India's High Commissioner in East Africa, still burns in the British Press, the conflagration having begun when the Daily Express alleged that he had been "kicked out" and that Indian merchants in East Africa were financing Mau Mau terrorists.

So I was glad to meet Dr. W. D. Lamont, a fifty-two-year old Scot, now teaching and lecturing at Glasgow University, who was the Principal of Makerere College, now the East African University College, for several years, having been sent out by the British Colonial Office to build Makerere up to university college standards. He was there when Pant arrived in 1948.

"Pant impressed me as one of the finest men I'd met there," he told me. "He was our guest several times and once he addressed the students. I think all of us felt that here was a man who was profoundly concerned with the same objectives as those to which the Colonial Office is explicitly committed."

✧ ✧ ✧

DR. LAMONT told me it was Pant's influence on the large Indian community of Kenya which struck him as the most valuable of his contributions to the public life of the colony. It was directed to persuading the Indians, who control more wealth in Kenya than do the Europeans and far more than the Africans, to cultivate an East African patriotism, giving their first loyalty to the land of their adoption.

Dr. Lamont struck me as being a dour, objective, unemotional Scot. If these are the opinions he holds of Pant, then I think they are the opinions for people like me to keep in mind, at least for the time being.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN BRITAIN, as in the United States, television is blamed for practically everything. In Britain it is now being blamed for the falling-off in trade which the smaller theatres — not the fifty or so big ones in London or the big towns — are experiencing.

The explanation being given by the actors and their agents is as follows: the people who formed the mainstay of the theatre-going public bought television sets for the Coronation last year, developed the television habit and passed the habit on to others. They bought their sets on hire purchase and are still paying the weekly instalments, spending the money which otherwise would have gone on their theatre seats. Result: several touring or "road" shows have done dismal business in the provinces, and two of London's suburban theatres have shut down.

If this is happening when Britain, with a population of fifty-four millions has three million television sets, what happens when Britain is equipped with television on the American scale? There, 160 million people have twenty-eight million sets.

✧ ✧ ✧

SINCE RETURNING from the United States, where I was always throwing up my hands and gasping with admiration at the ingenuity and efficiency of the Americans, I am becoming more aware than I used to be of the unobstructive and unpublished efficiency to be found, here and there, in Britain.

You find it just where you wouldn't expect it. Who would expect the London "Times," sedate "Old Lady of Printing House Square," for instance, to be as sharp as a Times Square bell-hop when it comes to getting out her editions?

The type for the page of parliamentary news we see every day in the "Times" is actually set in the House of Commons, a mile and a half away as the crow flies. Not "set" exactly; the compositor sits there and fingers away at the letters on his key-board, and the leaden letters are fashioned on a machine in the newspaper office. What could be slicker than that: unless it is the process by which the famous Scottish newspaper, "The Scotsman" obtains its Stock Exchange prices by a similar "remote control" method?

Letters To The Editor

CARELESS SPENDING

Sir: I understand that the city hires a City Solicitor at a yearly salary to look after city affairs.

Then why does the assessment department hire an outside lawyer to represent the city at the sittings of the Court of Revision? Also another lawyer at the sitting before Judge Kennedy on the adjustment of the Best property.

This looks like a needless spending of the taxpayers money.

Yours Truly,
TAXPAYER

MR. TUGGEY FOR THE BIRDS

Sir: I have just finished reading Mr. Fred Tuggey's letter which openly accused Alderman McBride of "catering to his mother-in-law" with the taxpayers money.

In my mind an Alderman is elected by the people and collects his vote by being civic minded, popular and honest. (If I remember correctly there was quite a spread of votes between Mr. Tuggey and Alderman Stan McBride who swept the polls in our last election). Mr. McBride's popularity and honesty are well known to the people of Peterborough.

In taking his hat off to Alderman Pat Anglesey who is taking such a solid stand against any grants being given to the nursing registry, Mr. Tuggey didn't seem to think it worth his trouble to mention any of the good services rendered by this organization to the citizens of Peterborough, or that in event of its collapse through insufficient financial support, the possible gains to our local Telephone Answering Service.

As I finished reading Mr. Tuggey's little script my eyes strayed to the next article entitled "Strictly For the Birds" and I couldn't help but think how much more appropriate a heading it would have been for the article written by Mr. Fred Tuggey.

As one of Peterborough's property owners, I remain

Your Sincerely,
JOHN R. LUTHER

NEWCOMER AND NURSE'S REGISTRY

Sir: It is with extreme regret that I have learned from your Feb. 9th issue that certain members of our city council have seen fit to refuse a grant to support the excellent service given by the Nursing Registry.

Such a service may not seem necessary to people who are lifelong residents of the city and have personal friends upon whom they can call in an emergency, but I would ask them to consider the several thousand newcomers, of which I am one, who have come to the city within recent years and are directly, or indirectly, tax payers. It is only through such a service as the Nursing Registry provided, that nursing help could be found in an emergency.

I speak from experience, in having had to avail myself of their services twice within the past few years, when they provided nurses for illness in the home, and more recently, for special nurses in the hospital after major surgery on a member of my family. In this last instance other efforts to find help proved futile.

I can only hope the City Council is as zealous in evaluating fully each and every one of the many other thousands of dollars they spend and demand the taxpayers to provide. I also feel that a certain member of the Council should have refrained from voting on an issue that had a relationship to his personal business.

I wish to congratulate those who founded and have carried on the local branch of the Nursing Registry, apparently without financial assistance from either the City Council or the Community Chest.

I would strongly recommend that those members of the City Council, who have no apparent personal business ambitions in the issue, reconsider their stand and allow the grant to be paid.

Also, if the officials of the Community Chest do not feel this service suitable for support, I would ask them to outline why the services which they support are more deserving.

Thank You,
W. H. JACKSON

Farm Publication

(Saskatoon Star Phoenix)

A new attempt at solving the difficult problem of getting up-to-date scientific information into the hands of Saskatchewan farmers is to begin soon. An authoritative news magazine is to be published four times a year, sponsored jointly by the college of agriculture at the University of Saskatchewan and several agricultural groups.

The quarterly is intended to succeed where it is feared, official bulletins have failed — in the acid test of readership. "People will read magazines, while they won't read bulletins," R. D. Ramsay, director of the university extension department, believes. Topics related to the application of the results of pure scientific research in the fields of machinery, soils, livestock, dairying, poultry, animal and plant diseases will be covered by expert authorities, along with such subjects as marketing. Members of the sponsoring groups will get the publication as part of their membership fees; it will also go to all officers of agricultural societies, all club leaders and agricultural representatives; and other individual farmers may subscribe for themselves. The first copies, expected to be available in Mid-February, may well herald the beginning of the end of the estrangement of the farm expert and the farmer.

JUST A REFUGEE

A lawyer was defending a man charged by his wife with desertion. For a time it looked as though it would be easy for the prosecution, but as the psychological moment the lawyer called the defendant to the witness-box. "Take off that bandage," he cried.

The man did so, exposing a black eye.

"Your honour," said the lawyer, "our defence is that this man is not a deserter. He's a refugee."

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

O Lord, thou art my God; I will exalt thee, I will praise thy name; for thou hast done wonderful things; thy counsels of old are faithfulness and truth. (Isa. 25:1.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Serve the Lord with gladness: come before his presence with singing. . . . For the Lord is good; his mercy is everlasting; and his truth endureth to all generations. (Ps. 100:2, 5.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust. The Lord is the portion of mine inheritance and of my cup: thou maintainest my lot. . . I have set the Lord always before me: because he is at my right hand, I shall not be moved. . . Thou wilt shew me the path of life: in thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures for evermore. (Ps. 16:1, 5, 8, 11.)

Behold, he that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper: the Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand . . . The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: he shall preserve thy going out and thy coming in from this time forth, and even for evermore. (Ps. 121:4, 5, 7, 8.)

Unconsidered Trifles

A Canadian from the shores of the mighty St. Lawrence had been visiting relatives in Richmond. Among other wonders of the neighbourhood, they showed him the Thames, hoping to impress him.

"Where shall we go today?" inquired his uncle of the Canadian one afternoon as they prepared to set out for a stroll.

"I know," he answered brightly. "Let's go round by the brook."

A girl who was in love with a jockey had persuaded her mother to see her fiance ride in a race. Mother took her position near the rails, and when the horses flashed past and disappeared, she snapped her mouth like a clamp.

"You ought not to marry that fellow," she said acidly. "I dislike a boor. I told him to look out for me, and when he passed he didn't even raise his cap."

A parson had occasion to reprove a small boy for swearing. "If you feel you must say something, just say 'brother'!" he said. "Your father doesn't swear, does he?"

"Oh, no sir."

"Well then, if he were working in the garden and suddenly stepped backwards on a rake which flew up and hit him on the head from behind, what would he say?"

"He'd say, 'You're back early, dear!"

Guaranteed Income

(Ottawa Journal)

And along comes the Canadian Congress of Labor to tell the Government that the trade union goal of guaranteed income should have attention. This would involve the Government accepting responsibility "for adopting and maintaining a full employment policy."

A "classic model" of the guaranteed income is cited. An Austin, Minnesota firm has about 6,000 employees. Each worker is guaranteed a stable weekly wage equal to 38 times his hourly rate, whether he works 38 hours or not. At the end of the year, if he has worked more than an average of 38 hours a week, he is paid for the extra hours. But the average hours worked by most employees is 36, so that each year about 100 hours are paid for that are not worked.

Such Utopian condition of employment would gratify the employer who is as much interested in security as his employees. But the cruel fact is that life is full of uncertainties and hardworking Germans and underpaid Japanese (by our standards) can create competition for Canadians and Americans and Englishmen so severe that business can be extinguished and sink with the colors of full employment, guaranteed wages and pension plans nailed to their masts.

Fabulous Farouk Royal Collection Goes On Sale At Amazing Cairo Auction

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Would you like a bloodstone bodkin case? Or how about a gold etui "of elongated bombe shape chased with cupids and lovers on a matt ground, the sides with sporting putti"?

These are among tens of thousands of items, valued at about $3,000,000 and formerly belonging to ex-king Farouk of Egypt, which go on auction sale today in Cairo. It's the biggest rummage sale of royal property the world has ever seen. The beneficiary is the Egyptian government.

Grab a dictionary and an armload of catalogues. You'll conclude that there couldn't have been many dull moments in the palace of the king of Egypt.

An etui, by the way, is a fancy case for small articles. A putti is a nude, cupid-like child. A bodkin is a sharp-pointed instrument.

STAMPS TO ORDER

Gold, silver, precious stones, weird clocks and watches, stamps, coins, fantastic trinkets, bravura bric-a-brac — all the unnecessary things of life that make the difference between a monarch and a mule-skinner will be auctioned off through next month.

Among Farouk's kingly passions was stamps. A spokesman here for H. R. Harmer Ltd. of London, the firm handling the auction of the royal stamp collection, estimates its value at from $300,000 to $400,000.

Farouk had one advantage over the average philatelist. When he wanted something special in the way of Egyptian stamps he simply ordered it made. Thus, for example, he had complete special sheets of stamps with "cancelled" printed on the back of each in Arabic and English on alternating stamps.

But even more curious are the tens of thousands of rare and valuable objects which are being auctioned under the direction of Southeby and Co. of London.

Here is a jewelled royal rattle in which the noisemaker, invisible, is a large ruby. Here is enough silver to keep a mint busy for a long time—Egyptian, Turkish, Chinese, Burmese, Persian, French, English designs in the shape of everything from sweetmeat dishes to candelabra. One huge set illustrates all the fables of La Fontaine.

JEWELED SNUFF BOXES

There's enough silver table service, including such esoteric items as asparagus servers and sugar sifters, to feed a thousand guests. Ewers, flagons, tankards, centrepieces, salvers, rose bowls, trays, toast backs—plenty of each to clutter the apartments of all next June's brides.

The citizens of a good-sized city could sneeze for a year on the snuff that could be contained in the diamond-encrusted snuff boxes. Here are 200 gold and jewelled zarfs—objects of egg-cup shape which hold handleless small porcelain cups of Turkish coffee.

Most of the world's great goldsmiths are represented with cups, bell pushes, stick handles, paper knives, complete desk sets, cigarette cases, bonbonnieres, miniature roulette wheel. There's a bewildering array of objects of fantasy in Siberian jade, crystal, bowenite, enamel and other materials.

It's only a small part of the thousand and one fabulous amusements of Farouk when he was king of Egypt.

Urges European Countries Step Up Canadian Trade

PARIS (Reuters)—The Organization for European Economic Co-operation Thursday called on European countries to risk United States competition in a stepped-up export drive to Canada.

It urged European manufacturers to push sales to Canada of small cars, quality clothing, watches, china and leather goods.

"Only by a more vigorous drive to the Canadian market—which they have largely neglected—can a satisfactorily balanced trade between metropolitan member countries and Canada be achieved," an OEEC report issued said.

The report also predicts that Canada's 1952 balance-of-payments surplus with other countries will be turned into a substantial deficit by 1953 figures.

RISING DEFICIT

It said a rising trade deficit with the United States and a small surplus with European countries would wipe out Canada's over-all trade surplus for 1952.

The report, a review of Canada's economy based on replies to a questionnaire, noted that Canadians conduct two-thirds of their trade with the United States and have a balance-of-payments deficit with the neighbor country. But it reported a current surplus with European countries.

Urging increased European exports to Canada, the report said European manufacturers should have no difficulty meeting United States competition as far as prices and quality of their merchandise are concerned.

Senator Davies Disappointed No Pneumatic Tubes In Subway

OTTAWA (CP)—Construction of the Toronto subway provided the post office with a chance to speed service which it seems to have missed, the Senate was told Thursday.

Senator W. Rupert Davies (L—Ontario) said in the upper chamber that he is disappointed that the post office department did not take the opportunity to put in pneumatic tubes to carry mail while digging was under way for the Toronto subway.

The pneumatic tubes could be used to send mail quickly from branch post offices in the north end of Toronto to the main post office at the corner of Front and Yonge streets.

"Even some 50 years ago mail was sent by pneumatic tubes from the Madison Square post office down to the main post office in the Battery in New York," he said.

"Here we have been building a new subway in Toronto and have not done anything to put in pneumatic tubes."

He said he hopes the Toronto postal authorities will arrange with the Toronto Transportation Commission to send branch post office mail to the main post office via the subway's eight-minute service from St. Clair avenue to Front street.

Seek Abstinence

TORONTO (CP) — The United Church of Canada has launched an appeal for 500,000 persons to voluntarily declare abstinence from alcoholic beverages during the Lenten season. In similar drives the last two years 200,000 members of the United Church have declared their support of the policy by signing "declaration of purpose" cards.

Man Must Earn $3,650 Year To Qualify For Maximum Housing Loan Under Act

OTTAWA (CP)— A prospective home owner, planning to build a $10,000 home, likely will have to earn $3,650 a year before he can qualify for a maximum loan under the government's new housing legislation.

This was indicated Thursday in a down payments-earnings chart submitted by D. B. Mansur, president of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, at a meeting of the Commons banking committee.

The chart was based on purchase of a new house costing $10,000, carrying a 25-year mortgage loan, taxed at $200 a year and carrying a two-per-cent mortgage insurance fee.

The chart also is based on the buyer's income equalling 23 per cent of the debt service charge. Mr. Mansur said this 23-per-cent ratio is not fixed by law, but is a CMHC "guide" which the mortgage lenders can follow.

In other words, the earnings must be such that not more than 23 per cent equals the montly repayment requirements, including taxes and interest.

The chart figures also are based on an interest rate of 5½ per cent. The exact rate has not yet been announced, but it likely will be in that neighborhood.

Thus a man wanting to buy a $10,000 house—to which is added the mortgage insurance costs—and having only $1,400 for a down payment, would have to earn $3,650 a year to get the maximum loan of $8,772.

The more cash he has available for down payment, the less his required earning power.

$100 Election Scuttle Didn't Exist

TORONTO (CP) — Former premier George S. Henry says a $100 coal scuttle that figured in a provincial election 30 years ago did not exist.

The former Conservative premier told the story Thursday as he and four other former premiers posed for pictures and exchanged banter on the floor of the Ontario legislature after the opening of the 1954 session.

He said there had been corridor gossip in 1923 that Premier E. C. Drury had used provincial funds to buy a $100 coal scuttle for the fireplace in his office. The Conservatives used the report as an election cry in the campaign which swept Premier Drury's United Farmers of Ontario government out of office.

The incoming Conservatives searched public accounts for a record of the coal scuttle purchase but could not find it, said Mr. Henry.

For their purposes, it did not matter, as the fictitious scuttle had already helped to give G. Howard Ferguson's Conservatives a landslide victory.

Will Order Inquiry Into Patent Act

OTTAWA (CP)—The government plans to order an inquiry into the workings of the Patent Act, the Copyrights Act and the Industrial Designs Act.

State Secretary Pickersgill made the announcement Thursday in the Commons, adding that Chief Justice J. L. Ilsley of Nova Scotia has accepted an invitation to head the inquiry.

Mr. Pickersgill said the government has not set any specific terms of reference for the royal commission.

However, the inquiry should be conducted with a view to protect the public interest against exploitation by undue rights of individuals over inventions and patents.

Junior Petes Win Final Fixture Against Red Wings

Red Creighton's junior Petes finished their regular season's hockey schedule with a convincing 6-4 victory over Roy Conacher's Midland Red Wings, Thursday night in the northern town. It was Peterborough's 19th win in 24 starts and gives the club a wide margin over the second-place Port Perry Flyers whom the Lift Lock lads meet in a best-of-seven league championship playoff series, commencing Monday, February 15 at Civic arena.

The game was fairly rugged throughout and studded with 22 penalties; the visitors held a fair edge in play throughout despite the shortage of five regulars but actually turned the winning trick in the final period.

RUGGED AT FIRST

Play opened in rugged style and Douglas drew an early holding penalty. Gardner and Hendrickson drew majors for scrapping, with the latter the aggressor, near the seven-minute mark. Petes fired their first goal with Bill Twist the marksman on a lovely backhander close in. Tim Hook passed the biscuit in a smart play.

Murray Yorke evened the count on a beautiful rush from centre ice around defence to pct his own rebound. With Bud Quinn off for holding, the Creighton men engineered a strategic play as Kevin Heffernan and Gord Coyle combined to score. Tension increased as Twist took the gate; then Ken Simms potted the disc on a pass-out from Gerow and Orm Barrett, with a man up. Midland took an edge near period's end after Belajac and Heffernan drew minors; with Johnny Lazotte the scorer on a low 20-foot drive through a maze.

Bud McDougall put Petes on even terms near the half-way mark in the mid-frame.

SCORED FOURTH

Red Wings scored their fourth goal early in the third as Reid and James worked in close on O'Brien with Reid sinking it. Not to be denied, Petes sped back to regain lost prestige and Gord Coyle soloed down to beat Reid with a sizzling drive.

Coyle repeated a minute later, as Petes displayed some of the form that has carried them far. He took a long pass near the blue line to speed in on goal, and fired a drive to the upper left corner of the mesh. Bill Twist tallied what proved to be the insurance marker near the three-quarter mark on a great play with Bob Gardner and Tim Hook.

The final minutes saw discretion thrown to the winds as Red Wings strove desperately but vainly to penetrate Petes' defensive armour. Hendrickson and Doris renewed their feud and a wild melee ensued in the dying seconds; six players were banished near the finish for their several parts in the fray.

Petes—Goal, O'Brien; defence, Frizzelle, Heffernan; centre, McDougall; wings, Doris, Coyle; alts., Gardner, Ferguson, Pue, Snape, Twist, Hook.

Midland—Goal, J. Reid; defence, L. Reid, Ritchie; centre, Gerow; wings, Simms, Yorke; alts., James, Barrett, Quinn, Hendrickson, Lazotte, Webb, Morrow, Belajac, W. Taylor; spare goalie.

St. Peter's Juniors Take Group Honors

St. Peter's High juniors swept through to take their basketball group series over Lakefield as they racked up a 58-10 victory last evening at the SPS gym. Ron Board sparked the victors with 22 points, with Don Quinlan being almost as effective to hoop 20 points in starry showings. Moore and Lean led the losers with four points apiece.

St. Peter's bantams downed their Lakefield opponents 45-25 in a game that had no bearing on the standing, as Kenner has taken this group. Tom Nolan topped SPS snipers with 14 points and Bill Mahoney was good for eight. Best for Lakefield was Perkins with nine points, and Bratian with five.

St. Mike's sent word they couldn't send their midget team tonight to play St. Peter's, while the Port Perry games listed for here have been laid over till Tuesday. However, the OABA Regents will take on SPS seniors in an exhibition tonight at seven in St. Peter's.

Lakefield Teams Reverse Losses

Lakefield bantams won revenge this week for their one-sided defeat at the hands of Kenner collegiate by edging the Kenner team 28-23.

It was close all the way. They headed Kenner collegiate 11-10 at half time. Henderson was top scorer for Lakefield with 12 points and Dean Elliott of Kenner with eight points.

Lakefield girls also reversed their loss from St. Peter's when they defeated them Wednesday night 57-33.

Top scorers for Lakefield were Nancy Doubt with 22 and Jeannette Staples with 17; and for St. Peter's Ruth Hickey with 19 and Rosemarie DeCarlo with eight.

P. Selby High Single

Dot Martin rolled high three of 757 this week in the YMCA bowling league for senior girls, while Phyl Selby led lasses in singles with a 311 effort. Mary Hepburn hit 293, D. Martin 291, G. Hamilton and O. Searles each 284, G. Mann and M. Arnold 278, R. Cullen 275, A. Willshaw 261 and C. Henry 257. In triples, M. Hepburn had 708, G. Hamilton 671, G. Mann 657, M. Arnold 654, O. Searles 651 and A. Reid 641.

Tigers took six points from Hurricanes, as Aces, Lucky Strikes and Bombers took four from Glens, Corvettes and Commandos in that order. Aces rolled high pinnage of 3085 and top single game effort of 1097.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Old prospectors used to say: "Thar's gold in them thar hills!" Modern footballers might well say: "There's gold in those grid thrills—gridiron ore to be dug up and marketed." Ottawa Riders recently offered Paul Cameron of UCL $8,000 for Big Four play. Some American players are also asking for bonuses to sign. A husky young fellow out of college is doing pretty good to pick up something like eight grand for approximately four months work, eh? Not all Big Four players get that much, and Canadians in the lineup aren't paid as well, usually, but they do pretty good, too, for a short season. Les Ascott of Argos must have put away quite a few shekels since leaving Peterborough Orfuns more than a decade ago.

The pro puck season is a couple of months longer than the football campaign, counting the training grind and playoffs. The rate of pay scales upward from a living wage in so-called senior amateur circuits, through minor pro, into the AHL, and then the NHL. Major league hockey has its rewards for the top athletes, fat pay cheques, bonuses, playoff money, publicity and prestige. Some pretty young chaps in the big time are about set for life now financially. A good future for young prospects who, if they make the NHL, will be able to retire or turn their cash into a lucrative business by the time they are 40. Players who rise no higher than amateur puck ranks should cash in on their ability and obtain good jobs while they can.

Peanuts In The Pan

An item from the Kitchener sports column: "Referee Jack Shropshire, who was in hot water all night when the Shirts played in Guelph on Monday, was sent right back last night. He had a rough ride and, according to spectators, deserved most of it. One fan tossed a full bag of peanuts which hit the Weston whistle-blower smack in the face." There are some poor arbiters in the OHA and fans are entitled to pan them plenty, if the fans wish. But we don't go along with this business of hurling objects at refs. Nor at players out there on the ice. It's not a brave thing to do, after all, as the ref or player has no chance to defend himself or to retaliate.

* * * * * * *

Hard, clean and smart hockey has resulted every game so far this season between Oshawa Truckmen and the TPT Petes in their OHA senior "B" clashes. Best battles of the group, we think. They've met six times so far in the schedule and each has won three of those tilts, so the squads (tied now for the group leadership) appear pretty well matched. Kingston and Orillia are tied a game and a half back of the loop leaders, and the race runs out in a couple of more weeks. Petes are anxious to finish first in order to get a crack at the fourth-place finisher in group semi-finals. Oshawa no doubt feel likewise, so they will shoot the works this eve here. Winner takes over top spot alone.

Jrs. Set For Playoffs

Junior Petes ended their schedule with a 6-4 OHA junior "B" triumph last e'en in Midland, finishing strong against the scrappy Red Wings of that centre. It wound up in rugged fashion, as many of these junior jousts do—the youngsters being unable to control their tempers as well as older players. Anyway, Coach Red Creighton's classy junior crew have won 19 out of 24 loop games in a dandy showing so far this seemester. They now hit the acid test, the group finals against the scrappy Oshawa team, playing out of Port Perry. First of the best-of-seven playoffs is here Monday night, and folks recalling previous meetings of these club know it'll be a hot one. Ports nearly mobbed the ref after their last tilt here. Don't miss this playoff opener.

Nominations Close Monday For Stakes

TORONTO (CP) — Nominations for 11 harness racing stakes to be contested at Woodbine Park, Toronto, during the summer, will close at midnight next Monday. Feature event of the Woodbine 35-day summer meeting will be the $8,500 Canadian Cup pace.

Officials of the harness racing meeting, sponsored by the Ontario Jockey Club, report that the early flow of nominations indicates that more than 500 trotters and pacers will compete at Toronto during the summer.

In his only season in the majors, Nichols won 11 games and turned in an ERA of 2.88.

PCVS Damsels Get Two From Lindsay

PCVS senior and junior girl basketeers defeated Lindsay opponents at the local Collegiate last night, the seniors winning 14-8 and the juniors taking a 25-15 triumph. Both were speedy interesting duels, and with fouls kept at a comparatively low level.

The senior PCVS damsels had only a 6-4 margin at the half, but they finished a little stronger in the second session to earn the close decision. Mary Raddon led them with six points, while Janet Collins clicked for four, Marg Dobson and Carol Hughson being good for two points apiece. Leona Chase topped Lindsay with four, as two each were counted by Carol Ann Webster and Arlene Patrick.

In the junior joust, PCVS were up 12-3 at the halfway intermission, the contest being much closer through the second half, PCVS clicking a bit better then on free tosses to roll up the count late in the fray.

Bernice Callan led the victors with eight points, Gail Ferguson having six, Joan Weir five, Marg Patterson four, and Dot Kingston two. For Lindsay, Gail Johnson came through with eight points, as Nancy Parker hooped four, and Mary MacDuff three.

Canadiens Edge Kitchener 5-4

MONTREAL (CP)—A goal by Claude Vinet at 3:11 of the sudden death overtime period Thursday night gave Montreal Canadiens a 5-4 edge over Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts in an interlocking Quebec and Ontario junior hockey game.

Canadiens had a slight edge in a clean, fast tussle that featured only seven penalties, four of them going to the visitors.

Denis Boucher and Warren Hynes gave the winners an early lead but Buddie Horne narrowed the issue at the close of the first period. At 8:12 of the middle frame Kitchener's Gregg Hicks tied the score.

Goals by Doug Vaughan and Gerry Collins put Kitchener to the front for the first time early in the third stanza but Montreal came back at 13:25 when Henri Richard counted on a pass from Vinet. Three minutes from the close Phil Goyette tallied to take the game into overtime.

Marmora Boys Get First Of Playdowns

MARMORA (ENS) — Through defeating Stirling midgets 7-0 on their own rink on Wednesday evening the local midget team won the first round of the OMHA "C" playdowns before 150 fans.

This was the second shut-out this promising young team has had this season and Prentice, the home goalie, showed fine form in the nets. Brady for Stirling shaped up well and made some good save. Harry Brooks did the hat trick for the winners as well as getting an assist. Darrah came next with two goals and two assists and M. Walker and Brady got the other goals.

The homesters got nine of the 13 penalties.

Landy May Run In Vancouver Games

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—John Landy, 23, who won the mile in four minutes, 5.6 seconds at the Australian athletic championships here Thursday, said he may run in the British Empire Games in Vancouver next July.

Australia's "meteor miler" said he would be willing to run at Vancouver if satisfactory arrangements are made for a planned Scandinavian tour before the games and if he can return home from Europe via the United States and Canada.

He hoped to make a decision about his future program within a month.

Port Hope Lasses Get Narrow Lead

Port Hope girls took a three-point lead in their district high school junior basketbal playoffs last night by pulling out a 24-21 win over St. Peter's lasses at SPS gymn. It is a home-and-home series, points counting, return game a week tonight in Port Hope. With Miss Mary Scanlon absent, due to sickness, the local team was coached in this tilt by Miss Carol Bosnell.

Port Hope took a narrow 7-6 lead in the first quarter, were in front 13-8 at the half, and 15-13 going into the fourth. Pat Scully led them with 12 points and Liz Ross had eight. Best for St. Peter's were Joan Heard with eight points, and Mickey McNaughton with six. Play was fast and clean before a goodly gallery.

Canadiens, Hawks Tied 2-2; 19 Penalties Given

By JIM BASTABLE, Canadian Press Staff Writer

There was another hockey brawl Thursday night. Montreal Canadiens were there again. This time it was in Chicaga, where Canadiens, never ones to back off from a touchy situation, overpowered the last-place Black Hawks for two quick goals, got mixed up in a rash of penalties and fights and had to settle for a 2-2 National Hockey League tie. It cost them sole possession of second place. The fans at Chicago stadium weren't expecting another blowout like the Toronto Maple Leaf and Montreal clash a few weeks ago, but they got plenty of action. Nineteen penalties, including four misconducts and four majors, were handed out. Montreal got 10 of them. A couple of fans slugged it out.

In the only other game, the Leafs moved into a tie with Canadiens by defeating the fourth-place Boston Bruins 3-1 in Boston.

At Chicago, the gloves dropped and fists flew in the first and third periods in four fights.

PUNCHES THROWN

The first outbreak started at 10:40 near the Montreal bench. Chicago's Larry Zeidel threw punches at Bert Olmstead as the Montreal forward headed for the bench. Then defenceman Gus Mortson of Chicago and Eddie Mazur of Canadiens tangled. Chicago's Bill Gadsby got into the act by leaning over the Hawk bench and swinging at a Montreal player.

Referee Frank Udvari got things under control 15 minutes later. He gave a minor and a 10-minute misconduct to Olmstead and majors to Mazur, Mortson and Zeidel.

It happened again in the third period. Bodnar and Johnson were in the penalty box for minor infractions when they started trading punches. That's when the fans teed off on each other. They were thrown out of the stadium by ushers and police and Bodnar and Johnson were given misconducts.

Seconds later centre Ken Mosdell of Montreal and defenceman Lee Fogolin of the Hawks began slugging along the boards in the Montreal zone. Fogolin was sent off with a major for fighting and Mosdell took a minor for roughing.

The game was also held up when Montreal goalkeeper Gerry McNeil twisted his ankle when Chicago's Pete Conacher crashed him against a goalpost early in the third period. McNeil returned and finished the game.

SCORED ON PENALTIES

All four goals were scored while somebody was in the penalty box. Mosdell tallied at 15:31 and Lorne Davis at 15:46 of the first period for Canadiens. Lou Jankowski tallied for the Hawks in the second period and Bodnar drilled one past McNeil in the third.

At Boston, veteran Porky Dumart scored his third goal of the season at 16:52 of the third session.

Dumart poked Ed Sandford's rebound past Harry Lumley after centre Ted Kennedy, leftwinger Sid Smith and defenceman Jim Morrison put the Leafs into a 3-0 lead.

The Leafs, now tied with Montreal with 62 points, are eight points behind the league-leading Detroit Red Wings. The Bruins are in fourth spot, two up on the fifth-place New York Rangers.

In two games Saturday, Montreal are at Toronto and New York at Boston.

Mercurys Blast Bulldogs In 10-1 Triumph

OWEN SOUND (CP) — Owen Sound Mercurys blasted Windsor Bulldogs 10-1 here Thursday night to move back into sole possession of first place in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A standings.

They are two points up on Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen and have two games in hand.

The Mercurys, running their goal total to 30 in their last three games, seldom had trouble with the Bulldogs, leading 3-0 and 6-0 at the first two periods.

FIRES THREE GOALS

Tommy Burlington fired three goals for the Mercurys, Roy Leckie bagged a pair, and the others went to Herbie Carnegie, Bill McComb, Elwyn Morris, Bill Hagent and Doug Gillespie.

Gord Haidy scored Windsor's goal with 58 seconds left to play to rob Bob Gillson of his fifth shutout of the season. Gillson had made 34 stops up to that point with a sharp display.

Have Agreed To Lower NHL Draft Age

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—National Hockey League owners, meeting here, agreed Thursday to lower the draft age for players.

Clarence Campbell, league president, said players 22 years old and under formerly were exempt, but under the new provisions all players regardless of age will fall into the scope of the draft.

Campbell explained that each league is permitted to "earmark" 18 players a year for its protective list, with all other players forming an intra-league draft which assured availability and distribution of players.

ANNOUNCE APPOINTMENT

Detroit Red Wings announced the appointment of Bruce Norris as its league governor, succeeding Jack Adams.

Those present at the meeting were Marguerite Ann Norris, Detroit; Gen. Reed Kilpatrick, New York Rangers; James Norris, Chicago Black Hawks; Senator D. Raymond and Frank Selke, Montreal Canadiens; Walter Brown, Boston Bruins, and Conn Smythe, Toronto Maple Leafs.

Galt Curlers Down Orillia 11-7

ORILLIA (CP)—Stan Sarjeant's host Orillia rink fell to its first defeat in the southern Ontario curling playoffs Thursday night when downed 11-7 by the Galt rink skipped by Normie Himes.

Also leading with records of four wins and one defeat are the Hamilton rink skipped by Ross Tarlton and the Toronto rink of Alfie Phillips.

Scores in Thursday night's round were: Bruce McClure, Brampton, 12, Bill Minette, Oshawa, 7; Tarlton Hamilton, 11, Bob Wilson, London, 10; Phillips, Toronto, 13, Jack Sands, Kingston, 10.

The Brampton and London rinks have scored three wins and two defeats. The Galt rink had two victories and three defeats and the Oshawa and Kingston rinks have lost all five of their games.

Scores in the afternoon round were: London, 11, Brampton, 8; Hamilton, 12, Kingston, 7; Galt, 12, Oshawa, 9.

In the third round earlier, Sarjeant defeated Minette 21-4 and Phillips defeated McClure 11-9. Tarlton downed Himes 9-5 and Wilson scored a 9-6 win over Sands.

Hyslop Named Trotting Head

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. C. H. Hyslop of Milton was named president of the Canadian Trotting Association at its annual meeting. He succeeds Herb Hatch.

Hon. Earl Rowe of Newton Robinson and Jack Climie of Tillsonburg were among directors named.

A coroner's jury recommendation was read to the delegates about the death of Harry Fields, who at 71 was accidentally killed during a harness race meet at Stratford last summer.

The jury's recommendation was that "drivers be required to undergo a medical examination before receiving a licence, and that periodic examinations be held thereafter."

The meeting took no action on the recommendation.

Havelock Victorious Over Campbellford

HAVELOCK (ENS)—Havelock defeated Campbellford Thursday night at the local arena in the first game of the OMHA playoffs by a score of 6-3 with the total goals to count.

It was a fast hockey game and was outstanding for the fact that there were no penalties. Neither side scored at the end of the first period. The local team led at the end of the second period by a score of 3-2 on goals by B. Rutherford, McLaughlin from Watson and Little from Cliff Chase. The Campbellford goals were tallied by Holmes and Beatty.

Early in the third period Jim Watson added another goal for the locals. Then Little scored on a set-up from Jim Watson while B. Watson, on an assist from Clifford Chase, rapped in another goal for the winners. McMillan of Campbellford got the last goal of the game. The outstanding player for the evening was Gary Whitney, the Havelock goalie. The Campbellford goalie also did good work for his team.

Campbellford—Goal, D. Haig; defence, Terry Baker, B. Seymour; centre, Darrington; wings, Billen, Kellogg; alts., Masterson, Keogan, Erskins, Holmes, Flint.

Havelock—Goal, Garry Whitney; defence, MacMillan, Reg. Scott; centre, Cliff Chase; wings, B. Watson, McLaughlin; alts., Little, Keith, Scott, Rutherford, Jim Watson, Don Wilde, D. Brunton, Bill Toms, Robert McKenzie. Referee, H. Hunter of Havelock.

Beaver Harvest

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—Game branch officials here say the winter harvest of Saskatchewan beaver may exceed the 1952-53 take of 23,000 animals. With the beaver population increasing, trappers have been allowed higher quotas.

10,000 WINNERS — These famous jockeys have ridden more than that, as a matter of fact. Left to right, with the approximate number of winners with which they started the Hialeah meeting are Charley Burr, 500; Johnny Adams, 2,815; Steve Brooks, 2,200; Ted Atkinson, 2,843; and Jimmy Stout, 1,900. Adams and Atkinson seem certain to join Eddie Arcaro, Johnny Longden and Sir Gordon Richards as the only jockeys with 3,000 winners.

Canadiens Get Fewer Goal Assists On Road

By W. R. WHEATLEY

MONTREAL (CP)—You can figure out a lot of things from the official National Hockey League scorers' reports—things that both coach Dick Irvin of Montreal Canadiens and general manager Jack Adams of Detroit Red Wings can pounce upon and scream about to their hearts' content.

For one thing, Canadiens get far fewer assists per goal while on the road than any other club in the league. For another, the same Canadiens get more assists per goal at home than other clubs get on their own ice.

The best place for a visiting club is Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto. There the visitors are graciously given more assists than the Leafs. The worst place in this respect for visitors is Chicago Stadium.

The official game-by-game score sheets that reveal all this, with the help of a little arithmetic, include all games this season prior to Feb. 10.

PET SQUAWK

Irvin and Jack Adams got into a long-distance shouting argument a few days ago over one of Irvin's pet squawks. The Montreal coach said that about all Gordie Howe of the Red Wings has to do to get an assist in Detroit is to be on the ice when a goal is scored.

Irvin said, too, that his own Maurice Richard, league leader on goals scored, is so much better than Howe there's no comparison.

Howe is top man on assists and total points, and Adams shouted right back that Howe deserves every assist he gets and is a great unselfish player. Adams implied he wouldn't trade Howe for Richard and the Montreal Forum thrown in.

Richard has scored 32 goals to Howe's 23, including two games not yet officially recorded in NHL files. Of his 37 assists, Howe has collected 24 at home and 13 away. Richard has 20 assists, 17 at home.

Richard has scored in every NHL city but has counted no assists in Detroit, Toronto and Boston. Howe has failed to score in Montreal and Toronto and has failed to get an assist only in Montreal.

ASSISTS ON GOALS

In their five visits to Detroit, Canadiens have scored seven goals, two by Richard. Nine assists were given on the seven goals, an average per goal of 1.285. On their two goals in Montreal the Red Wings were given two assists.

In the four games in Montreal against the Red Wings, Canadiens scored six goals and were given only seven assists, an average of 1.166, lowest accorded them in meetings with any club on Montreal ice.

On the other hand, Canadiens' average assists of 1.285 on goals scored in Detroit, seven goals and nine assists, compared with a 1.529 average given the Red Wings in the same games on 17 goals and 26 assists.

Canadiens' season average at home is 1.621; the average of all visiting clubs is 1.418. Home average for the Red Wings is 1.530;

WINGS HIGHEST

On the road Canadiens have been allotted only 1.380 assists per goal. The Red Wings are highest with 1.564, while Boston Bruins have a 1.418 average. Clubs entertaining Canadiens get 1.594 assists. When they entertain Detroit the home clubs get 1.473, a lower average than they accord the Red Wings.

The home clubs fatten most when the Toronto Leafs come calling, getting 1.666 assists per goal themselves against 1.461 given the Leafs. At home, the Leafs give themselves a 1.465 average, lowest "home" average in the circuit, and the visitors 1.592.

Chicago Black Hawks have a home average of 1.547; the visitors to Chicago get only 1.310. Boston Bruins rank close to Montreal on home-game assists, a 1.608 average compared with Montreal's 1.621.

PLAYERS REFUSE MOVE

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (CP) — Five players, including the American Hockey League's leading goal-scorer, remained on the sidelines today as the embattled Syracuse Warriors continued their steady progress toward the AHL basement.

The five, all former regulars in the Warrior line-up, are unwilling pawns in an experiment by Syracuse owner Eddie Shore, who last week ordered the transfer of virtually the entire Syracuse club to Shore's Springfield team in the Quebec Hockey League in exchange for a flock of rookies.

The Indians currently are dead in the QHL while Syracuse still holds fifth place in the six-team AHL by a four-point margin over Providence Reds. But Springfield has drawn better crowds and Shore ordered the mass switch, expressing the desire to find out how his rookies make out in the faster AHL company.

The suspended five, top-scorer Harry Pidhirny, Kelly Burnett, Keith Allen, Billy Gooden and Gordie Bell, refused to report to the Indians and were suspended by Shore. Bell was the regular Warrior goaltender, Allen is a first-string defenceman and the others are forwards.

Defencemen Dan Summers and Gordon Tottle, also suspended when they refused to report, have since changed their minds and now are with the Indians.

Meanwhile the rookie-studded Warriors took an 8-2 beating from Hershey Bears Wednesday night.

STAMPS SIGN LINE COACH

CALGARY (CP)—Don Campora of Stockton, Calif., former star with College of Pacific and Washington Redskins, has been signed as line coach of Calgary Stampeders of the Western Interprovincial Football Union, it was announced.

Campora, a six-foot-three, 280-pounder was first-string tackle for the Redskins last year for the first five games of the season. A knee injury prevented him from completing the season on the active list.

The 27-year-old Campora starred for four years with College of Pacific—from 1946 to 1949—and during that time was coached by Larry Siemering, new coach of the Stampeders.

Campora is attending College of Pacific and taking graduate work in education.

Fish Can Do No Wrong Says McGillen

ROSENEATH (ENS)—Outdoor Editor L. P. (Pete) Mcilleh was guest speaker at Roseneath Men's club, Wednesday night, speaking on the conservation of fish and health. His renown as a writer and speaker was accentuated by the fact that he is a native of that district, having been born and raised eight miles north of Roseneath.

His grandparents came from Fermanagh, Ireland, in the 1820's and carved their farm from the wilderness. His grandmother, Mrs. Peter McGillen Sr. is remembered as a capable mid-wife, never too busy to assist at a birth. The farm still goes under the family name, although it was sold some years ago.

"Fish were put in this world without the burden of a conscience or a soul. They live by instinct, doing what God intended them to do—and they can do no wrong," the speaker said.

ARTIFICIAL METHODS

Mr. McGillen was adamant in his distaste of game law breakers and poachers. He described the possibilities of increased fish population by means of artificial propagation, particularly the muskellunge. About 80 per cent of a hatch can be saved under artificial conditions, compared with 25 per cent in the best natural conditions.

"Everything we eat comes from the top 10 inches of the soil," said Mr. McGillen, paying tribute to the farmers. But he advised them to relax and conserve their health.

"If you're too busy to go fishing —you're much too busy," he warned.

The speaker was introduced by F. McMillan and thanked by Mern Brown. Keith Crossen and Clare Harper arranged the evening. Music was provided by Bill Montgomery, Carman and Murray Whitney, Elmer Harper and Roger Nelson.

Quick Shot Of Liver Makes Ranger Player New Man

By MEL SUFRIN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP)—A story with all the ingredients of a standard radio or TV commercial comes from the New York Rangers.

It starts with a hockey player who is feeling run down. His skates feel more like skis and he is barely able to drag himself over the Madison Square Garden ice surface, small as it is.

The hockey player goes to the club doctor who has just the thing for that tired feeling—liver extract. A shot of the preparation from the doctor's big needle and the player feels like a new man.

The hero of this tale is Don Raleigh, Rangers centre, whose spare frame has earned him the nickname "Bones."

But let the satisfied customer tell his own story:

"I was so tired Sunday night I could barely lift my skates. So when it was suggested I try an injection of liver, I said Okay. It worked. I never felt so good out there. Guess I'll have to take the stuff more often."

SUPPORTED BY MUZZ

But that's not the end of this commercial. It needs some authoritative support and for that we go to Muzz Patrick, New York coach.

He pointed to New York's 3-2 victory over the National Hockey league leaders, Detroit Red Wings in Wednesday night's game here.

"Raleigh's forechecking throughout was wonderful. He kept the pressure on Detroit all night. He's done that well for us right along but Wednesday night he played his best game of the season."

Raleigh didn't score any goals or get credit for any assists but the mere fact that he kept a team like the Red Wings off balance for a fair part of the game should be enough to convince the skeptics.

Raleigh wasn't the only Ranger to try the liver injection. Paul Ronty, Max Bentley and Wally Hergesheimer also got shots of the stuff Tuesday. Ronty is another good advertisement. He got a goal and an assist against the Red Wings.

Your Children's Aid Society

A Weekly Column Written in the Interest of the Peterborough Children's Aid Society.

"How much money do I have to have in the bank before I can adopt a baby?" "Do I have to own my house?" "I have been told that the social worker comes at 7 a.m. and stays for breakfast. Is that true?" "Do I have to have a separate room for the child?"

These are but a few of the questions which applicants for the adoption of a child take to the Children's Aid Society's office. But with these questions have sometimes been a great many fears which have prevented applicants from going to the Society at an earlier time.

What would you want for your child in a home? Loveing, understanding parents would surely be most important. Parents shold know their job or at least be willing to learn. It is said that parents can afford to make mistakes as long as they do it while trying to do their best and as long as there is true affection for the child. Surely it would be presumed that loving, understanding parents, who know their job would provide for the child's welfare—physically, emotionally, spiritually.

The financial situation in the home and physical set-up of the home cannot be ignored. The Children's Aid Society has never known about bank accounts of adopting parents. They do know about the man's employment, how long he has been in his present position, his wages, his insurance and his pension. They also know his financial obligations. They know the accommodation in their home.

The Children's Aid Society also want to know the religion of the adopting parents for it is their policy to place in adopting homes, children, the same religion as the adopting parents. But, and this is very important, the Society wants to know if people really want a child. Sometimes people feel guilty about not having a child in their home but do not really want one. It is so important that people who may go to the Children's Aid Society recognize this and are able to decide against taking a baby. This holds true even if only one parent does not want the child.

Next week, we will try to answer the question: "Why does the Children's Aid Society need homes in which to board babies when I have waited two years to get a baby for adoption?".

U.K. Scotch Drinkers Soon May Get Break

By ARCH MacKENZIE

LONDON (CP)—After 14 long years of iron rations, British scotch drinkers soon may be able to dip that stiff upper lip into increased quantities of the "delectable distillation"—if they can afford it.

Th government and the Scotch Whisky Association have discontinued the annual agreement that allocated most of the scotch whisky to the export trade. The association will continue to cultivate the dollar-rich export field, whose yield has been one of the main crutches for post-war British economy.

But the association wants to get back to the home market for a couple of reasons.

For one thing, Britons now drink about half the 6,900,000 gallons of scotch consumed in 1938-39. Gin, rum and brandy shot up in popularity as scotch was sacrificed to the Second World War and the battle of the dollar gap, so much so that gin actually outsold scotch in 1949 for the first time in years.

STABLE MARKET

The whisky trade is concerned about that angle and it wants a stable home market to fall back on if Canadians and Americans suddenly stop drinking colossal amounts of scotch. World exports reached record proportions in 1953 when the United States and Canada stood one-two in sales worth £37,700,000.

North American thirst for scotch appears insatiable, but the public palate is notoriously fickle. Whisky producers are aware of the plight of Portugal, victim of the decline and fall of port in British drinking fancy.

Hence the freeing of the market. But there are a couple of reasons why 1954 doesn't necessarily mean whisky galore.

Whisky stocks have been rebuilt to the 150,000,000 or so gallons of pre-war days, but the stocks then and now aren't comparable in age. Another thing is that supply and demand of scotch whisky seems close to the meeting point, chiefly because of the price.

Scotch—and Canadian rye—cost 35s today compared with 12s 6d in 1939. Seventy per cent of the price is in tax. The industry will seek again this year to have the tax burden eased but the prospects are no brighter than they have been.

Faced with the prospect of having to "sell" scotch again after all these years, the whisky industry probably will react with advertising of the main "name brands" in the 100 or so most important ones. There are many lesser ones, which have taken the place of the best known in their absence.

There's also the possibility that the industry will bid for the working class, which formerly couldn't afford whisky, but which is as well or better off these days than some of the old upper class. And it may attempt to lure the female customer with lighter blends—a horrible thought to the confirmed scotch drinker.

Boy 4, Burned In House Fire

HULL, Que. (CP)—A four-year-old boy was burned to death Thursday night and his mother was critically hurt when fire destroyed a two-storey frame house here.

Juergen Altena perished despite the efforts of rescuers to save him from the second-floor apartment of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Altena, who came here two years ago from Germany.

Mrs. Altena is in hospital with third-degree burns and a fractured leg. Her leg was broken when she leaped from a second-storey balcony.

A fireman also was slightly injured. The blaze destroyed the house and left eight persons homeless. Loss is estimated at $17,000.

Mrs. Altena managed to warn a family of five in the ground-floor apartment and they escaped. Mr. Altena was at work when the fire took place.

A National Disgrace

96,000 Persons Lost Lives In Accidents Last Year

In the United States during 1953, some 96,000 people lost their lives in accidents, and that, in the opinion of C. Russell DeReamer, is a national disgrace. Mr. DeReamer, who is safety manager for American General Electric, made this observation to a packed audjtorium at St. Peter's School Thursday night.

With him, safety is a lesson everyone just has to learn, that is, if they want to work on the law of averages and last out the proverbial "three score and ten." Unfortunately, a vast majority of people do not bother about learning and everywhere there is that philosophical attitude, "It won't happen to me . . . maybe the other guy."

SAFETY IN INDUSTRY

Mr. DeReamer is professionally more concerned with safety measures in industry. This is the place where unnecessary accidents make a continual heavy drain on manpower, money and time.

"Safety instructions, and more especially individual instruction, means money in the pockets of both employers and employees. It means increased production and improved working conditions," continued the speaker. "In this regard personalized safety instruction is the key to accident prevention."

Mr DeReamer described his experiences with mass instruction in factories. In one case it had been the means of raising the number of accidents. Unbelieveable, but true. A radical change to individual and personalized training had immediately lowered the accident rate. It meant additional work for executives but it paid off in the long run.

"We have done much in the field of safety already," said Mr. DeReamer. "Much remains to be done, and only a concerted effort by everyone will lower our industrial accident rate. Make up your own minds what you are going to do about your accident problem and do it."

"And remember—the life that you save might well be your own."

Mr. DeReamer spoke in Peterborough at the invitation of the Peterborough and Lindsay Industrial Accident Prevention Association and through the courtesy of CGE.

Prior to the address, the audience was entertained with numbers by Judy Welsh (tap dancer), the Note Wits quartette, PCI Dixie Five and three members of the Happy Daze Minstrel show accompanied by Mrs E. Foster at the piano.

Clarence A. Corbett presented the speaker with a sarouk mat on behalf of the Peterborough-Lindsay section.

8,700 MILES IN 29 HOURS—Two giant U.S. Air Force RB-36 bombers made a non-stop 8,700-mile flight from Tokyo to northern Maine in 29 hours. The planes took a "direct route course" rather than the shorter "Great Circle" course as part of a "research study of the jet stream in the upper atmosphere." Jet-stream tailwinds have been estimated at up to 200 miles an hour at altitudes of 40,000 feet. The normal, unassisted, maximum ground speed of the huge 10-engined planes is 435 miles per hour.

Dismiss Charge Of Discrimination

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario liquor licence board Thursday dismissed a charge of racial discrimination laid against the William Pitt Hotel at Chatham by the Joint Labor Committee to combat Racial intolerance.

The committee charged the hotel refused to serve beer to Negroes.

The board said the hotel management testified that Negroes had been served in the hotel "that one colored man employed in a store in Chatham consumed beer in this hotel for years, that colored people enjoy service of food in the coffee shop, and that the hotel has 10 to 12 colored employees."

Donna Hill, executive secretary of the committee, said the board's decision was "another evasion by the board of its responsibility in cases concerning racial discrimination."

A specific charge of discrimination, supported by testimony of four witnesses and not contradicted by the proprietor and hotel president was ignored by the board, she said.

Kootenays Gear For Expansion As Metal Prices Slumping

NELSON, B.C. (CP) — British Columbia's interior Kootenays district, home of Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company operations, is gearing itself for a large-scale industrial expansion in the face of slumping metal prices.

Disclosure that Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, Ltd., of Canada (Cominco) profits dropped in 1953 for the second straight year has coincided with reports of construction projects recently completed or under way.

Business men are confidently predicting "opening of a new era."

This optimism is based on a booming construction program that saw more than $42,000,000 worth of major projects started or completed during 1953 and the fact that the value of total production of agricultural, forestry and mining industries in the area continued near the $200,000,000-mark despite a drop in lead and zinc prices.

Cominco sparked the construction drive with completion of a $9,000,000 fertilizer plant near Kimberley and a 210,000-horsepower hydro-electric plant at Waneta, about 50 miles southeast of here.

CONSTRUCTION COMPLETED

Other construction saw the Crowe's Nest Pass Coal Company's $650,000 briquette plant go into operation at Michel, near the Alberta-B.C. boundary; completion of the $1,500,000 Canadian Pacific Railway's diesel maintenance plant here and East Kootenay Power Company's $1,200,000 power and storage project on Fall river.

The construction boom was reflected in nearly every municipality in the 20,000-square-mile area with new buildings, tourist resorts, housing subdivisions and churches springing up.

HIT MINING HARD

The fall in base metal prices hit mining hard in the district. The number of mines in operation fell from 75 at the start of 1953 to 30 early this year, with a resultant drop from 1,500 to 60 in the number of men employed.

However, mining authorities say this picture has been largely offset by discovery of new lead-zinc deposits with reserves running into millions of tons.

Lead-zinc production in 1953 dropped to $80,100,000, compared with $105,126,348 in 1952. The lumbering industry maintained a $25,941,196 pace last year in the face of a three-month strike which shut many of the 327 mills in the Nelson forest district.

$2 Box Of Candy Or $5,175 Heart Carries Valentine Wishes This Year

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—"Love is in the air," carols an Indianapolis store today in its windows filled with Valentine pretties.

"Win his heart with home bar accessories," a New York hardware merchant chimes in.

"Show her your affection with a diamond platinum heart," pleads a New York jeweler—price $5,175. That's affection? What price love?

That loving impulse couldn't be more welcome than this year when so many are a little unsure as to the trend of sales in general.

Greeting card makers appear confident that this will be their biggest Valentine season. They predict about 300,000,000 cards will be exchanged.

Florists always find the patron saint of lovers a big aid to sales.

The telephone and telegraph companies count on business from those separated by the miles, or by those who forget until the last minute.

CANDY MAKERS HOPEFUL

Candy makers are stuffing heart-shaped boxes with sweets and hoping that this year, in spite of the high price of chocolate, will see their biggest sales volume. If a swain is in the chips he can pay as high as $35 for a box.

Heart-shaped bottles are being filled with perfume. And this year a California vineyard is touting similar bottles for sherry and port. A New York delicatessen has heart-shaped salami, just in case that's the direction your affection takes.

A Chicago store reports that valentine promotions on lingerie have been bringing in a lot of customers.

The men aren't forgotten. "Give your beau a pink-and-black shirt and socks ensemble," a merchant counsels the girls. Necktie markers plug their wares as a surprise gift for a male who by now may have got over the shock of his Christmas cravat.

For the ladies the jewelers have Valentine bracelets, aquamarine heart-shaped earrings, or a cupid armed with a bow and arrow for a charm bracelet.

German Liner Calls

HALIFAX (CP)—The 19,105-ton liner Gripsholm glided into Halifax harbor Thursday en route to New York on Germany's first ocean passenger run since the start of the Second World War. The liner, built in 1925, was formerly a Swedish vessel and was used as a hospital ship during the war.

Ask Gov't Cut Cigarette Tax By 5 Cents

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's tobacco growers today urged the government to cut the cigaret tax by five cents on a pack of 20 in a drive to increase sales and eliminate smuggling from the United States.

The move would drop the retail price in most provinces to about 27 cents a pack, but it would cut federal revenues by about $19,000,000 in the next fiscal year starting April 1.

The proposal was made by a committee of five representing the Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Marketing Association which covers about 93 per cent of Canada's growers.

The delegation, meeting with Finance Minister Abbott—a non-smoker—said the tax decrease would increase cigarette sales by eight or 10 per cent a year. Smokers last year puffed a record 21,000,000,000 cigarettes.

This sales increase would require an additional 5,000,000 to 7,000,00 pounds of tobacco from farmers, "almost certainly bringing an end to years of acreage restrictions."

MEET U.S. COMPETITION

It also would help Canada meet competition from low-priced American cigarettes, currently selling in the U.S. at about 18 or 20 cents a pack.

And it would smash smuggling already drastically reduced as the result of two successive decreases in the federal tax—currently about 18 cents on a pack of 20.

The delegation said "professional smuggling" reached a peak of about 1,000,000,000 cigarettes in 1951 when the retail price of Canadian smokes was about 42 cents a pack. It dropped to 800,000,000 in 1952 when the Canadian price declined to 39 cents and to 350,000,000 in 1953 when Mr. Abbott and manufacturers combined to cut the price to about 33 cents.

The deputation, headed by F. C. Cunningham of Windham Centre, board chairman, said it realizes that the tax cut would pare federal revenues, but to consumers it would mean an annual reduction in costs of between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000.

EVENTUALLY RISE

And as for federal revenues, they might suffer for a few years, but eventually they would rise again, even to a higher level than the estimated $230,100,000 in direct taxes during the current fiscal year ending March 31.

The delegation estimated that if the tax was cut, direct revenues would drop by $31,000,000 to $199,000,000 in the next fiscal year. But they then would rise, increasing in the 1957-58 fiscal year to $242,000,000.

Even the $31,000,000 loss in the next fiscal year would be offset by indirect revenue gains, reducing the net loss to about $19,000,000. In a matter of two years the increases in indirect revenues—such as heavier taxes from higher producer and manufacturing incomes—would balance the direct losses.

Currently the retail prices of 20 cigarets ranges between 30 cents a pack, when purchased in cartons in some chain stores, to 37 cents a pack in Quebec, where a provincial tax increases the retail price.

AVERAGE PRICE 33 CENTS

However, the average price is about 33 cents. Tobacco industry officials estimated this price would drop to 27 cents if the government agreed to the five-cent cut.

The reason given was that the cut would be applied before the sales tax, thus reducing the price still further by the time the cigarettes reached the corner store.

This 27-cent price would be the lowest in many years. The officials anticipate it will be sufficient to discourage smuggling completely, thus further increasing sales of Canadian smokes.

Last year Canadians consumed about 21,000,000,000 cigarettes, the highest in history, an increase of previous year.

Pope Recovering After Three Weeks

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Pius, apparently definitely recovering from three weeks of dangerous illness that gravely weakened him, today continued to improve.

The Vatican press office said that he rested well during the night.

Thursday, in its most optimistic report on the pontiff's health since he became ill with a gastric disturbance Jan. 25, the Vatican said that the Pope had "set foot on the road to recovery."

Freighter Goes Down

TOKYO (AP) — The 7,115-ton Panamanian freighter Catherine sank early today off the Boso peninsula about 50 miles southeast of Yokohama. Its crew of 26 and master Joseph Bielic were removed Wednesday night. Loaded with grain, the ship was nearing the end of its voyage from Vancouver, Wash., when it went aground.

Wounded Guard Slain

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters)—An unknown assassin fired three shots through the ground-floor window of a hospital at Nyeri Thursday night, killing an African home guard recovering from wounds inflicted by Mau Mau terrorists. About 20 patients in the ward saw a hand holding a pistol thrust through the window. Before they could give the alarm, the shots were fired and the victim fell dead.

Shadowy Band Of Rangers Have Special Exercise

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—A shadowy band of men known as the Canadian Rangers will take part next week in exercise Loup Garou at Sept Iles, on the north shore of the St. Lawrence river 400 miles northeast of Quebec City.

For the Rangers, the name of the exercise is particularly appropriate. The rough translation of loup garou is werewolf.

The army keeps secret the strength, formations and operations of the Rangers.

The Rangers are not a component of the army, but have the status of organized militia. They comprize trappers, woodsmen, prospectors, miners, farmers and others who live in sparsely settled regions of the country, particularly in the north and some coastal areas.

The Rangers would play a vital role in event of an airborne attack on Canada. They may report any suspicious activities, round up enemy agents or saboteurs, act as coast or air observers, or perform rescue work.

GUIDES FOR TROOPS

They might also act as guides for troops unfamiliar with the terrain in which they were operating or become guerilla fighters.

A militia captain commands each Ranger company, which takes its orders from the regular army officer commanding the area in which it is located.

The Rangers are recruited mostly from men who would not be available to the forces in an emergency because of age or some other circumstances. Nearly all of them spend most of their time outdoors.

In the Loup Garou exercise, involving some 2,000 soldiers and airmen, the Rangers will first spot the "enemy" force, shadow it and report on its movements. From their reports and RCAF aerial photos, the paratroop assault force at Goose Bay, Labrador, will chart its attack.

Recalls Uprising

VIENNA (Reuters)—All work in Austrian factories stopped for five minutes this morning as a tribute to Socialists who died in bitter street battles 20 years ago today during a revolt against Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss' regime. Sixty-two men were killed and hundreds wounded in uprisings at Vienna, Linz, Graz and Steyr. Dollfuss dissolved the Socialist party and was murdered five months later by Nazi agents.

Vivien Leigh Returns

LONDON (Reuters) — Actress Vivien Leigh, 40, who fell and broke her wrist on stage Monday, resumed her part in Terence Rattigan's "The Sleeping Prince" here Thursday night.

You can't go "ALL-OUT" If you feel "ALL-IN"

These days most people work under pressure, worry more, sleep less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living, lowered resistance, overwork, worry—any of these may affect normal kidney action. When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and wastes remain in the system. Then backache, disturbed rest, that "tired-out" heavy-headed feeling often follow. That's the time to take Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's stimulate the kidneys to normal action. New System For Measuring Game Fish

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario has announced a new system of measuring game fish—from the tip of the tail instead of the fork—and at the same time added to the legal minimum length of some so there isn't much change in the size of a "keeper" in most species.

The new measurement brings Ontario regulations into line with those elsewhere in North America, officials said Thursday as they announced changes in open seasons and catch limits for all game fish within the province.

The two main changes in the minimum legal length were: Black bass, 11 inches, formerly 10; pickerel, 14 inches in Lake Erie and 15 inches elsewhere, formerly 13.

The possession limit for all fish was set at one day's catch, previously it was two.

The family fishing licence for non-residents was abolished. Now each member of a fishing party from outside the province must buy a licence at $6.50 each unless he lives in Manitoba—then he can buy it for $3.25. However, children up to 17 from outside the province can fish under the licence of one of their parents. Ontario has no residence licence.

There is a brand new season for ouananiche and Atlantic salmon, set because of their popularity in Trout lake near North Bay. The season is May 1 to Oct. 15 and the limit is one fish a day. Previously there were no restrictions.

RESTRICT WHITEFISH

For the first time, Ontario has restrictions on whitefish. The season remains open the year round in the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence river. But north and west of the French and Mattawa rivers the season is closed Oct. 4 to Nov. 1, except: Cochrane and Thunder Bay districts, Sept. 24 to Oct. 21; Kenora and Rainy River districts, Oct. 24 to Nov. 16; Lake Nipissing, Oct. 14 to Nov. 16.

Another new close season is for lake trout in northern Ontario. The closed season was decided on last year but was not announced soon enough for enforcement. This year the season will be closed Sept. 24 to Jan. 1 in the districts of Algoma, Cochrane, Manitoulin, Nipissing (from the French and Mattawa rivers north), Sudbury and Timiskaming and boundary waters between Ontario and Minnesota in northern Ontario. The old year-round open season on taking lake trout by angling in Kenora and Thunder Bay has been extended to include Rainy River district.

A later start was announced for the pickerel season in northern Ontario, except Kenora and Rainy River, with the opening May 22 instead of May 15.

In Lake Consecon, at the west end of Prince Edward County, a 22-inch size limit has been placed on pike. Elsewhere, as before, there is no restriction on their size.

Another new regulation is for sturgeon with a catch limit of one a day. Previously there was no restriction.

The regulation on the speckled trout catch has a new twist. Last year the limit for a day's catch was 15 fish or 10 pounds. This year it is one fish and an additional 14, with a 10-pound restriction on the extra 14.

There is a change in the black bass season in the section of Long Point bay in Lake Erie in the Big Bluff point-Normandale area. Previously it was open June 25 to Dec. 15 along with St. Clair river, Lake St. Clair and the Detroit river. Now it is classed with the rest of Lake Erie and the Niagara river for a July 1 to Dec. 15 season. In the rest of the province the black bass is as before, July 1 to Oct. 15.

House Approves Low Exemptions

OTTAWA (CP)—Legislation making dependents and civilians serving abroad with Canadian forces wholly or partially exempt from the criminal jurisdiction of foreign countries has been approved in principle by the Commons.

The bill Thursday received second reading and clause-by-clause study. It provides that dependents and civilians who break the law in countries where Canadian forces are stationed will be brought under Canadian judicial and penal jurisdiction. The country in which the crime is committed must agree to this procedure.

The legislation would apply mainly to dependents of service personnel in Germany, the United Kingdom and France. Through arrangements with the various countries where servicemen are stationed, dependents and civilians would be tried under the code of service discipline for breaches of local laws. The code embraces Canadian civil law and the law of the country in which the accused is living.

Mrs. Gordon Warner took charge of the program and led in a meditation. Mrs. R. Y. Cameron read the scripture lesson. A chapter of the study book on South America was reviewed by Mrs. William Breckenridge, Mrs. W. Sargent and Mrs. Aubrey Wood.

The hostess served lunch.

Liberal, PC Members To Punish Themselves

OTTAWA (CP)—A Liberal and a Progressive Conservative have decided to punish themselves for using the expressions Tory and Grit too frequently.

Jean Francois Pouliot (L—Temiscouata) said Thursday in the Commons he won't use the word Tory for a month. Davie Fulton (PC—Kamloops) promised not to say Grit for the same period.

A Tory is an old English word for a Conservative while a Grit is an early expression for a Liberal, but are used today in a critical sense.

Favorable U.S. Seaway Decision Before Summer

OTTAWA (CP)—Transport Minister Chevrier said Thursday a favorable United States court decision o nthe St. Lawrence seaway is expected before summer.

The minister, talking to a union delegation, said the $900,000,000 project is "progressing perhaps more favorably than at any time in its history."

His reference to a U.S. court decision was in connection with an appeal to the U.S. courts launched by American opponents of the power end of the development being undertaken by Ontario and New York state.

CAN ASK REVIEW

The U.S. Court of Appeals recently threw out the opponents' case. They now can ask that court for a review or go to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Mr. Chevrier said it is expected by the New York state power authority that a favorable decision will be given before summer.

Acting Prime Minister Howe told another labor group Wednesday it is "almost certain" that the seaway will be started next summer.

Battle Big Blaze

FLOOR DROPS

By now Loblaw's had had it. The floor, already broken through in several places, slithered into the basement. The Loblaw sign at the front sagged tiredly towards the sidewalk. Flames sped along the retaining wall between Loblaw's and Western Tire.

The two stores are separated by a concrete wall, this capped by a steel girder. The girder buckled into the walls and the flames were thus able to attack the tire shop from both above and below.

Only Thursday morning, Ralph Salmon, co-proprietor of the tire shop, had received a large shipment of goods for re-sale. These will have to be paid for even though his shop was completely destroyed.

Early in the evening, Mr. Salmon with his partner, Robert Kennedy, who entered the partnership only a week ago, was able to move some of his equipment across the street to the H. Cardwell concern. But smoke seeping through gaps in the retaining wall soon put an end to this. The multi-thousand dollar loss at Western Tire is only partially covered by insurance.

The Superior Propane firm operated by W. H. Lines was also totally wrecked, but there was no propane on hand to feed the blaze further. Propane firms are not allowed to keep this inflammable material on their store premises.

PAINT REMOVED

But there was a very real danger at the garage of the Peterborough Automotive Supplies behind Loblaw's. Here a chain-gang of intrepid citizens braved the billowing smoke clouds to remove dozens of cans of combustible paint. The garage, however, suffered relatively minor damage.

Focal point of the fight against the fiery flames, after the Loblaw walls and roof collapsed, were the walls between the Superior Propane store and Goodfellow and Dougherty, plumbers. Working from all sides, and from a water-covered roof back of the plumbing concern, firemen managed to win a close and bitterly-fought battle.

"It was touch and go for a while", said a relieved John E. Dougherty. At one time neither he nor his partner, Fred O. Goodfellow, would have bet a nickel on the firm's chances of surviving the blaze.

Believing his store might meet the same fate as the other three, Mr. Dougherty organized a corps of citizens to remove plumbing equipment. Soon more than 100 were thus busily engaged. One small-sized lad was seen toting out the flusher from a toilet.

The Goodfellow and Dougherty building was saved because it was not built directly adjacent to the Superior Propane Store. There is an air-pocket of three or four inches between the two stores, and both are equipped with solid concrete walls. Firemen were thus able to feed streams of water into the narrow space between, creating an icy buffer between the two.

Comparatively minor damage, mostly from water in the basement, was caused to the plumbing firm. But firemen took no chances. Furniture from apartments above Goodfellow and Dougherty was carried outside by Boy Scouts and assisting citizens, with lighter material tossed from the slippery roof at the back to waiting arms of young lads below.

Theories vary on the cause and fierceness of the fire. For a while it was more or less isolated in the rear of the basement, and firemen concentrated their ammunition at the back. But it did not stay isolated long.

One theory has it that flames jumped to various basement electrical connections before PUC linesman Johnny Casey had a chance to clip the feed-in wires. Another is that burning oil-lines soon fed the flames to all corners of the Loblaw basement and so up through the store.

65 EMPLOYEES

But however it started, 65 Loblaw employees won't be serving customers today. Store manager Carl Greensides said that he could not estimate total damages, but that a thorough investigation was being launched by the Toronto head offices of the Loblaw company.

Loblaw's has not had a very happy recent fire history. In the past year fire has destroyed Loblaw stores at London and in Aurora.

Unless the fire was already started while employees were in the store, it must have got under way between 6:20 and 6:25 p.m. Thursday. The last of the clean-up workers left the store at approximately 6:20 and the alarm was turned in about five minutes later.

The alarm was turned in by Allan J. Doney and Arthur R. Long, agents for the Great West Life Assurance Co. They had just left their office when they noticed smoke seeping from the basement. They turned in a fire-call which soon became a general alarm as practically the entire Peterborough Fire Department under Chief William Sorrie turned out.

Unsung heroes of the fire were the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, the St. John Ambulance and the Boy Scouts. The Salvationists, under Maj. Horace Roberts, gave out coffee and food to the firemen. The Boy Scouts patrolled dangerously close to the blaze with the coffee-pots, and also did yeoman service helping to clear out the threatened stores and apartments. The Red Cross, St. John Ambulance were on hand, helping with oxygen masks for the firemen and ready to speed any injured to hospital. There were, however, no casualties.

It was not until well after midnight that the fire seemed even partially subdued. By 2 a.m. Goodfellow and Dougherty's seemed well out of danger, but firemen will be on hand throughout Friday to make sure the blaze is finally extinguished.

In such a fire as this there is always danger that embers may be smouldering, showering spark fragments to other buildings. Thursday some firemen were atop the Elliott Stationery and other buildings across George St. to ensure that the wind did not carry the fire there.

Full Division For French Korean Offer

SEOUL (AP)—South Korea has offered to send a full army division to help the French fight the Communist-led Vietminh in Indo-China, Foreign Minister Pyun Yung Tai said today.

Pyun said in an interview with this correspondent "it is quite probable" that Red China might retaliate by sending one or more of its divisions to help the Reds there.

The foreign minister said President Syngman Rhee wrote of his proposed offer to Gen. John E. Hull, United States Far East commander, before Hull went to Washington a few days ago.

OFFERS ONE DIVISION

Diplomatic sources in Washington said Rhee offered one and possibly two divisions.

Hull said South Korea had not offered two divisions, but declined further comment.

Pyun said the South Korean contribution to the Indo - China war "would have to be sharply limited" but that he felt the gesture important as a symbol of anti-Communist solidarity. During almost all of the Korean war France maintained a French battalion in the United Nations forces.

The UN command, Pyun said, has made no comment on the suggestion.

Planning To Launch War On Weeds

TORONTO (CP)—War on weeds that cause hay fever is to be launched by a bill expected to be presented to the Ontario legislature within a few days.

Sponsored by the agriculture department and supported by the health department, it will define weeds held to be hay fever causes, set out steps that must be taken to wipe them out, and include penalties for persons who permit the weeds, including ragweed and goldenrod, to flourish.

Cattle Trade Very Dull During Week

Good to choice veal calves were active and strong with other grades steady. Hogs and sows advanced $1 and stags held steady. Sheep and lambs were unchanged.

A cattle run of 6,198 head, including 600 westerns, added to 500 carried from last week. Choice light and weighty steers closed at $18, early tops $19; good steers $17-18; mediums downward to $15. Gov't Tightening Guard Against Time Bombing Of Aircraft In Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—The government plans to tighten its guard against any time-bombing of aircraft.

The 1949 disaster near Quebec City when a time bomb aboard a Canadian Pacific Airlines plane killed 23 persons cropped up Thursday during Commons debate on amendments to the Explosives Act.

Mines Minister Prudham said the government plans to have transport department officials at airports inspect all express and baggage placed aboard passenger aircraft to see if they contain explosives.

If the plan is adopted, the officials would be made special inspectors under the Explosives Act.

The question was raised by Rodney Adamson (PC — York West) who moved an amendment to the act under which air lines would appoint the inspectors. He withdrew the amendment after Mr. Prudham outlined the government's plan.

Mr. Adamson said close inspection would prevent recurrence of the 1949 tragedy in Quebec.

THREE HANGED

J. Albert Guay of Quebec City master-minded the time-bombing to kill his wife, Rita. He was convicted of murder and hanged, as were Mrs. Arthur Pitre, who put the bomb on the plane, and Genereux Ruest, a watchmaker who made the bomb.

Mr. Adamson said there have been at least seven similar cases in other parts of the world. Three were successful and four failed when the bomb did not explode.

The Commons defeated, by a standing vote of 54 to 17, a CCF amendment opposed to granting police the power to make an arrest without a warrant where they believe the Explosives Act is being violated.

Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre), who moved the amendment, said such power of arrest constitutes a departure from established principles of justice.

Justice Minister Garson said the power is needed to protect the public against "a future Mr. Guay."

VOL. CVII. No. 36 — FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1954 — PRICE FIVE CENTS

WHILE STANDING GUARD over the $500,000 Loblaw fire early today, Peterborough firemen were called to fight a house fire (above) at the home of John Ross, 862 Water St. Frank Wood, 858 Water St., noticed the fire about 7:30 a.m., ran to the Ross home and awakened the two Ross sons and Arthur Ramsey who were still sleeping. About $1,000 damage was done to the rear of the house and the roof. Hot coals in a wooden box in a shed were the cause.

Approve Levy Of $835,000 For Schools

Board of Education Forward Estimates To City Council

The board of education Thursday night aproved their finance committee's recommendation for a municipal levy of $835,000 to keep up their rapidly-expanding school system this year.

This levy is 9.57 per cent more than in 1953, but it is roughly proportionate to the increase in the number of primary and secondary school pupils.

The Peterborough board of education have 13 public schools to look after, attended by 5,250 pupils, and two secondary schools —PCVS and Kenner—attended by another 1,480 pupils.

The board's levy will now be forwarded to city council who are making up their estimates for the year. If council think that the $835,000 is too much, they can request the board to do a bit of paring. But city council themselves cannot make the cuts.

APPROXIMATE RATES

At the finance committee meeting Tuesday night, K. S. Wightman, superintendent of schools, gave an estimate of the rate that will be struck for educational purposes. (The exact rate won't be known until city council makes their estimates.)

Approximate rates:

Public school rate—11.02 mills on an assessment of $52,976,775, or 3.25 mills less than in 1953;

Collegiate rate—4.24 mills on an assessment of $59,180,135, or .97 mills less than in 1953.

There was little discussion among the board members when Dr. Donald Whyte, chairman of finance, introduced the budget. Most of them had already scrutinized the budgets of the individual committees as they were drawn up during the past few weeks. And all the committee chairman were at Tuesday's meeting of the finance committee when the 1954 levy was proposed.

TOTAL SPENDING

Total disbursements in 1954 are estimated at $1,252,000 and total receipts are estimated at $417,090. The difference between the two is the amount that must be raised through city taxes.

Biggest item under disbursements is the cost of instruction. It comes to $900,140—or about 72 per cent of the total. This includes teachers' salaries and cost-of-living bonuses, supply teachers' salaries, night school teachers' salaries, retiring allowance for teachers, and miscellaneous wages.

General grants from the department of education make up $250,300 of the total year's receipts of $417,090. Other sources of money that will be paid in: war-time housing (by special arrangement with the city)—$3,996.70; rentals — $3,100; non-resident fees — $122,200; night school fees—$4,000. The balance brought forward from last year is $33,516.29.

The board passed a resolution Thursday night asking city council for monthly payments to make up their total levy of $835,000. The amount requested is $90,000 for each month—January, February and March; $100,000 in April May and June; $35,000 in July and August; $60,000 in September, October and November; and $15,000 in December.

The muncipal levy for the board od education in 1953 was $762,810, which was an increase of more than six per cent over 1952.

RETIRED BAPTIST minister, the Rev. Albin Anderson, 83, of Asphodel township was killed in the driveway of his home on Thursday afternoon while assisting a coal truck driver whose truck was stuck on the roadway.

Minister Killed By Coal Truck In His Driveway

NORWOOD (ENS)—The Rev. Albin Anderson, an 83-year-old retired minister, was killed Thursday afternoon in the driveway of his Asphodel township home when he was run down by a coal truck.

Mr. Anderson was spreading ashes behind the coal truck when the spinning wheels suddenly found traction and the vehicle moved backward. The steel section of the tail gate struck him across the back, knocking him to the snow-covered ground. And the inside right rear dual wheel ran up the left side of his body, breaking six ribs and puncturing a lung.

DIED ON WAY TO HOSPITAL

He died while being rushed to Civic Hospital in Warner's ambulance.

Coroner Dr. H. G. Carleton said there wouldn't be either a post mortem or an inquest.

The three-ton coal truck, owned by H. M. Fowlds and Son of Hastings, was being driven by Myenhuis Christians, 18, of Hastings, and was carrying about a ton of coal to heat the elderly minister's home. Frank Thompson, 45, also of Hastings, was assisting the driver.

To get to the Anderson house the truck had to back 100 feet up a sloping driveway, north of Highway 7. The house is half a mile east of Norwood.

Mr. Anderson, anticipating the arrival of the truck, had shovelled out a double track so the truck's tires could get a grip on the driveway surface. When the vehicle still had difficulty getting up the slope Mr. Anderson went back to the house for a can of ashes to sprinkle on the tracks.

Thompson, on one side of the truck, was directing Christians so he could keep in the tracks. Neither was paying much attention to Mr. Anderson who kept spreading ashes.

DID NOT SEE ACCIDENT

After the truck had lurched backward and Mr. Anderson had been partly run over, Thompson realized something was wrong. He shouted to Christians who went back and found the fatally-injured man lying face down in the snow. The inside dual wheel had pinched the left side of his body from the hip to the armpit.

Dr. A. R. Atkinson of Norwood was called and Mr. Anderson was taken by ambulance to Peterborough, but he died before reaching the hospital.

OPP Corporal Jack Munro and Constables Don Lacombe and Douglas Ross investigated the fatal accident.

BORN IN SWEDEN

Mr. Anderson was born 83 years ago in Sweden. He lived in the Norwood district for the last 35 years.

He came to Canada when he was 18 years of age. After graduating in theology he became a missionary in western Canada. Later he continued his ministry at Deer Lake in the Sudbury district. When he retired from the active ministry he moved to Norwood, and after that he only took occasional services.

Left are his widow, the former Isabel McMahon; a daughter, Mrs. J. Parsons of Peterborough; and two sons, Arthur of Sudbury and John of Norwood.

His body is resting at the Nisbett funeral home, Peterborough, and the funeral service will be 2 p.m. Saturday in Murray Street Baptist church with the Rev. Ivan C. Morgan officiating. Burial will be in Little Lake cemetery.

Board Of Education Gets Three-Year Contract With Collegiate Teachers

$200 of Cost-of-Living Bonus Guaranteed by School Board With $5,600 Minimum-Maximum

City high school teachers and the board of education have reached a three-year agreement on the minimum-maximum salaries to be paid. Public school teachers reached an agreement with the board's special salary committee before Christmas, but negotiations had to be continued with the high school teachers.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Mrs. Anne Rowell, chairman of the appointments committee, made the following recommendation at the February meeting: "that the minimum-maximum for secondary school teachers be $5,600 (with corresponding maxima of $5,700 for specialists and $5,900 for heads of deparements) under the following conditions":

1. No further changes in maximum salaries until Dec. 31, 1957, except where the average minimum-maximum of cities in the same class as Peterborough have a schedule varying as much as $400 from the Peterborough figure of $5,600.

2. That $200 of the present cost-of-living allowance is to be included in the maximum stated, and this is guaranteed for the duration of the agreement. The allowance is to be calculated on the same basis as before and any amount over $200 will be paid in December.

3. The agreement on maximum salaries does not bar discussions on minor points in the salary schedule.

4. The board, through its salary committee, will give further study this year to the request for accelerated increments to senior teachers.

Further committee recommendations:

1. Maximum salaries of the heads of vocational and commercial departments are to be adjusted to maintain the same relation as there is between the maximum salaries of heads of academic departments.

2. A guarantee to all employees that the cost-of-living bonus will not be less than $200 in 1954.

3. No change is to be made in the maximum salary of the PCVS librarian.

TO DEBATE HERE

Debating teams of Junior Farmers from Peel and Carleton counties are coming to Peterborough during the Central Ontario Spring Show, March 16-19, for the semi-final round of the provincial county competition.

See No Let-up As Cold Wave Hits District

Peterborough and district seemed to be in the shadow of the pole Thursday night, as some of the most frigid temperatures of the year were recorded.

James Harrison, chief engineer at the filtration plant, holds out no hope for a more temperate weekend. It is unlikely, he said, that temperatures will be able to crawl as high as zero.

As firemen battled the Loblaw blaze, the mercury dropped steadily until it was cowering somewhere near the bottom of the thermometer. It was three below zero at midnight, dropping to an overnight low of 15 below.

LAKESHORE

Along the lakeshore an icy breeze sent the thermometer down to eight below in Cobourg. Weather in lakeshore towns is usually at least comparatively mild.

Further inland, at Roseneath and Coldsprings, temperatures were even chillier. Both spots showed overnight lows of 20 below.

Northern sections seemed even colder than they actually were as a frigid north wind blew through Bancroft and Apsley. The department of highways reported 22 below in Bancroft and 20 below in Apsley.

Over in Norwood, a low of 16 below zero was reported. The prognosis everywhere is for more cold.

OSHAWA ENDS CONTROL

Rent control in Oshawa ends March 2. That action will put housing accommodation in the open market, affected chiefly by supply and demand.

CONDITION SATISFACTORY

John Eggleton, 27, a city fireman who was overcome with smoke while fighting the Loblaw store fire Thursday night, was taken to the Civic hospital. His condition this morning was reported to be satisfactory.

MAKING PROGRESS

St. Joseph's hospital reported today that three-year-old John DuBeau who was seriously burnt last Sunday, was making favorable progress. John suffered extensive burns in a flash fire at his home in Havelock, and was rushed to hospital in a critical condition.

TRAFFIC BLOCKED

This morning, because of the Loblaw fire, George St. traffic was routed along Water St. by the riverside lane between Sherbrooke and Dalhousie streets. Just before noon, even this thoroughfare was blocked. A big transport was backed into the National Grocers warehouse on the south side of Dalhousie St. Then, across the way, another transport backed up to the building on the north side and proceeded to unload. The passageway left between the two big trucks was hardly big enough for a bicycle. That didn't seem to worry either of the transports, although lines of both north and south-bound traffic were completely stymied. Some motorists were able to extricate themselves by squeezing down the track at Wolfe St. beside the railway.

Hot Ashes In Wooden Box Blamed For Fire In House

Hot ashes in a wooden box started a fire at John C. Ross's home, 862 Water St., at 7:39 a.m. today. The flames gutted a wooden shed behind the seven-room frame house and damaged the back end of the house as well. Damage is estimated at more than $1,000 and is partly covered by insurance.

ROUSED BY NEIGHBOR

Mr. Ross's two young sons and his brother-in-law were sleeping in the house at the time and were roused by a neighbor, Frank Wood of 858 Water St., who saw the smoke as he was waiting for a bus outside the Coffee Shop on Hilliard St.

The two boys—David, aged six, and Donald, age 10—were carried from the smoke-filled house by Tom Kennedy and James Foley. The thermometer was registering 13-below zero at the time, and the two boys, in their barefeet and pyjamas, were taken to a neighbor's home.

There was no time to look around for their clothing.

It was the second Peterborough fire in 14 hours. Some of the night shift of firemen who had fought the $500,000 Loblaw block fire last night and early today, and were just ready to be relieved, had to turn out for an extra hour to fight this second fire.

"I was waiting on the corner for a bus when I saw smoke coming from the shed behind the house," Mr. Wood said later. "So I went across the road, opened the back kitchen which was full of smoke, and gave them a shout."

NO SIGN OF FLAMES

"At that stage there was no sign of flames—just smoke coming in from the back shed.

"Two other men (Messrs. Kennedy and Foley) carried the boys out."

The third resident who was sleeping when Mr. Wood arrived was Arthur Ramsey, a brother-in-law of Mr. Ross, who boards there.

Donald then phoned his father who had previously checked the coal fires and gone to a friend's place to feed some chickens after coming home from the night shift at Canadian Raybestos. When Mr. Ross got back home, after a half-hour's absence, he found the back shed afire and the house full of smoke.

Finding himself unable to breathe properly he was forced to retreat downstairs without saving any of the bedding or clothing in the bedroom. Firemen covered the interior with tarpaulines but there will still be heavy water and smoke damage.

The flames spread from the shed, which contained a lawnmower and other garden tools, into the kitchen wall and then got up into the eaves. Firemen had to chop a hole in the roof and in the ceiling of the rear bedroom to prevent the whole house from igniting.

TASK COMPLICATED

Sawdust had been used as insulation and this complicated the job of the firefighters in snuffing out the blaze.

Mr. Ross bought the old frame house from David Humber about a year ago, and he had bought about $1,500 worth of furniture in the meanwhile. None of it was burned, but there will be some loss caused by water and smoke.

Mrs. Ross was away at work when the fire was reported.

No Resignation Coming From Police Chief

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS). — Chief Constable Charles H. Lockwood has declined to hand in his resignation as this town's chief of police. At the same time he wished to make it clear he had not been fired by town council.

The Examiner was in error in reporting Chief Lockwood was fired. Town council had, instead, passed a resolution to send him a letter asking for his resignation. He was offered one month's pay in lieu of notice.

AWAIT INVESTIGATION

The chief said today he had informed the head of the police committee and the mayor "there will be no resignation forthcoming at this time pending an investigation into the council's resolution that the resignation be asked for."

No definite reason was given by council just why they had asked for the chief's resignation. And just what form the investigation Chief Lockwood mentioned will take was not disclosed.

A secret session of council was called Tuesday night to consider a request from the chief for an additional constable to augment the two-man force and for pay increases for Chief Lockwood and his deputy.

On the motion of councillor George Vice, seconded by Franklin Linton, the request for more staff and money was turned down. After lengthy discussion members then decided to write asking for Chief Lockwood's resignation effective immediately.

Twisted Girders Remain Of Loblaw Store

Water swirled about the twisted girders. A stack of bricks, once a chimney, sprawled grotesquely at the back. It looked like London after a night with the buzz-bombs.

The Loblaw block is completely gutted, razed to the ground in one of the costliest conflagrations since the Quaker Oats fire in 1916. A conservative estimate places the damage at $500,000.

Girders stretched across the gaping maw of the ruined store like giant ill-fitting dentures. Debris slithered through eight feet of oily sludge in the basement like eels through a bayou.

The fire, not yet out, may burn sporadically for days. Jets of water still play through the three gutted stores. The tortured superstructure hisses like a worn-out calliope as the icy hoses send thousands of gallons of water into the mess.

BIG BARBECUE

It was a mighty big barbecue Thursday night. Nearly three tons of beef, two of pork, were burnt. Spectators gagged as grimy, crispy-crumbling groceries combined to produce a huge and ghastly salad.

There's nothing left; nothing at all, but a pile of dead rubble and dying food. The Loblaw sign at the front of the store, still more or less intact, has sagged to the sidewalk. As the interior of the blazing building expanded last night, the front of the store bulged outwards like a collapsing girdle.

Grotesque is the only word for the scene. Everything including the kitchen sink is swimming through the sluggish sludge.

One of the onlookers, a muscled moustached man who might have been a lumberjack, stared in awe into the mess, quietly said "My God." He picked up half a cinder-block and dropped it into the basement.

But if Loblaw's is a hideous mess, Western Tire and Superior Propane have a weird and cave-like beauty. Dripping icicles hang from what is left of the ceiling.

Winter Presents Obstacle In Fighting Major Fires

Property fires in winter increase the difficulties and hazards of a fire department, Chief W. D. Sorrie commented this morning.

The Peterborough Fire Department has had its share of blazing engagements in sub-zero weather.

According to the records of the department, the Roy Studio fire, Jan. 19, 1904, was fought during the night when the temperature was 30 below zero.

"Darkness adds another bad condition," Chief Sorrie said. Freezing weather, and night comprise just about all the obstacles firemen expect to contend with, except problems of location and construction that are often encountered. The fire fighters rarely get a break from all those enemies and in those circumstances, particularly if a fire has been establishing itself before it is discovered.

The Roy Studio fire is listed as occurring in the Cox and Laplante block; estimated property loss was $30,000, but insurance did not excede $18,000.

CHINA HALL

China Hall fire, Feb. 28, 1900, was fought at 12 below zero. The China Hall was in the premises now occupied by the Dominion Bank at George and Simcoe streets. Loss was $30,000, distributed as follows: China Hall, $8,300; the adjoining retail meat store of the George Matthews Packing Co., about $10,000; loss on building, approximately $12,000 to the Bradburn Estate, owners.

Those two fires occurred before Peterborough organized a permanent fire fighting brigade in 1908.

January 26, 1918, the Neill Shoe Store fire, estimated loss $256,000; weather, 10 below zero. Another ice-encrusted tangle of charred beams and rubble.

Peterborough Canoe, Water St., Jan. 6, 1918, at one degree below zero; loss $45,000.

January 10, 1918, weather 5 below zero, Boston Cafe, on the present site of the Churchill restaurant, loss $20,000.

The Quaker Oats Co. multistoried mill on Hunter St. was destroyed by a dust explosion and fire, Dec. 11, 1916; an estimated loss of $2,250,000.

That was an exceedingly cold morning. The early winter wind was blowing from the northeast, and firemen were faced with its biting blast and had to contend with a severed water main.

County Farm Notes

By HARRY THEOBALD

More Than 100 Rural Men and Women Attend Leadership Training Forum . . . County Hog Producers' Annual Meeting Thursday, Feb. 18 . . . Orfeda Tractor Won by Farm Worker Near Brussels . . . Northumberland Farmers Make Tour of Neighbors.

Peterborough farmers made an impressive success of the county leadership forum Thursday.

The attendance of nearly 110 men and women at Knox Church Hall in morning and afternoon sessions was more than twice the number expected by Ken Best, assistant agricultural representative, who had much to do with its planning.

Its topics of how to conduct meetings, the duties of club officers and members, the use of recreational periods in the course of meetings, and the requisite of knowing and following parliamentary procedure, were all directed toward effective organization for the promotion of affairs of a community.

It was evidence of rural interest in more than land use, for all the necessary concern of farmers about the practical side of their way of life.

Peterborough county's Farm Forums were all reprsented in the large assembly that was called to order by Mr. Best as chairman, promptly at 10 a.m. Members of the Women's Institute, the Federation of Agriculture, the Junior Farmers and the Department of Agriculture, with a group of assisting visitors, shared in the development of the program to the summation approaching the adjournment at 4 p.m.

Discussion groups assayed their Forum meetings for aspects of effectiveness and weakness. Wilson Gemmell stressed the duties not only of club officers but also of members.

Stewart Hall and Lakefield groups demonstrated respectively the right and wrong ways of conducting meetings. The Rev. A. E. Larke enlarged on that subject in an instructive talk on recognized rules applying to the course of a meeting, in other words, parliamentary procedure.

Miss Eleanor Saracuse, of Waterford, a director of the Folk School council, led in the recreation periods, principally as a means of promoting acquaintance and also of relaxation.

Keith McIntyre, as chairman of the noon luncheon served by the women of Knox Church, demonstrated the role of a banquet chairman, with the introduction of a speaker, ways of address and so on. Finally, Frank C. Paterson, agricultural representative, posed the question: What use are we going to make of leadership in our own communities?

Boil Potatoes For Feed

Dufferin farmers "have purchased a large number of cookers to boil potatoes for pigs and cattle" as reported in the weekly review of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

"There is still a large volume of potatoes in storage in South Simcoe, but during the past week the price has strengthened slightly."

Huron mentions 100 farmers attending a calfhood vaccination meeting at which Provincial Veterinarian Harold Worton, V.S., discussed the new Brucellosis control act.

More than 500 Holstein cows have been purchased in Bruce since last fall.

Weanling pigs are $15 to $18 around Stratford, and Wellington says there remains a sharp demand for bred sows and young pigs. Pruning operations are under way in the vineyards and orchards of Lincoln county.

"One of our seed cleaners marketed 51 tons of red clover seed for Durham farmers." Snow is helping bush work in Hastings. Good springer cattle are in demand in Northumberland, with top graders around $200.

Market hogs are scarce in Leeds and a few are being shipped; U.S. demand for dairy cattle is more active.

York: "Farmers are digging themselves out of snow banks of last week. Dairymen are keenly concerned about the proposed adoption of tank trucks for picking up milk."

Visited Neighbors

Northumberland crop improvement association went on a farm feed trip Tuesday afternoon Feb. 2. There were 150 at the barn of Sid Cassan to see his cement trench silo. Grass ensilage was being eaten readily.

H. Lowe was feeding from his cement tower silos, corn, grass pea ensilages and hay. Variety seemed to be giving good results with his large dairy herd. President Elmer Laver led discussion on local experiences and Ralph Banbury, agricultural representative, introduced the main speaker, Professor Staples of OAC.

At the Hilliard Morrow farm a good corn ensilage was seen and pile silage of excellent red clover. The advantages of loose stabling were discussed, and the difficulties pointed out to be the individual feeding of cows on record or coping with bossy members of the herd. Farmers said the visits were practical and suggested other similar events for the future.

Fraserville Forum

Fraserville Farm Forum met on Monday night at the home of Reeve W. G. Waterman with an attendance of 10 members. Ken Moncrief was leader and Fred Elliott secretary. One of the comments was that many of the farm products today are sold on grade.

"Hogs are sold on grade, but pork cannot be bought on grade. It was considered unfair that the retailer can buy pork on grade, but when he sells it there is no grade price, and the high price has to be paid by the consumer."

The meeting for next Monday night was cancelled, as that date had been previously taken for the Young People's fowl supper.

Lunch was served after a scial period.

Fraserville is a new Forum formed this winter.

Won Orfeda Tractor

Stuart Hall of Peterborough was elected a vice-president of the Ontario Retail Farm Equipment Dealers' Association (Orfeda) at the time of the Crop Improvement convention in Toronto.

Winners of the door prizes were Vern Jarvis of Brussels who became the owner of the Cockshutt "20" tractor, top prize of the show, and George Dietrich who was presented with a Gem combination freezer and refrigerator.

Mr. Jarvis is a farm worker near Brussels, but coming into possession of a tractor that cost him nothing, he has hopes of starting farming for himself. Mr. Dietrich said he had electricity on his farm, but the refrigerator was new equipment, and most welcome. Leo Colton of Kinburn was elected president.

Trade Views Vary

Of the 513 Farm Forum groups reporting on their discussion of "Barriers to Trade" broadcast, 43% agreed that free trade with the U.S. would increase markets for dairy products of this country. Lower purchasing price would also result for some articles, especially motor cars and cottons.

An ill effect was seen by 33% of the groups who feared that Canada would become a dumping ground for farm products, particularly fruit and vegetables.

As to long run effect, 40% expected that free trade would be beneficial to Canada, and 36% declared against it.

Bowmore Forum, Simcoe county, reported: "With our expanding industry, our vast supply of raw materials, the building of the St. Lawrence Seaway, we believe free trade with U.S. would retard our progress."

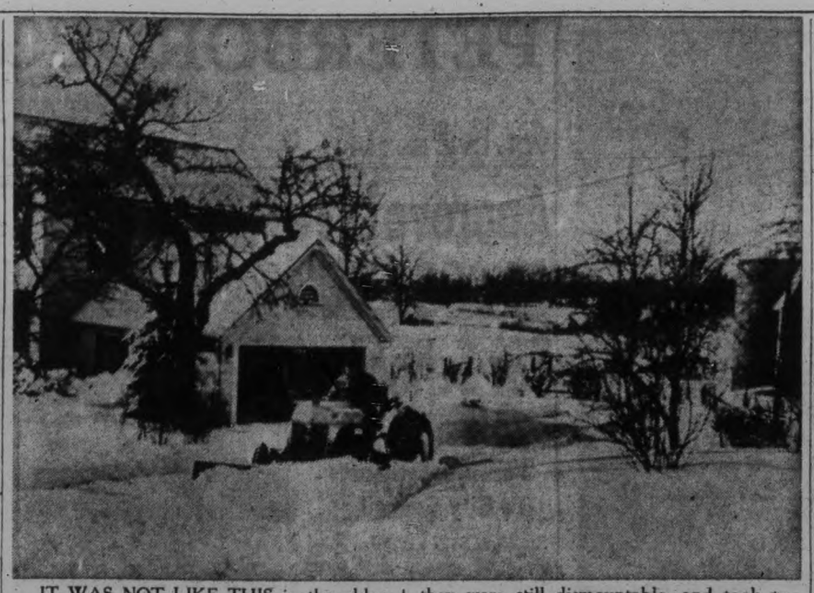
Bull Sale March 9-10

The beef bull show at the Royal Winter Fair buildings, Toronto, March 9-10 will auction 377 bulls from the leading herds of Ontario.

The breeds are: Shorthorns 192, Herefords 134 and Aberdeen Angus 51. All animals ae subject to inspection by a culling committee. Any that are rated unsuitable for use as sires will not be eligible for offering in the sale.

The government's financial assistance will apply. It is a grant of one-third the purchase price up to a maximum of $150.

W. P. Watson, Ontario livestock commissioner, said the other day that commercial producers would have a big opportunity of making outstanding selections.



IT WAS NOT LIKE THIS in the olden days beyond the experience and recollection of the present generation of Junior Farmers. Winters in the Peterborough district piled up drifts in yards and lanes and left stretches of the county roads impassable to the traffic of teams and bobsleighs. Taking the line of least resistance on the way to town, or elsewhere, farmers used to let down fences when they were still dismountable, and took to the shallower carpet of snow in the fields. Pitch holes on the roads were the despair of horses. Today the versatile tractor is established equipment in emergency winter use, but the weather is disposed to dodge the challenge to its traditional supremacy by lapsing into lightly laden flurries that settle for a foot or two of snow.

Soil Tests And Re-Planning Pay Off In Income Increase

Soil tests remove the vague element of guesses by all hands about profitable land use, Stewart L. Page, agricultural representative at Barrie, said in a discussion at the Ontario Crop Improvement Association Convention in Toronto.

His Subject was "How to use the Ontario Soils and Crops Record Book."

Mr. Page's interest in this element of farming began at home as a boy. Then, as agricultural representative he held winter meetings featuring soils and land use.

"Lively discussions were encouraging, and more and more farmers came to our office to go more fully into their soil problems. That was in 1939 and afterwards. We soon ran into a snag. Few farmers had taken soil tests, and their recollection of treatments and growth response for any one field was usually most vague. After half an hour or more of talk trying to get at the basic problem, I would come up with recommendations which were simply my guess, based on the farmer's guesses. We needed dependable data on which to base recommendations which might mean the investment of hundreds of dollars."

Eventually the Simcoe county soils and crops record book was evolved, and 400 copies were printed in 1947 with the help of the county council. It sold at 50 cents, half price, to interested farmers. It is now available without charge.

PRACTICAL PLANNING

Mr. Page said: "The object of this book (now revised and issued by the Ontario Department) is to provide a simple and workable method whereby any real farmer may do his own planning and work out a practical and profitable program of land use and soil conservation. Our department will advise and assist on request, but the farmer is the key factor."

Peterborough district farmers know the record book from planning that has been carried out in this county and adjoining townships. It provides a map of the home farm, identifying its fields by number; soil test date; tillage practices and soil treatments; crop records, notes re tests and problems on that particular field.

INCREASED REVENUE

"We received reliable reports from 64 co-operating farmers at the end of 1951, indicating an average increase of 15%. Revenue was up more than the total tax bill (average $260). A few reported increased revenue ranging from $500 to $1,000 by use of the record book and better land use practices."

These were some of the projects reported as helpful: soil testing to determine deficiencies; increased use of commercial fertilizer according to test.

Plowing under green crops, etc., to build up organic matter; better use of barnyard manure.

Stone and brush removal; fence row clearance. Renovating pastures; increased acreage in sod; more clovers; phosphate in stables; improved crop rotation; increased holdings of livestock.

"We know a good many farmers" said Mr. Page, "who have gone ahead with the work better than we had expected, who are using the record book and making substantial improvements in soil and land use practices each year."

For his discussion, Mr. Page interviewed three of the co-operating farmers of his area. One was a junior, Tom Ross of Oro Station, who had attended the first mid-winter soils course at O.A.C. He takes an active part in the operation of the family farm. His father, Vic Ross, has a livestock trucking business.

In his first year with North Simcoe Junior Farmers Soil Club (1950), he started his record book, mapped the farm and took top and sub-soil samples. His mother helped him in measuring the boundaries of fields.

"We found the whole farm was low in phosphate, which may explain our previous difficulty in getting satisfactory clover stands," Tom Ross said in reply to Mr Page.

The Ross farm is 125 acres, and up to a few years ago only 73 were considered tillable, and of various fertility levels.

"About half of the fields were low in potash, most of the farm was low in magnesium, and several of the fields low in lime or calcium. We stepped up the rate of using commercial fertilizer, especially when seeding down, and used a higher phosphate mixture in some cases."

PASTURE IMPROVEMENT

The farm was rather short of pasture in 1950, and a recently seeded field was thin in spots.

"We top-dressed the field with a complete fertilizer early that year, and in the late fall it was top dressed with barnyard manure. The pasture thickened up well, and looks good enough to leave down for several years yet. Of course, we keep top dressing with fertilizer and manure when we think it is needed."

Another field was described as a stoney pasture where a cow would have slim picking after a few weeks each spring. It was converted last year into one of the best pastures in the county, Mr. Page remarked in his question about effect.

SWEPT UP STONES

Tom: We started clearing that field in 1948, using a bulldozer to get the stones. Some of them would weigh a ton. The land was pretty rough in 1949, but we grew a fair crop of oats using 250 lbs. of 2-12-10 fertilizer. Oats were grown again in 1950 and 1951, and the next year we got it seeded down to a good mixture of clovers and grasses which have done particularly well.

Each year we have used a moderate amount of the recommended fertilizer, 200 to 250 lbs. As to yields: we think the oats taken off the first years more than paid for clearing the land. Last year was favourable weather, and we had so much pasture we had to cut six acres, or half the field for hay.

It yielded from 2½ to 3 tons of fine hay, first cutting which we thought good enough for a new seeding. In former years we had trouble finding enough pasture on the home farm for ten head of cattle. Now, our 16 Holsteins cannot keep the pasture down."

HAVE FARM RECORD

"From the use of the record book we already have a valuable record of soil tests for each field; we know the fertilizer, manure and lime that have gone on each field, and the crop records give us data for each year as to crop response, and keeping track of what we are doing."

Quebec Budgets For Surplus In Fiscal Year

QUEBEC (CP) — Finance Minister Gagnon, leaning heavily on Quebec's proposed provincial income tax, today budgeted for a surplus of $1,708,740 for the fiscal year 1954-55.

In his budget address in the legislative assembly, the finance minister forecast record revenues of $322,955,400 during the 1954-55 fiscal year starting April 1, with $22,000,000 to come from the new income tax, still to be approved by the assembly.

Expenditures were estimated at $321,246,660.

Expenditure includes $12,500,000 for universities, public health and social legislation, to be paid out of proceeds of the income tax.

Mr. Gagnon said that in 1953-54 Quebec has a surplus on ordinary account of $36,370,000, but capital expenditures of $60,128,000 converted that into an overall deficit of $23,758,000.

DEFENDS INCOME TAX

Mr. Gagnon described the government's move into the direct taxation field as "a positive gesture."

"Income tax is a direct tax which the province is empowered to levy.

"If the provinces are not free to levy the taxes they require to meet their obligations, or if the central state monopolizes them for its own purposes, the Confederation Act becomes a dead letter and the provinces are reduced to beggary."

Mr. Gagnon said the struggle for greater centralization of powers is also happening in the United States, Australia, Switzerland and South Africa.

Shorthorn Regional Show

At the leadership training forum Thursday, Lorne Pimmett told The Examiner the question of a Shorthorn regional show for this county was held over at the provincial association convention until March 20.

"I feel that we still have a chance to get it here if we can assure the provincial executive that we can bring out 100 head," Mr. Pimmett said. "I am writing to all our district breeders putting it up to them."

Mr. Pimmett was one of seven directors elected from 15 nominations at the Guelph convention.

Buy Pimmett Bull

George Shoniker of Norwood has bought from M. H. Pimmet and Sons, Indian River, a Shorthorn sire, Strathtore Marshall Supremist, 18 months old. He is a maternal brother of the Pimmett starts, Strathtore Duthie Violet and Collynie Violet, grand and reserve grand champions, respectively at the Royal Winter Fair.

Supremist was just as promising a calf as his sisters, with the prospect of emulating their winnings. A year ago he was stricken with pneumonia.

Lorne Pimmett said Thursday: "We have retained right of his service at any time. That is what we think of him. This is the second bull Mr. Shoniker has bought from us for his herd of purebred Shorthorns.

In Provincial Honors

While congratulations are being extended to Howard Quinn on his election as president of the Ontario Plowmen's Association, it is interesting to note that other Peterborough men have fared well in other association elections.

Charles Fisher of Bailieboro was appointed to the directorate of the Hereford Breeders at their annual meeting at Guelph. Lorne Pimmett was similarly honored by the Shorthorn breeders.

W. W. Dawson was elected second vice-president of the Ontario Crop Improvement Association and is also president of the Ontario Co-Operative Medical Services.

Wellington Sutton is for the second year of office chairman of the Ontario Farm Forums.

Extra Rating Announced For Keendale Lochinvar

Extra rating for "Keendale Lochinvar," born December 15, 1943, bred by Stewart Nelson, of Keene, is reported from the Brantford office of the Holstein-Friesian Association.

This bull has been owned for some years by the Michigan Artificial Breeders' Co-operative of Lansing, Mich.

Twenty-three of his daughters averaged in 58 records: 14,287 lbs. of milk, 563 lbs. fat, for a percentage of 3.94.

"Lochinvar" is officially classified as "XX"; 50% of all his registered daughters, three years old or fresh, have been graded at least Good Plus; and have completed records 20% above R.O.P. qualifying amounts; and at least 41% of the above 50% of his daughters are graded at least Very Good.

He was the sire of Maple Lea L. G. Rosine, All-Canadian Four-year-old in 1950; and Maple Lea Sunset Sally, first aged cow at the International Dairy Show, Chicago, 1953. His sire was Montvic Lochinvar 3rd (XX), and dam Keendale Lodge Pietje Lass (Excellent).

Norm Blodgett, of Junior Farmers, boosts the broom ball tourney at Norwood Wednesday, February 17. The trophy was won by Peterborough at Stirling last winter. He says a capacity crowd is expected. The Junior are reported to have sold all seats for a bus trip to Toronto for the NHL game February 27. Gord Brasfield is in charge of the ducats. See him.

LONDON (Reuters)—The RAF said today that a four-engined Shackleton reconnaissance plane with a crew of 10 is missing over the Mediterranean on a routine training flight from Malta.

Its last signal, heard Thursday night, gave its position as 20 miles northwest of the island. Planes and ships are searching the area.

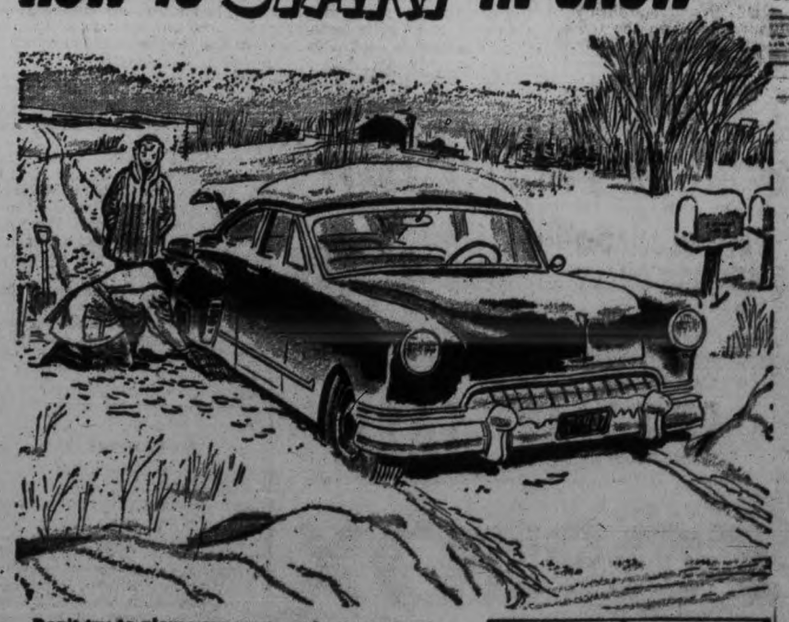
Driving Tips from R. W. Boyers, Director, Ontario Safety League.

HOW TO START IN SNOW



Don't try to plow your way out by brute force!

- Start forward slowly in low gear with front wheels straight ahead. If wheels spin without moving the car, stop at once!
- If your car has a standard gear system, try "rocking" the car by shifting back and forth from low gear into reverse.
- If rocking fails, spread sand, cinders, an old piece of carpeting, or anything else that will aid rear wheel traction.
- When you drive in bad weather, always carry shovel, cinders or old carpeting to help you out of snow.

Says Paper's Mailing Rates Subsidy To Subscriber Not To Any Newspaper

OTTAWA (CP) — An Ontario editor and publisher Thursday said mailing rates for daily newspapers are a subsidy to the subscriber not to the newspaper.

Senator W. Rupert Davies, president of the Kingston Whig-Standard, said in the upper chamber that there seems to be a feeling that daily newspapers are subsidized by the government. However, if daily newspapers are sent by mail the postal costs are added to the subscription rate.

"Daily newspapers never have been subsidized. It has been the subscribers who have been subsidized."

Newspaper subscription rates rose in the 1930s when the government increased mailing rates. Until 1951, the rate was 1½ cents a pound with a penalty for newspapers containing more than 50 per cent advertising.

The mail rates now were 2½ cents a pound on reading matter and four cents a pound on advertising. The daily newspaper gave the post office a statement of the number of papers being mailed and the percentage content of advertising and news.

WEEKLY PAPERS

Referring to weekly newspapers, Senator Davies said they are allowed free mailing within a 20-mile zone of publication, not 40 miles as stated by Senator Thomas Reid (L—British Columbia).

Senator Davies said he has no investment in weekly newspapers but would be sorry to see them loose the 20-mile free limit as had been suggested in some newspapers.

Most were merely sorted in small towns for readers to pick up at the post office. If the weeklies were charged mail rates, the cost would be passed on to the subscribers and some would cancel their subscriptions.

Weeklies were doing a "splendid job but are not making much money."

Control Rents For 6 Months

TORONTO (CP)—City council decided Thursday night to take over rent control from the province March 2 for six months but turned down a recommendation of an automatic 10-per-cent increase in controlled rents.

Board of control, council's executive body, recommended the increase.

However, Ford Brand, a member of board of control, urged at the special meeting of city council that the proposal for an increase be rejected and that controls be extended for 14 months instead of six.

City council appointed E. A. Brown, chief enforcement counsel of the Ontario rental administration as its rentals administrator at a salary of $6,000 a year.

Landlords must apply to the city rent administrator for an increase under the city regulations. The administrator, after investigating the circumstances, can refuse the application or grant an increase of up to 10 per cent.

3 Top Awards Made By TV Academy

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Edward R. Murrow, Eve Arden and Donald O'Connor won the top awards of the television academy Thursday night, but a pudgy English professor stole the show.

Murrow, who rose to fame with his broadcasts during the London blitz, was named the outstanding TV personality of 1953 by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. This award was given to Bishop Fulton J. Sheen last year.

Murrow's "See It Now" was also named the best news or sports program.

Eve Arden, the glamorous schoolmarm of "Our Miss Brooks," was announced as the best female star of a regular series at the gala dinner in the Hollywood Paladium. Donald O'Connor, one of the comedians on the Sunday night comedy hour, won the academy's "Emmy" as the best male star.

None of the top winners was present. The biggest ovation went to Dr. Frank C. Baxter, University of Southern California professor who delivers Shakespearian lectures on a local TV station. He won two local awards for the best public affairs program, and as outstanding male performer. Most of the other winners had delivered long praise to their script writers.

"THANK MY WRITER"

"Following the precedent set here tonight," the bald, bespectacled professor announced, "I want to thank my writer, who happens to be William Shakespeare." He added that he was merely a "Broken-down school teacher doing what comes naturally," and didn't know what he was doing "among these pros."

Continuing on a high-brow level, the academy named the literate "Omnibus" as the best variety program over the shows of Ed Sullivan, Jackie Gleason, Sid Caesar and others. The two most popular programs in the country repeated their wins of last year. "I Love Lucy" was selected the best situation comedy program, and tight-lipped Jack Webb's "Dragnet" scored as the best mystery, action or adventure program.

Debate On Unemployment Scheduled In House After Strong Demands

OTTAWA (CP)—The government is beset by demands for action against rising unemployment and a debate on the problem is in prospect for the Commons Monday.

Clarie Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South) was ruled out of order when he tried to bring on a debate Thursday, but Acting Prime Minister Howe said he would have no objection to one Monday.

The acting prime minister said he wants to talk about unemployment, too.

Mr. Gillis' unsuccessful motion for a debate described unemployment a matter of "urgent public importance." It came on the heels of three submissions to the government on the same subject in two days.

While the House was briefly touching on the point, the two largest labor congresses were telling a cabinet committee that the situation is "alarming" and Finance Minister Abbott was suggesting they are taking "too gloomy" a view.

COMBINED SUBMISSION

The union submission was made by the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada and the Canadian Congress of Labor, which have a combined membership of 955,000. It was the first time the rivals had got together since 1951.

Officials of the congresses suggested to a cabinet group that unemployment now is somewhere around 570,000 or 580,000, compared with the previous known post-war high of 434,000 in early 1949.

But Mr. Abbott said he believes these figures are off. He also warned against emphasizing "gloom" talk, which could cut down on business investment that helped provide job opportunities.

CAN BE AFFECTED

"The plans of people with regard to business," he said, "can be affected by too much talk of rising unemployment and a possible recession.

"I think we should be a little careful about taking too gloomy a view about the prospects."

Secretary-treasurer Donald MacDonald of the CCL replied the congresses are not "seeing the situation in too pessimistic a light."

"There are well in excess of 500,000 unemployed," he said. "We could say there are 570,000 or 580,000, and I don't think we would be too far wrong."

Manager Dies On Hilly Trail

GERALDTON (CP) — Peter A. Hermiston, district diamond drilling manager for the Longyear Company, died after a heart attack Thursday on a hilly trail north of the Manitouwadge lake-copper-zinc discovery.

Fifteen minutes after he collapsed in 25-below-zero weather, a helicopter which happened to be in the area landed and brought the body to Geraldton.

Hermiston's widow and two sons live in North Bay.

I Remember

Selling some pigeons!

BY J. V. McAREE

J. V. (John Verner) McAree has been an editorial writer for the Toronto morning papers for more than fifty years. Currently writes daily column for Toronto Globe and Mail.

Many years ago I sent some pigeons to a bird store to be sold. On their pen I wrote this notice "No Better Blood Can be Obtained." The next day the proprietor of the store asked me to change the sign, saying that I had made a glaring mistake. I stared at the sign for several minutes without noticing anything wrong. Then he said "You say 'Can be Obtained'." We still stared uncomprehendingly. "You ought to have said 'Can't be obtained'," said the man. Finally we convinced him that what we had written was grammatical. "You may be right," he admitted, "but I think 'Can't be obtained' would have made it more stronger'."

Says Britain Has No Pin-up Girls

LONDON (Reuters)—The Daily Mirror and Daily Express, rivals in a constant fight to boost their huge daily circulation, clashed today on whether English girls have sex appeal. By way of contrast, a Canadian beauty was brought into the argument.

Reviewing a new British film featuring a harem-full of scantily-clad British girls, The Mirror's Reg Whitley said producer Peter Rogers "has dared to express the view that British girls have more sex appeal on the screen than any of their foreign rivals."

The Express disagreed. "When will our film-makers learn that there is no such thing as a British pin-up girl," wrote critic Leonard Mosley.

JUST LOOK CHILLY

British women in bathing suits "look neither sexy nor saucy," he said. "They just look as if they were aware of the drafts."

Mosley produced glamorous Yvonne de Carlo, a native of Vancouver to show what English girls do not look like when it comes to posing in a bathing suit. Whitley gave the examples of Jean Simmons, Audrey Hepburn, Deborah Kerr and Greer Garson as home-produced beauty—"all of them now working in Hollywood."

How about that other battle? The Mirror leads by a short head, selling about 4,500,000 copies daily—250,000 more than The Express.

Stirling Tea Party, Bake Sale Success

STIRLING (ENS)—In spite of stormy weather, the St. Andrew's tea at the home of Mrs. Harper Rollins was well attended. The tea was organized by Mrs. Greenley's group.

The bake sale, to which the ladies of the church contributed, was in charge of Mrs. P. Craighead, Mrs. C. Montgomery and Mrs. B. Third. The result of this sale was gratifying.

Pastoral Charge Holds Meeting

WARKWORTH (ENS)—The official board meeting of the Warkworth pastoral charge, composed of members from St. Paul's, Dartford and Oak Heights United churches, held their annual business meeting in the Sunday school rooms of St. Paul's United Church Tuesday night.

The Rev. A. L. Sisco, BD, presided, opening with a short devotional service.

Howard Evans, the new congregational secretary, read the minutes of the previous meeting, and they were adopted.

The first item on the agenda was the election of Howard Evans, congregational secretary, to the office of recording steward for the charge.

Jack Atkinson of Dartford was elected Presbytery representative for 1954, with the first alternative being Clarence Massey of St. Paul's and the second Archie Ferguson of Oak Heights.

An official welcome was extended to Don Pollock of Dartford, a new member on the board of stewards.

For the missionary and maintenance fund, it was reported that $1,031 had been sent in to headquarters.

The committee elected for the M. and M. were: Lorne Evans, Harold Buttars, C. W. Massey, Mrs. George Bowen, Mrs. Joe Greenly, Glenn Hancock, Jack Atkinson, Chas. Honey, A. P. Sayles and Mrs. Archie Ferguson.

Mr. Massey gave a report on the extension fund of the United Church of Canada, and the meeting which was held in Colborne last April.

Following this, it was decided that the Warkworth charge accept the sum of $400 as an allocation, paying over a period of three years, and each of the three appointments pay their share on the share basis, planning to make the payments by the date of the September Presbytery meeting.

Regarding the pastor's summer vacation, it was decided that combined services would be held with the St. Andrew's congregation as usual, the Rev. A. L. Sisco of the United church taking his holidays in July and the Rev. T. E. Kennedy of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church taking the work of both pastoral charges for that month.

The business meeting closed with the benediction by Rev. Sisco.

Offer Strikers Increase In Letter

NORANDA, Que. (CP) — In a direct letter to employees Waite Amulet Mines today offered a 7½-per-cent hourly wage increase to striking members of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) to be effective as soon as the plant re-opens.

Approximately 300 men walked out Oct. 21 in demand for higher wages, shorter work week, pension and welfare, and union security.

Mine manager T. E. Little said that because of the union's demand for a check-off of union dues, the company had been unwilling to state what increased wages it would pay.

ABANDON CHECK-OFF

"The union has abandoned the check-off in all mine strike settlements recently made and the company assumes that they have abandoned it at Waite Amulet," he said.

The offer is identical to a wage increase offered by Noranda Mines Dec. 21. Waite Amulet is a Noranda subsidiary.

The 1,500 Noranda miners meet today to discuss the results of Thursday's surprise meeting between the union and the company. The meeting was called at union request.

It is indicated that union leaders will ask the Noranda miners to accept the company offer.

Reserves Judgment On Licence Issue

CHATHAM (CP) — Magistrate Ivan B. Craig reserved judgment Thursday on a charge against Canadian Breweries Transport Limited of operating a public commercial vehicle without a PCV licence.

Joseph Sedgwick of Toronto, appearing for the company, said it does not operate public vehicles "in the way the (Ontario Highway Traffic) act speaks," He said the company, a subsidiary of Canadian Breweries Limited, turns its profits back into the "common pot" or draws its losses from it.

Crown attorney A. D. Bell said that if a company operates commercial vehicles on highways for compensation, the vehicles must be licensed.

"The firm transports the goods of several brewery companies," he said. "It has been proven that it receives compensation. The other subsidiaries are invoiced by Canadian Breweries Transport Limited with monthly statements, and payment is made."

Fair Directors Told To Care For Grounds

TORONTO (CP) — Directors of agricultural fairs have been advised to either take better year-round care of their fair grounds or switch to the coffee blending business.

A. J. McTaggart of the Ontario agriculture department said in an address before the annual meeting of the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies that fair officials take good care of their grounds in the summer but aren't so careful at other seasons.

"A summer's travel gives the motorist some of the most beautiful crops of chicory to behold, surpassed only in height by the judges' stand."

COULD OFFSET GRANT

He said that at the present price of coffee some fair boards could offset their grant by selling the chicory, used in the blending of coffee, to coffee firms.

"Fortunately," he said, "the majority are not in this category and many have converted their grounds into beautiful parks."

Tory Gregg of Wingham said masters of ceremonies at fall fairs should have some training for their job. He has acted as master of ceremonies at many southwestern Ontario fairs.

Rebel Forces Holding Off

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP) — Guerrilla forces of the Communist-led Vietminh rebels who have been in contact for four days with the exterior defences of Luangprabang, eight miles northeast of the royal Laotian capital, held off again today.

French reconnaissance has been unable to establish any important contact with the Vietminh. The French high command said the bulk of the Vietminh's crack 308th division is still in the Bac river valley, about 45 or 50 miles north of Luangprabang, but advance elements of this outfit have been sighted near the Nga river, about 15 miles farther south.

French fighters and bombers bombed Vietminh units in the Bac valley today and inflicted serious losses on them, the French command said. Fighters also attacked Vietminh forces in the Suong river valley, about eight miles northeast of the capital.

The command attributed the slowness of the Vietminh advance to supply problems.

The name of Mrs. Kouri is being sent in to the selection board.

A letter thanking the branch for the penny round-up was read from the Canadian Mental Health Association. A donation of $5.00 was made to the Navy League. The Institute consented to cater for the zone gathering of the ladies auxiliary to the Canadian Legion on May 27.

It was decided to invite the district president, Mrs. J. Horspool, to the annual meeting of the branch in April.

Doctor Gave Accused Beer, Tested Reaction

KITCHENER (CP) — A doctor said Thursday he gave beer to a man accused of manslaughter and then tested his reactions. Testimony concerning the specially-conducted test was admitted as defence evidence at a manslaughter trial expected to go to the jury today.

Lawyers said they did not know of such evidence ever before being presented to a jury at a manslaughter trial in Canada.

Testifying at the trial of Joseph Finnigan of Guelph, Dr. L. H. Leggett of Guelph said he conducted the test for Finnigan at the request of defence counsel Abraham Acker. Dr. Leggett said that during the Second World War, as medical officer of health at Gander, Nfld., he instituted inspection of all air crew who drank alcohol within 24 hours prior to leaving on a flight.

CHARGED IN DEATH

Finnigan is charged in connection with the Oct. 11 death of Mrs. Lena Irene Leader of Guelph. Before he admitted the tests as evidence Mr. Justice J. L. Wilson excluded the jury and gave Mr. Acker time to seek similar cases in law records.

Mr. Acker reported he could find no similar cases, but asked that the evidence be admitted as it was the only way in which defence could hope to refute crown evidence of Finnigan's condition after the mishap.

Province Should Legislate Union Check-Off, CCF Told

The province should enact legislation providing for the check-off of union dues, Fred Barrett told the Peterborough CCF association Thursday evening. Mr. Barrett is president of Local 5009, Unisted Steel Workers of America (CIO-CCL).

Such legislation would permit industrial labor to say what they wanted done with their union dues, he maintained. There were several types of check-off available; but these were only valid if written into union contracts.

The revocable check-off is law in a number of provinces. It provides that any worker who wishes may sign to have his union dues taken from his pay. If he wishes, at the end of the contract year, he may withdraw his name.

Irrevocable check-off makes it impossible to withdraw your name once you have signed a card. The Rand formula says every employee should pay union dues whether or not they are members of the union.

CLOSED SHOP

In a closed shop, you are not allowed to work until you have signed a union card. This is the type which controls the practice of lawyers, doctors and school teachers. Even the farmers co-operatives are protected by law, Mr. Barrett held.

The Ontario government never goes beyond the promise stage of check-off legislation, the speaker said. He told that owners of large corporations hope to break the unions and feel that poor labor laws will help them.

"Since the present government depends to a very great extent on big business for their election funds, it is in their own interest to ignore the request for good labor legislation," he said.

One instance of the heavy hand of ownership has been shown in the treatment of the union in the present gold mine strikes, Mr. Barrett maintained. Conciliation board reports were acceptable to the union but in every case the management of the mines refused to agree to the recommendations of the board.

RESOLUTIONS

At the convention of the Ontario Federation of Labour (CCL) at Niagara Falls last week-end, several resolutions were passed calling on the government to enact fair legislation. They also passed a resolution to support the CCF as the political arm of labor.

The CCF was the only party that has ever backed labor in any way, the speaker said, and there was no use expecting fair play from old party governments, which have no sympathy for labor union.

Mr. Barrett said there were more than 500,000 unemployed in the country. With the resource of Canada this is a ridiculous situation. The government must be forced to recognize this and do something about it, he concluded.

U.K. Experts See Relationship Between Smoking, Lung Cancer

LONDON (Reuters)—A British committee of experts has decided there is a relationship between smoking and cancer of the lung, the House of Commons was told today.

Health Minister Iain McLeod said the committee has issued this warning:

"It is desirable that young people should be warned of the risks apparently attendant on excessive smoking. It would appear that the risk increases with the amount smoked, particularly of cigarets."

McLeod added: "I accept the fact that there is so far no firm evidence of the way in which smoking may cause lung cancer or of the extent to which it does so."

Almost simultaneously with McLeod's announcement, Britain's major tobacco companies issued a joint statement declaring "There is no proof that smoking is a cause of lung cancer." It said investigations can "never do more" than indicate further lines to be investigated.

EXCHANGE DATA

Later, at a press conference, Sir Harold Himsworth, secretary of Britain's medical research council, said information on the issue is being exchanged with the United States and many other countries.

"The number of victims cured by medical treatment is very small, unfortunately," Himsworth said. "In the majority of cases, all doctors can do is to make the remaining part of life more tolerable."

Even if a heavy smoker quit cigarettes, he would not necessarily escape the disease, Himsworth said.

The committee—"the standing advisory committee on cancer and radiotherapy"—was set up by the health ministry in 1948. It has been investigating smoking and lung cancer for the last three years.

McLeod said the committee's findings so far include:

1. It must be regarded as established that there is a relationship between smoking and cancer of the lung.

2. Though there is a strong presumption that the relationship is casual, there is evidence that the relationship is not a simple one. This is because:

(A) The evidence in support of the presence in tobacco smoke of a carcinogenic agent causing cancer of the lung is not yet certain.

(B) The statistical evidence indicates that it is unlikely that the increase in the incidence of cancer of the lung is due entirely to increases in smoking.

(C) The difference in incidence between urban and rural areas and between different towns suggests that other factors may be operating—for example atmospheric pollution and occupational risks.

Conservatives Win By-Elections

HULL, England (Reuters)—Sir Winston Churchill's Conservatives scored two by-election successes Thursday by retaining a parliamentary seat in this east coast port, and also retaining a Harwich seat.

The result, announced today, in the Haltemprice division of Hull was: Patrick Wall, Conservative 16,107; C. W. Bridges, Labor, 9,974.

At Harwich, the Conservative majority was 5,997.

Standing in the 625-member House of Commons now is: Conservatives and allies 321; Labor 293; Liberals 6; Irish Nationalists 2; Irish Labor 1; vacant 2.

This gives the government a majority on paper of 19. But W. S. Morrison the Speaker (chairman), who is a Conservative, does not vote.

Canon and Mrs. Walter J. Gilling are being "at home" this Sunday afternoon at the rectory, 334 Rogers Street, to all St. Luke's church parishioners, it being the occasion of the seventh anniversary of Mrs. Gilling's arrival in the parish, at which time she was greeted with a Valentine party and shower of gifts.

Hear Speaker

Murray Street church Baby Band Mother's Tuesday evening had as guest, Mrs. E. Chambers who described the work being done in Peterborough for retarded children. She reported encouraging results, in the face of difficulties, with the morning class now in operation at the YWCA. Mrs. Chambers was introduced by Mrs. N. Bullied and thanked by Mrs. P. Lavictoire. Business was conducted by president Mrs. Frank Ephgrave and Mrs. L. Stone led in devotions. Delicious refreshments were served at the conclusion by Mrs. Bullied and members of the east group.

Minister Speaks

The Rev. Lloyd Shorten addressed the Excelsior Bible Class Wednesday evening at the regular meeting in St. James church Sunday school. His remarks were based on "Making the most of our Opportunties believing in ourselves and others; having faith in God." An inspiring devotional period was led by Mrs. P. Mayhew, President Mrs. Q. Dantzer presided for business and heard reports from officers. Plans for the year's projects were discussed and these include a fall tea and making two layettes. Teacher Miss Jessie Martin offered closing prayer. A social hour followed with lunch served by Mrs. P. Mayhew, Mrs. R. Heard, Mrs. H. Fife and Mrs. G. Cuffe.

Discuss New Projects

Lively discussion concerning money-making projects to be undertaken this year took place at the meeting of Friendship Group of St. Giles' Presbyterian church, held Wednesday night at the home of Mrs. Lionel Monk, King George Street. This group is extremely active in support of the building program of the church. President Mrs. W. Clarke presided and opened by reading a timely poem, "Just be yourself." Guest speaker was the Rev. C. G. Boyd and his topic was "Hobbies." He pointed out that a hobby is an excellent thing for anyone, adding immeasurably to the fulness of living. He followed with a history and description of Drama, a hobby which he finds intensely interesting. He said a villain is essential in completing any plot and in each era has been a contemporary of the evil doers of that time. "Thus Christianity itself is a drama in which good triumphs over evil, epitomized by the Saviour's death on the cross." Mrs. L. Browne read the scripture lesson and led in prayer. Closing prayer was said by Mr. Boyd and Mrs. D. Penrose and assistants then served sandwiches and coffee. March meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Arnold Steele, Riverside Drive.

YOUR MOUTH AND EYES are your outstanding facial features and you can do much to enhance the appeal of both. You can make really great changes in the appearance of your mouth. First, you must take care that your teeth are sparkling white. For this, it is necessary to know how to brush your teeth and gums properly (left). Keeping lip flexibility with exercise (centre), avoiding grimacing and giving an upward turn to the corners of the mouth also are essential. When your mouth boasts both good health and a pleasant expression, you can use lipstick (right) to real advantage. The correct shade of lipstick will flatter your complexion and, when applied skillfully, it can improve the shape of your lips.

These Exercises Will Avoid Reputation Of A Sourpuss

By ALICIA HART,
NEA Beauty Editor

"Once you get to know her, you'll like her. She just looks like a sourpuss." These words preface many introductions.

The girl who allows her mouth to assume a droopy line not only is inviting a reputation as a sourpuss, but also is insuring the formation of hard, unhappy lines about the mouth.

Therefore, in addition to practicing mouth hygiene and mastering the art of applying lipstick, one should take care to preserve the flexibility of her lips. It is one of the most important aids to retaining a youthful look.

Because it is natural to be more aware of others' faults than our own, you might check to see just how you are faring in this respect. One way to do this is to put a mirror near your telephone and observe yourself in conversation.

And, remember, men object strongly to women who distort their features by mugging for dramatic effect. If you master your lip muscles, you can speak effectively and retain facial composure.

Blowing and whistling are good for giving suppleness to the lips. Do both as often as you think of it when in private. In blowing, take a deep breath and blow hard.—

Here are two other exercises that are designed to encourage flexibility:

1. Using your fingers, turn your upper lip up and try to touch your nose. Then turn the lower lip down. Later you'll do this without the aid of your fingers.

2. Now raise your upper lip so that you can see your gums; use fingers if necessary. You will probably notice that the muscles will tremble a bit.

It is important to make a conscious effort to keep the corners of one's mouth turned upward. One can be quite serious and yet have her mouth up at the corners. Your mirror will show you the world of difference it will make in your appearance.

You probably will be able to improve the formation of your lips with a little effort. For instance, if one lip protrudes farther than the other, you can line them up. Eventualy you will notice a marked improvement.

But most important, be ready with a smile. A ready smile has taken more people ahead in this world that we can imagine. Even if your teeth are imperfect, don't hide the defect behind a weak smile. Be assured your broad smile will well overshadow the imperfections in your teeth.

Of course, it is assumed tha your teeth are kept sparkling clean at all times No smile, however, friendly, can detract from stained, dirty-looking teeth.

To keep your teeth shining white you should wash them carefully three times a day, and you should consult your dentist about occasional professional cleanings.

Y Dinner Speaker Interested In Many Services

Mrs. J. E. Houck, who is to be guest speaker at the YWCA annual dinner meeting next Wednesday evening, is a woman who has a long list of public services in which she is interested.

First of all she is a member of the National Board of the YWCA and is convener of extension for the Y in Canada.

She lives in Brampton and is president ofthe Women's Auxiliary of Peel Memorial Hospital and member of the Board of Governors; she is WA president in the United Church; a director of the Community Concert Association, Community Recreation Association and Convener of Adult Education Committee.

For ten years she has been member of the Board of Education and vice chairman for three years. She is president of Peel County Women's Institutes; and president Toronto Convention Womens' Institutes, Provincial Board Mental Health Association, and Provincial vice president of the CAC.

The list goes on: vice president Ontario Womens' Liberal Association; convener of citizenship Federated WI of Canada, one of the two women directors of the Royal Winter Fair, member of the Royal Commission on Education for Ontario.

The public is cordially invited to attend the meeting. Dinner tickets should be secured this week.

BAKING SODA HELPS

Many people add baking soda to the water when cooking green vegetables in order to retain the fresh green color. But don't do it unless you're willing to sacrifice vitamins for appearance.

USE YOUR CASSEROLE

The woman who has a way with a casserole has a good chance of controlling her food budget. Casserole dishes turn leftovers into treats, make small amounts of meat go a long way.

IODE Observing "Founder's Day"

On February 13th, the Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire observe "Founder's Day" across the Dominion of Canada. Organized 54 years ago by Mrs. Clark Murray of Montreal, as a patriotic organization, whose aims and objects are to foster a bond of union among the women and children of the Empire; to care for the widows, orphans and dependents of service men; to provide an efficient organization by which prompt and initial action may be taken when such action may be desired; to preserve the memory of brave and historic deeds and the last resting places of heroes and heroines, especially those which are in distant places.

Mrs. Kathleen Drope, National President, IODE, points out that the members of the Order, who number over 31,000 in Canada, do a great deal of philanthropic and educational work. This year, from the First and Second War Memorial Funds, the Order is providing 10 post-graduate scholarships (overseas) of $2,000 each and 15 bursaries to sons and daughters of deceased or permanently disabled veterans, to the value of $1,600 each, in Canadian Universities. These two living memorials represent only a fraction of the assistance given to students each year: Chapters of the Order in every province and the Yukon work in their own localities providing books, educational supplies and monetary aid for fees, transportation and hot lunches.

Through the continuous work of members' hands thousands of knitted and sewn articles of clothing are distributed in Canada, Great Britain and Europe. Korean civilian relief in the form of quilts and socks is now going forward.

Although the aims and objects of the IODE are over half a century old, the manner in which they are implemented has kept abreast of the times and are so broad that young women of many interests are members of the Order which is a patriotic organization, non-political, non-sectarian, open to all women who are Canadian citizens or British subjects.

Chic Outfit Designed For RAF Girls

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's air force girls will soon toss aside their shapeless, masculine uniforms for a chic new outfit designed by Victor Stiebel, a dressmaker to the Queen.

The new style will "conform to women's post-war shape," designer Stiebel said.

"A woman's shape does change from time to time and the square shoulders, flat bust and longish jacket of pre-war are no longer fashionable."

In the new Women's Royal Air Force wardrobe is a one-piece tropical dress made in cotton tussore of a biscuit shade. It will be worn for the first time when the Queen calls at Aden on her way home on the Commonwealth tour.

HAS SHORT JACKET

The home dress uniform has a short jacket, without breast pockets, softer shoulders and a more emphasized waist. The single-breasted jacket is beltless. Pockets are below the waist. The six-panelled skirt is slightly flared.

An added touch to the new feminity are plain black opera pumps, a revolution in British service wear. These will be an optional item of dress.

Fragrance Gives Lift Of Youth

It's been said that a woman who isn't glamorous when she's past fifty has never been glamorous at all. This is a test that many, many women pass today—and with high honors. Thanks to the advances in medicine and cosmetics in the past decade, a woman in her vintage years who takes advantage of the best that's offered to preserve serole dishes turn leftovers into perfectly fit, but looks young and lovely. As for her spirits, the "prop" that makes her a more alive person to have around is her wise and constant use of fragrance. For while keeping physically fit gives her great vitality and vigor and using the new cosmetics and makeup makes her look younger, nothing gives her quite the lift of youth that fragrance does.

Tape And Scale Aids To Beauty

The tape measure and scale, prosaic things that they are, should be among the mature woman's most prized beauty aids.

For the older woman especially, the safest and easiest way to combat exess weight is to prevent its appearance.

Unless a check is kept, the pounds and inches will sneak up on one who has passed 40. And before she knows how it is happening, it already has happened; and another woman has been added to the list of the overweight.

The tape measure and scale, then, should be used as daily guides. It is not difficult to get rid of a few extra pounds and an inch here and there. A rigid reducing regimen, on the other hand, is sometimes too much of a strain on the heart. It certainly taxes one's will power.

Keeping your daily check with measure and scale, you will never have to do more than occasionally cut down on starches and sugars and add a few blocks to your daily walk.

And because you are holding your weight to the proper mark, you will never have to worry about the flabbiness that many women suffer as a result of heavy reducing.

Fur Coat Buying Takes Planning

Current fur sales are giving many older women the opportunity to replace their outdated fur coats.

If you are considering doing so, make the very best of your bargain. Before setting out on your shopping expedition, decide on the type of fur that will be most becoming to you.

For the stout woman, Persian lamb, Alaska seal, muskrat and carcul lamb are good.

Tall, slim women will find medium, long-haired or very long-haired furs, such as fox, becoming.

Short-haired fur with dense pile looks well on the short, slender woman. This type includes oppossum, mink, Persian caracul and broadtail lamb.

Plan to take at least one day to look around before making your decisions. You can learn a great deal simply by looking. Look for fur that is bright and luxurious, uniform in color, texture and depth.

Be sure to examine the entire coat. Feel it to determine whether the pelts are soft, pliable and strong. And check under the arms and the front of the coat to see that good quality skins have been put in there.

New Hand Cream Fades Out Spots

Many a woman with good skin, a becoming hairdo and a slim figure registers as youngish and attractive—until one glances at her hands!

Old hands give her away, and unlike character lines in the face, softening grey hair or even a suggestion of matronly fullness of figure, add nothing to her mature appeal or personality; they are simply unattractive.

Now, thank goodness, one unpleasant attribute to old hands can be coped with. There has appeared on the market recently a new non-greasy hand cream which is most successful in fading weathered skin discolorations. These brown spots which appear first as freckles and then spread into unsightly blotches, that we associate with age, fade away gradually in most cases. Some will find an amazing difference almost immediately, others find progress much slower.

Ammoniated mercury is the ingredient which has this novel bleaching effect. It is one of the few substances that actually enter into the skin cells where it acts directly on the skin pigments without disturbing the normal functioning in other demonstrable ways.

A magnifier comes with this cream, its purpose is to help you watch the cream's progress in fading these all too noticeable spots.

DOROTHY DIX

Girl Married When 16 Complains About Herself

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 21, married, with a three-year-old son. I was married at 16 to Ken, being practically forced into the marriage by my mother who said he was such a fine boy, and that since I wasn't good looking, he probably would be the only chance I'd ever have. He really has been a wonderful husband. My complaints are all about myself. I'm slow to learn, underweight, and my feelings are easily hurt. I feel people are always making fun of me because I'm so skinny.

We are now living in the town where both our families live. Ken can't get a good job here, so we're always short of money. I tried to work to help out, but the girls just don't like me and I'm miserable on the job. Shortly after our marriage we moved several hundred miles away, and Ken did very well, but my mother began to fuss at me to move closer to her, which we did. Since she has never appeared particularly fond of me, I don't know why she wanted us here, but we came to please her. Should we go back where we were, or stay here and try to overcome things?

GRACE T.

TIME, PATIENCE NEEDED

ANSWER: Since you are secure in the fundamentals of life—having a good husband and a fine baby—the other matters that worry you can be corrected. It will take time, patience, and determination on your part, with considerable sympathetic understanding from Ken.

Apparently, all your life you have been subject to criticism from your family, and have come to assume that this attitude will be that of everyone else. That's the first misconception you must correct. The great majority of people will accept you on what you have to offer in the way of companionship, adaptability, co-operation. The fact that your legs are matchsticks, that you have no outstanding talents, are minor matters. You certainly should get away from your home environment, since it is completely smothering any possibility of your learning to stand on your own feet. Furthermore, Ken should go where employment opportunities are best. That will at least relieve the financial strain. Then, see a doctor who will be able to tell you what to do to correct your weight. Improved appearance will renew your self-confidence, and the cycle will progress. You write a fine, intelligent letter, so I disregard, entirely, your assumption that you're stupid. You can learn anthing you set your mind to, but remember you are still very young and need time. Don't be discouraged

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: On and off for the past two years, I have been corresponding with an old friend. I was married a year ago; he attended our wedding and my husband met him. Now my husband objects to the correspondence There was never a question of anything but friendship in our relationship and I think my husband is unreasonable. Should I continue to write in spite of my husband's objections, or write one last letter explaining the situation?

N. M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Perhaps your husband is a bit unreasonable about your keeping up this friendship. But since he does object, it would be sensible to give in to him. There is always a certain element of risk in hanging onto former men friends. This idea doubtless has your husband worried. A letter of explanation would certainly be the polite way to end the friendship. Should a difference of opinion arise between you and your spouse over something that he does, or will do, I hope he extends the same consideration to you that he expects of you.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am now a senior in high school; since eighth grade my best friend has been Rose. For over a year she had a steady boy friend, Nicky, but they broke up two weeks ago. Then he asked to date me. Naturally, I told Rose, and she said she had no objection. Now, however, she has stopped speaking to me. I want to date Nicky, but I also want Rose for my friend. What should I do?

ELISE

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: What you want can't be done. Obviously, Rose still cares for the boy, even though they have parted, and she'll not forgive you—at least not for a long time—for taking up where she left off. Forgiveness will come when she acquires another steady. At the moment, you must definitely make your choice.

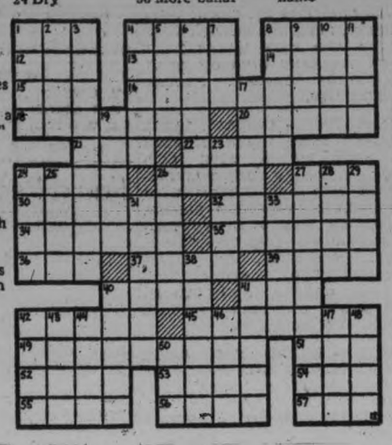
Answer to Previous Puzzle



Ex-Tennis Star Professor At University

VICTORIA (CP)—Miss Marjorie Leeming, former tennis star, now is assistant professor of physical education and assistant to the dean of women at the University of British Columbia.

A hip injury suffered in the game removed her from competition some years ago and now she is counsellor in the campus individual sports—tennis, badminton and golf.

For thousands, Miss Leeming's name brings back memories of the 1920s and early 1930s when her tennis achievements brought newspaper headlines.

Capturing the Oregon state singles title in 1926, she went east to win the Canadian singles championship. She kept the trophy for two years.

2 YEARS CHAMPION

For two years she was Canadian mixed doubles champion and three years Canadian women's doubles titlist. She represented Canada at play in Forest Hills, N.Y., in 1932.

After that came tragedy so far as her athletic career was concerned. When her hip was injured she was advised never to play tennis again.

"I thought everything had ended for me," she said. "I had lived for tennis. And then . . . nothing. Nor could I play badminton (in which she had been seeded second in Canada in 1929)." Golf, in which she had a nine handicap, was also ruled out.

After graduating from UBC in 1926, she took teacher training and taught for three years at Duncan, B.C., and later at Vancouver's King Edward high school. Then she went to Durban, South Africa, as an exchange teacher for one year. In 1947 she joined the university faculty.

Readers' Friday Column Conducted By Mary Moore

BY MARY MOORE

QUESTION: You once mentioned that you had a recipe for Guiche Lorraine which I had hoped you might print ages ago but have never seen. I would very much like to have this and your recipe for Queen Elizabeth cake and the Neapolitan cake...I should like to make some vanilla sugar using the vanilla bean. How much bean to what quantity of sugar? Should the bean remain in the sugar and if not, might the bean be used a second time? or would the flavor be inferior? You mentioned in your column that you have some fancy griddle cake recipes. May I have one or two basic recipes with possibe variations—fruit, etc?...different and unusual. In making wine jellies or fruit jellies where there is little or no pectin would it be possible to use gelatin (unflavored) I wondered if there is some way one could avoid (1) using artificial pectin which has a flavor of its own (2) any sort of vigorous boiling which in the case of wines might boil away the essential flavor of it (3) using too much sugar ...(Mrs.) E. G.

ANSWER: Hmm...you sound like a very discerning cook.

GUICHE LORRAINE

Think of this as a savory. It is a savory custard pie containing ham and cheese. Beat either 3 or 4 or 5 eggs and add 1 cup cream and 1 cup whole milk. Pour this custard into a rich pastry-lined dep pie plate and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. for about 12 minutes. Remove from oven and sprinkle over 1 or 2 cups ground cooked smoked ham (or chicken) and return to oven but reduce temperature to 375 deg. Fahr. until custard begins to set and ham sinks into it. Sprinkle over top about 1 cup grated cheese. This should be old cheddar cheese. Sometimes French cooks add ¼ cup grate Roquefort to make this up to 1 cup. Sprinkle top with paprika and bake until cheese melts and is golden brown and custard is set. This is served cut in wedge-shaped pieces as a dessert pie would be. I pass hot chili sauce or catsup with it, and serve it as a main course meat dish. A generous tossed green salad is just right as an accompaniment to this rich savory.

VANILLA SUGAR

Into 1 lb. fresh icing sugar empty all of the hundreds of tiny vanilla seeds in one vanilla bean. Stir around to mix, and pour into clean dry 1-quart sealer, cover and let stand 24 hours before using. It would be impossible to use the vanilla bean seeds again, as they are mixed in the sugar. They are dark specks and show that way in the sugar. Use for rolling such cookies as kipferl, shortbread, Swedish cookies and small doughnuts.

BASIC GRIDDLE CAKE RECIPE (pancakes)

Beat 1 egg in bowl, then beat in 1¼ cups buttermilk or sour milk, ½ teaspoon soda. Then beat in 1¼ cups sifted flour, 1 teaspoon sugar, 2 tablespoons soft shortening, 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt. Beat with rotary beater until perfectly smooth. Modern heavy griddles require no fat. If fat must be used on your griddle add it sparingly. Pour batter from pitcher in round pools. Turn griddle cakes as soon as they are puffed and full of holes. They should be light, tender and uniformly golden brown on both sides.

Blueberry: Add ½ cup rained fresh or defrosted frozen blueberries to basic batter.

Nut: Add ¼ cup chopped walnuts or pecans to above batter.

Other variations: Substitute ¼ cup cornmeal for ¼ cup of flour in basic recipe; finely chopped apple—½ cup may be added, OR well-drained chopped fresh orange OR drained chopped canned peaches or apricots.

We were taught in cooking school that it is advisable when making wine jellies (in our invalid cooking classes) to make them as you feed them with gelatin—as you suggest, and for the reasons you suggest.

WINE JELLY

Two and ½ tablespoons granulated gelatin, ½ cup cold water, 1 2-3 cups boiling water, ½ to 1 cup sugar, 1 cup sherry or Madeira, 1-3 cup orange juice, 3 tablespoons lemon juice (or less if you use less sugar). Soak gelatin 5 minutes in cold water, dissolve in boiling water, add sugar, wine, orange and lemon juices; strain, pour into moulds and chill. If stronger jelly is desired use more wine and less orange juice. As you know wine jelly (especially Sauterne) is often served cut in squares with the meat course. When this is done the jelly is moulded in shallow oblong dish, and cut when set. I have mailed the cake recipes.

6—In Memoriam

DELPELLARO—In loving memory of Joseph Valentino Delpellaro, who died eight years ago today, February 12, 1946.

Eight years ago today our brother was called,
To his eternal rest;
Gone where the angels sing so sweet
And taken when God knew best.
We miss him here so very much,
His presence oft seems nigh,
But we all hope in heaven to meet
Where no one says goodbye.

—Remembered by brothers, sisters and mother.

50 Firemen Battle Flames

WELLESLEY, Ont. (CP)—Fifty ice-coated firemen today fought an early-morning blaze that destroyed an apartment building and combined grocery and variety store.

Two families were left homeless and damage was estimated at between $25,000 and $30,000. It was the worst fire in the history of the village of 500 persons, 18 miles north of Kitchener.

Miss Hilda Lotz, co-owner of the variety store, said the blaze broke out from undetermined causes in the basement. It spread quickly into the apartment building.

Firemen from New Haburg and Baden were called to help fight the flames in six-below-zero weather.

General Debate On Speech Starts Monday

TORONTO (CP)—The legislature today will consider a speech from the throne weighted with plans for continued expansion and spiked with several controversial subjects.

The speech, read at the opening of the 1954 session by Lieutenant-Governor Louis Breithaupt, forecast a continued capital construction program, legislation on preparations for the development of St. Lawrence river power and a natural gas pipeline from Alberta.

It also forecast indirectly that a heated debate may be expected with the planned revision of part one of the Municipal Act dealing with the controversial municipal annexation problem.

However, the first order of business will be a bill introduced Thursday by Premier Frost which would affirm that all lands and water in Lake Erie within one mile of the shore of Pelee island are part of the township of Pelee. The amendment clarifies problems arising out of the Territorial Divisions Act.

DEBATE STARTS TODAY

General debate on the throne speech is scheduled to begin Monday or Tuesday when Arthur Jolley (PC—Niagara Falls) will move the address in reply to the speech. His motion will be seconded by W.H. Noden (PC—Rainy River).

Five surviving former Ontario premiers attended the opening. They were federal Opposition Leader George Drew, premier from 1943 to 1948; United Farmers of Ontario Premier E. C. Drury (1919-1923), now sheriff of Simcoe county; Conservative George S. Henry (1930-1934), now retired; Hon. Harry C. Nixon, Liberal premier for three months in 1943 and now member of the legislature for Brant; and Hon. T. L. Kennedy, Conservative premier from Mr. Drew's retirement in October 1948 until Premier Frost's appointment in May, 1949 and now member of the legislature for Peel.

Honorary Degree Given Hammarskjold

OTTAWA (CP) — Dag Hammarskjold, secretary general of the United Nations, will be awarded an honorary degree of doctor of laws by Carleton College at a special convocation here Feb. 26.

In announcing the degree for the Swedish diplomat, Carleton President Dr. M. M. MacOdrum said he felt it is "most appropriate that the first honorary degree ever to be given by Carleton College should be conferred upon one so distinguished in the field of international relations."

Utilities' Surplus

KITCHENER (CP) — The 1953 surplus for Kitchener public utilities commission transportation operations was $37,221 compared to a deficit of $17,952 the previous year, S. E. Preston, general manager, told a commission meeting today.

Hear Witnesses In Arson Charge Neal Remaded

The Crown called 12 witnesses Thursday in the hearing of an arson charge against Clarence Neal, 466 Patterson St. Two more witnesses are to give eivdence.

Neal, who also faces two charges of common assault and one of resisting a peace officer, was remanded to appear again Wednesday.

The arson charge arose following a shed fire at the rear of 127 Sophia St. on the evening of January 23. Neal, who pleaded not guilty, is represented by W. C. Grant.

Evidence of several of the 12 witnesses showed Neal to be a friend of a Mrs. Velma Gilbert who lives with her two daughters and a brother at 127 Sophia St. Following a drinking party in a ladies' beverage room, there had been an altercation between Neal, Mrs. Gilbert, her brother, Clifford Lucas, and a Mrs. Elva Morgan. Angry, Neal had snatched off Mrs. Gilbert's glasses and crushed them under his heel.

QUARREL CONTINUED

Later, at 127 Sophia St., the quarrel had continued with Neal striking Mrs. Gilbert and one of her daughters. He had been seen to go out to the rear of the house, near the shed, and some time later the fire had been noticed.

An inspector with the provincial fire marshal's department, Frank Gordon, interviewed Neal at the county jail two days after the incident. The inspector's investigations had convinced him that the fire had been started in two places in the shed. The areas had been covered with fuel.

Neal had told him that he would give him the whole story on the fire, but did not want anything put down in writing.

"Apart from the hotel visit and the scuffle during the earlier part of the evening, he didn't seem to remember very much," said the inspector. Apparently Neal had left the house for a short period and had some more drinks with friends and then returned to 127 Sophia St. At that stage his recollections had been somewhat hazy.

Neal had said, however, "I didn't set the fire, I couldn't have done a thing like that."

HEARD VOICES

Fire captain George Gimblet and Constable Sherman Keliele were at the house after the fire had been extinguished. Gimblet said he had heard women in the house accusing Neal of setting the fire. (This was denied in court by witnesses.) When the officers had entered the house, all talking had stopped.

Captain Gimblet began asking Neal questions concerning the fire. Neal pushed him in the chest, saying: "You and your g-d- red straw hat. You've got no right to ask me questions."

The captain persisted that he had every right. After a bit more shoving around by Neal, the captain asked the constable to arrest him. Neal vigorously resisted and the men had to hold him on the floor to handcuff him. (Neal later told Inspector Gordon that he did not remember any of this.)

Mr. Grant, defending, said he considered that Inspector Gordon had "lured Neal into a false sense of security" when he had interviewed him in jail. Such a friendly atmosphere had been created by the inspector that Neal had felt safe and had therefore talked most readily.

"I suggest that it is the duty of an officer to make the prisoner fully aware of where he stands," said Mr. Grant.

On these grounds he asked that Neal's statement taken in jail be excluded from the hearing. Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, did not rule for the defence, and allowed the statement to be used in evidence.

The trial will continue on Wednesday.

Watches Only Son Cleared Of Charge

TORONTO (CP)—James Crawford, 62-year-old night watchman who turned his only son over to police, watched in court today as the 19-year-old was cleared of a charge of shopbreaking.

Crawford made the decision to turn in his son Donald last week when he found him and another youth, Robert Beal, 17, on the third floor of an office building it is his job to watch at night.

Donald Crawford and Beal both pleaded not guilty. They said they entered the building by an unlocked door looking for Donald's father and then had gone to the third floor to use the telephone when they couldn't find him.

Nothing was taken from the premises.

Jeep-Riding Police Quell Demonstration

MODENA, Italy (AP)—Jeep-riding riot police swung into action here today to break up an unauthorized strikers' demonstration.

Called by Communist-dominated trade unions, the strikes were the latest in a series to hit the Emilia-Romagna area in north-central Italy.

Police swung clubs, but there were no reports of any serious injuries. About 20 of the demonstrators were arrested and some 200 anti-government placards were seized.

The Communist mayor of Mirandola, near here, was formally charged with having organized the demonstration. The strikes were called for higher pay.

Pravda Rebukes West For Its Unwillingness

LONDON (Reuters)—The official Russian Communist party paper Pravda in Moscow today rebuked the Western powers attending the Berlin conference for "a clear unwillingness to facilitate the reunification of Germany."

In a three-column commentary on the Berlin talks, Pravda said the attitude of State Secretary Dulles confirms press reports that the American delegation did not go to Berlin with the purpose of settling outstanding problems.

In London, Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov came in for censure by The News Chronicle for "mocking negotiation" and for "making concessions which look good but which in their context have no value at all."

SCOTSMEN SCEPTICAL

The influential Edinburgh newspaper, The Scotsman, said Molotov's "recipe for peace in Europe" is that "the Soviet bloc would remain, but the Western defensive system would be destroyed."

The independent, right-wing London Daily Express said the Western powers should not reject the idea of extending the four-power talks to include Communist China if it would help obtain a "more reasonable" Russian attitude on Europe.

The Express asked: "Russian policy on Germany may be unreasonable, but is the Western attitude to China wholly inspired by common sense and the spirit of compromise?"

The Communist paper Humanite said in Paris that "France must say yes to Molotov's plan, which is a program of 'immense hope.'"

The London Communist paper, The Daily Worker, in a front-page article, said Molotov's proposals "are no propaganda trick—they are a sincere, far-reaching and inspiring effort to avoid deadlock at Berlin."

Erlick Ollenhauer, west German Social Democratic opposition leader, said in an interview published in The Neue Presse at Cologne today that the Russian proposals for a European security treaty contain "no basis for uniting Germany."

Decide To Give Pakistan Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — Diplomatic officials today said the United States has decided to give substantial military aid to Pakistan regardless of India's angry protests.

An American military survey mission, they said, will go to Pakistan to look over its armed forces and determine the amount and type of military equipment needed.

An announcement of the decision probably will be delayed until after Pakistan and Turkey sign a broad defence, economic and cultural agreement, these sources said.

The two countries are reported to be negotiating the pact secretly, with U. S. encouragement, and the agreement is expected to be announced formally within a matter of days.

India's Prime Minister Nehru has been mobilizing Indian public opinion against any such American-Pakistan military tie-up on the ground that it would upset peace in Asia.

Foil Armed Robbery At Hamilton Store

HAMILTON (CP) — An armed robbery attempt was foiled in a grocery store here today when a girl clerk shoved aside a revolver and screamed for help.

Three youths, one holding a gun, tried to hold up Miss Lillian Wilson, only person in the shop, but she grabbed the gunman's arm so his weapon pointed at the floor, and started calling for help, including a non-existent "Jack" whom she pretended was in the rear of the building. That sent the trio fleeing down the street.

Police established road blocks in an effort to stop the youths, described as under 20.

Young Soldier To Stand Trial In Shooting

CALGARY (CP)—Walter Cierpisz, 17, of Windsor, Ont., Thursday was committed for trial on a charge of shooting an army private to death last October.

Cierpisz is accused in the death of Pte. Robert Bilow of Winchester, Ont., shot Jan. 5 in a washroom at Currie Barracks here.

Witnesses, many of them young privates, testified at Cierpisz' preliminary hearing Thursday they saw or heard the shooting.

READ TO COURT

A statement which police said Cierpisz gave them was read to the court.

The statement said that preceding the shooting, Cierpisz was the object of constant "bugging"—teasing—by Bilow.

"I shot him twice," the statement said. "I shot him once and he fell. . . I have realized I have done a great wrong to my parents and everyone involved."

More Aliens Entering U.S.

FORT ERIE (CP)—The U. S. immigration service said today the number of aliens entering the United States illegally is on the increase.

In 1953 417 known aliens were caught by the U. S. border patrol in this border area, compared with 168 in 1952.

Efforts are under way to increase the size of the patrol from its present 28 officers.

Officials said the total number of illegal-entry aliens who are caught is only a small percentage of those who attempt to elude the border patrol.

Arrest 4 After Police "Buy" Baby In Montreal

"JUST KEEP STILL NOW and be careful of your neck", says Rose Mary McMurray, X-ray technician, to milkman Robert Adams in St. Joseph's hospital today. Adams, who had just had X-rays for a suspected neck fracture, was pinned face down in the snow at Bethune St. when his Silverwood's milk wagon overturned about 8.30 a.m. He had a lucky escape from serious injury. —(Examiner Staff Photo)

Ontario Has Surplus $1,100,871

Revenue Reaches $349,500,385; Liquor Profits Up

TORONTO (CP)—The pockets of the Province of Ontario were well lined during the 1952-53 fiscal year. A $1,100,871 surplus was achieved, the auditor's report showed. The surplus as shown in the report tabled in the Legislature Friday by Provincial Secretary Arthur Welsh, was $1,012,871 over the $88,000 surplus forecast in the budget by Premier Frost, who is also provincial treasurer.

Liquor profits were also up. The annual report of the liquor control board, also tabled, showed a 7.8 per cent increase in sales. A total of $245,882,567 in liquor, wine and beer was sold, compared to $228,008,216 in 1952. The board showed a surplus of $6,726,616.

An early start on session business was indicated by Mr. Frost during Friday's sitting, the second of the 1954 Legislature. Formation of 17 standing committees, an increase of one over last year, will be made Monday.

STUDY REDISTRIBUTION

The premier also said in reply to a question by Hon. Harry C. Nixon (L—Brant) that the question of a special committee to investigate the redistribution of Legislature seats is being considered and he hoped to make a report shortly. Redistribution, forecast in the speech from the throne, would be the first since 1933 when the number of seats was reduced from 112 to 90.

Attorney-General Porter introduced 17 amendment acts and Education Minister Dunlop brought in a bill setting up the Department of Education Act of 1954. This bill would be the first of an over-all project of combining 12 acts into three.

The premier said Arthur Jolley (PC—Niagara Falls) would move the address in reply to the speech from the throne Tuesday. The motion, to be seconded by W. H. Noden (PC—Rainy River) will open general debate on the throne speech.

AUDITOR'S REPORT

The report of the provincial auditor, H. A. Cotnam, showed the actual net ordinary revenue during the fiscal year was $349,500,385. The budget forecast a revenue of $291,073,000.

LONDON (AP)—The ancient Coldstream Guards reported a casualty in the line of duty Friday — a sentry outside Buckingham Palace fainted and, in falling, cut a finger on his bayonet.

Agnes Macphail 1st Woman MP Dies In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—Agnes Macphail, 63, veteran Ontario politician and the first woman to be a member of Parliament, died today.

Firt woman member of Canada's parliament, and for many years the only one, Agnes Campbell Macphail's political pioneering showed many hesitant but earnest women the possibilities of a career in the government of their country.

Except for two years after 1945 when she was ill and the years between 1940 and 1943, the country schoolteacher was never out of politics after 1921, when she was elected to the House of Commons as the United Farmers of Ontario member for East Grey.

She sat for 19 years in the federal House, always as a member of the opposition, until, 1940, when she was defeated by W. E. Harris, a Liberal.

Out of a job, she wrote a column for the Toronto Globe and Mail and tried her hand at various other occupations until 1943, when she was elected to the Ontario Legislature for a term that lasted until 1945. In 1948 she campaigned and won the York East seat for the CCF in the Ontario provincial election.

BORN IN GREY

Miss Macphail was born in Picton Township, Grey County, Ont., March 21, 1890, to Dougal MacPhail and the former Henrietta Campbell—Liberals and Presbyterians. When she grew up she changed the spelling of her name to Macphail. Her farmer father was also a livestock auctioneer and while still in school she was an authority on livestock.

Her maternal grandmother, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was revered and loved by Agnes, who absorbed many of her grandmother's idealistic beliefs. After attending collegiate in Owen Sound she moved to Stratford to complete her high school education and get a second-class certificate from Normal School.

When Agnes Macphail returned to South East Grey to teach she began to attend meetings of the

$3,500 Marked Money Used In Adoption Fake; Raid Follows Transaction

MONTREAL (CP)—Louis Glazer, a Montreal lawyer, today was arrested and arraigned on charges arising out of what police have described as a multi-million dollar international racket in babies. Glazer, second lawyer to be charged since Friday when police disclosed the ring's operations, pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy; of overt acts in making false inscriptions in birth certificates; of forging documents and of uttering false documents. He was released on bail of $950 and ordered for preliminary hearing Feb. 19. Herman Buller, 38-year-old Montreal lawyer, was arrested at Montreal airport Friday as he, his wife and her parents prepared to board a plane for Israel.

He was charged with falsifying entries in a birth certificate and of giving advice in connection with an indictable offence. He pleaded not guilty and was released on $2,000 bail after being ordered for preliminary hearing Feb. 19.

BREAK UP RACKET—George Hill, right, Senior Crown Prosecutor representing the Quebec Attorney General's office, and Ernest A. Miller, assistant district attorney, county of New York, who collaborated to break the baby black-market case. It is reported the ring made $3,000,000.

TWO WOMEN HELD

Two women arrested Friday night in connection with the case remained in police custody while law authorities considered whether to press charges against them. Names of the women were not released.

Police said the arrests were made after transactions were completed for the purchase of a baby by two policewomen of New York and Montreal city police departments.

Officials said a sum of $3,500 changed hands and the birth certificate, reportedly falsified, was provided.

A raid on the house by combined squads of provincial and Montreal police immediately followed the transaction. Police said they recovered the money, which had been marked, and took the child into custody.

TOOK THREE DAYS

Dealings for the purchase of the baby were under way for three days before the alleged sale was completed, police said.

Police said the baby ring has been operating for the last 10 years and has smuggled more than 1,000 babies into the U.S. Lawyers, doctors and social workers, many of whom were innocent dupes, were said to be involved.

Austria Rejects Red Plan To Keep Troops In Country

BERLIN (CP)—Austria formally rejected today Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov's proposal that the Big Four powers keep troops in the country even after conclusion of a treaty giving Austria its independence. Foreign Minister Leopold Figl said such an arrangement would mean there would be no liberation of his country.

He told Molotov, Foreign Secretary Eden, State Secretary Dulles and Foreign Minister Bidault that it was impossible for the Austrian government to accept the Molotov proposal.

He asked which of the Big Four would be willing to present such a proposition regarding his own country to his own parliament.

DIRECT APPROACH

Figl made his direct approach inside the chamber of the Big Four conference, to which the Austrian delegation had been invited.

The Western foreign ministers already have written off hope of concluding an Austrian state treaty at this conference, although the debate on it will run into an extraordinary Sunday session.

Figl told the Big Four his government rejected the whole suspicious notion that an anschluss

Taxis Help Catch Attackers

TORONTO (CP)—"I'm stabbed, I'm bleeding," gasped a Toronto cab driver over his radio Friday night and brought a fleet of 40 taxis speeding to his aid.

Kenneth Griffin, 55, bleeding from five knife wounds, one of which just missed his jugular vein, described his attackers as two youthful passengers who had taken his wallet containing $26 after a desperate struggle.

Within minutes, two suspects were captured by the police.

Charged with attempted murder and robbery with violence were William McCauley, 18, and Robert Burns, 19.

They were spotted by two cab drivers racing to answer Griffin's call. Their location was sent by radio to police.

Twenty stitches were put in Griffin.

Hold Parents In Baby's Death

WASAGA BEACH (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bradman, parents of a nine-month-old boy who burned to death Friday night, were charged today with criminal negligence.

Police said the parents were located 45 minutes after the fire broke out. They had gone out early in the afternoon to visit friends.

The baby's small brother and sister were rescued from the blazing, one-room summer cottage by David Scott, 10, and Leonard Pitt, 9, who were unaware the baby was still inside.

"The two kids were standing behind the screen door but they couldn't get out," Leonard said.

Wasaga Beach is about 30 miles southwest of Orillia.

Wagon Tips On Milkman Saved By Mate

A milkman rushed to the rescue of another milkman early today when 30-year-old Robert Adams, driver for Silverwood's dairy, was pinned beneath his overturned milk wagon on Bethune St.

Ted Robinson, who sells milk for Campbell's dairy, saw the Silverwood's wagon turn over, hurrying its driver face down in the snow. He managed to get Adams free and to extinguish an oil burner which was in danger of setting fire to the wagon.

Adams was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital immediately and the Examiner interviewed him as technicians were X-raying him for a suspected neck fracture. Fortunately, his injuries were not extensive, but without the prompt action of Mr. Robinson, he might have lain for some sime under a burning wagon.

Mr. Adams said that he had just walked back and climbed into the vehicle when the horse, "Prince," became nervous and began backing up. The wagon ram-

Snow Maroons Teacher, Pupils

COLLINGWOOD (CP) — A teacher and 13 pupils were brought out of their tiny Bata school, three miles south of here, by car Friday after being marooned 28 hours by a driving blizzard. Collingwood is about 25 miles west of Barrie.

Mrs. Lillian Durant and the 13 pupils, ranging in age from eight to 11 years, were stranded at the school Thursday when the school bus was unable to get through to pick them up.

The children were apparently none the worse for their experience.

They were warm and comfortable in the school, which is heated by an oil furnace, said Arnold Vancise, board of education official. Mrs. Durant, he added, told stories and organized games, then made sure the children had a good night's sleep.

Food was brought to them by farmers who tramped through the snow on snowshoes.

Believe Rhee Bluffing On North Korea Invasion

WASHINGTON (AP)—United States diplomats are understood to view South Korean president Syngman Rhee's threat to march against North Korea as a bluff — just what he said it wasn't intended to be. They also are known to hold out slight hope for his government's offer of troops for Indo-China.

A French embassy spokesman said Friday his government, which still had not received the offer officially, would reject the proferred South Korean division for fear its involvement in the seven-year-old war might bring on open Chinese intervention.

The French commissioner - general for Indo-China said in Bangkok today his country is ready to negotiate a settlement with the insurgent Vietminh. Maurice Dejean, the commissioner, charged at a press conference that military help from China is prolonging the conflict.

VOICES CONFIDENCE

Dejean said France is trying to prevent "another Korea," and he voiced confidence that the Vietminh rebels will be repelled from the Laotian capital of Luangprabang. Enemy elements are within a few miles of that city.

The Indo - China problem has caused some political repercussions in France, where assemblyman, Pierre Mendes - France charged Friday night in a speech at Vernon that Foreign Minister Bidault is begging Mao Tze-Tung, the Red Chinese leader, to stop backing the Vietminh.

DISCOUNT PROPOSAL

Diplomatic officials in Washington are inclined to discount another South Korean proposal, that U.S. Gen. James A. Van Fleet come out of retirement to train both South Korean and Indo-Chinese troops. Van Fleet commanded the 8th army in Korea during the build-up of South Korea's 16 divisions.

There has been no official reaction here to Rhee's moves. But his declaration that free Asia must unite to crush the Communist threat goes along with a Washington view that the loss of Indo-China would just about doom all southeast Asia to Red domination.

Blame Ex-King Zog

LONDON (AP) — Communist Albania today accused ex-king Zog of working for the Americans as a spy. Zog has been in Egypt since 1946.

Slight Mistake Of 2,000 Miles

ST. LOUIS (CP)—"I was surprised, to say the least."

This was the understandable comment of FO. N. L. Harrison of the RCAF when he landed his jet plane at the municipal airport here Friday night. He had set out originally for North Bay, some 2,000 miles from here.

Harrison, of Toronto, and FO. G. G. MacLeod of Montreal, took off late Friday from the RCAF station at Portage La Prairie, Man., for the flight to North Bay. The distance from Portage La Prairie to North Bay is about 900 miles, roughly the same as the distance from the Manitoba base to St. Louis. The directions, however, differ by about one-third the circumference of the compass.

"I began to suspect something was wrong," Harrison said, "because we picked up none of the scheduled check points on the radio."

All his navigational aids had failed shortly after he left Portage, and the ground was obscured.

As the evening wore on he reported himself lost on the radio. The appeal was heard at the control tower here and operator Jerry Moonier called in ground-controlled approach aids to bring the plane safely in.

5-Power Parley Asked On Korea

BERLIN (Reuters) — The three Western powers have proposed to Russia at the Big Four conference here that a five-power conference on Korea, attended by other belligerents as well as the big powers, should be held in Geneva this spring, conference sources said today.

The Western ministers suggested the meetings on Korea might be followed by a further conference on Indo-China at which the three associated states of Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia would be present.

Vermont Governor Endorses Seaway

PLATTSBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Lee E. Emerson of Vermont "unqualifiedly endorses and approves" the proposed St. Lawrence seaway project.

Emerson, who previously had not taken a public stand on the controversial lakes-to-the-sea waterway, announced his position Friday night at a political dinner.

Vermont's legislature in past years has opposed the seaway on the ground that its construction would be a trend toward socialism.

The seaway measure has been approved by the United States Senate and is now before the House of Representatives for final legislative action. It has the support of President Eisenhower.

Emerson said he was "convinced that Canada will build it alone if we do not participate, and this would not be conducive to the continuance of the present healthy spirit of co-operation and friendship between the two nations."

Finish Preparations For H-Bomb Tests

HONOLULU (AP) — Preparations for the coming hydrogen bomb test series in the Pacific are nearing a climax, according to indications in this strategic mid-ocean staging a

But there is no indication that any of the planned series of tests has actually started.

A recent rash of Pacific area earthquakes prompted speculation that an H-bomb already has been exploded but seismologists flatly deny the possibility of any such connection.

The tests, which will include the first trial of an actual combat-designed hydrogen bomb, are expected in two or three weeks.

PO May Have Own Truck Fleet

OTTAWA (CP)—The post office department is toying with the idea of operating its own fleet of mail transportation trucks in communities across Canada, it was learned today.

As the first step in the experiment, it has decided to cancel a trucking contract in Windsor, Ont., and buy about seven panel vehicles to do its own mail pick-up and distribution in that area.

The changeover is scheduled for next April or May. Later, if the department finds it provides a more economical and flexible transportation system, it will consider ending private trucking contracts in other areas, increasing its own motor fleet.

The department already owns a large fleet of trucks which it uses to transport mail in the Ottawa area. But in most other areas it hands over the transportation contract to a private concern under a tender system.

Miners Hold Meeting To Consider Offer

TIMMINS (CP) — Preston East Dome miners met today to consider a company settlement offer which their union committee rejected in Toronto earlier this week.

Preston East Dome, which has been struck since July 13, employs more than 400 men.

Negotiations between company and the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) began a month ago. In a meeting in the Queen's Park offices of Labor Minister Daley this week the company submitted an offer which the union committee refused to accept but agreed to submit to the men without recommendation.

Begins Talks In Italy

West Must Maintain Alliance—PM Says

ROME (CP) — Prime Minister St. Laurent, opening a three-day visit to Rome, today mounted the marble steps of the tremendous 150-year old monument to King Victor Emmanuel II to place a wreath on the tomb of Italy's unknown soldier.

The spectacular ceremony at the Piazza Venezia, a wide square dwarfed by the ornate white structure, was the first of a round of official visits occupying the Canadian leader most of the day.

The wreath - placing was conducted in bright sunshine with a guard drawn up at the foot of the monument's steps

Police held back Italian passers-by while two carabinieri carried the eight-foot wreath up before th prime minister, who helped place it on the soldier's tomb on behalf of ...ans.

The prime minister then called on government officials, held a press conference at the Grand Hotel where he occupies the royal suite, and visited President Luigi Einaudi, with whom he lunched.

TALKS SCHEDULED

This afternoon, talks were scheduled with Premier Mario Scelba and his ministers. Tonight the Italian government will hold a banquet at Villa Madama.

Pope Pius' poor health left in doubt the prime minister's private audience, originally scheduled for Sunday. Canadian embassy informants indicated the decision on the audience probably will be taken by the Holy Father's physician.

The 40-minute press conference dealt with the goodwill aspect of the prime minister's world tour, European and Asian political problems, Italian emigration to Canada, Canadian-Italian trade and world peace.

He said a $500,000 Canadian foundation will be set up to sponsor grants to Canadians for studies in Italy.

On the European situation, he said that Russia's conduct at the Big Four talks now being held in Berlin makes it "obvious" that the West must maintain and improve its alliance.

"If we really want peace we must be prepared to undertake war to protect it," the 72-year-old Canadian leader added.

Speaking in French, St. Laurent told reporters that United Nations action in Korea "proved that concerted action is worth while."

The Canadian leader arrived here Friday by air from West Germany after a short visit to the Gros Tenquin air station in eastern France where he saw the Canadian Sabre jet squadron based there. Bad weather prevented a visit to Canada's other overseas fighter base at Zweibrucken, West Germany.

ENCOURAGING SIGNS

The prime minister told The Canadian Press during the plane trip from Gros Tenquin to Rome that his stops in West Germany and Paris have revealed "encouraging signs of increased confidence."

In France he had found concern over the Indo-China situation but "they feel that when they can remove that situation it will pave the way for removal of all difficulties in the way of a proper set-up for the European army."

Rain greeted the Canadian party on arrival late Friday at nearby Ciampino airport. Italy's new premier, Mario Scelba, was on hand to greet the Canadian prime minister and told him Italy "has the closest feeling for the Canadian people, partly because so many of our own sons have gone to live in your great country."

Ambassador Pierre Dupuy and nearly 300 members of Rome's Canadian colony also were on hand at the airport.

Government Not Planning Drastic Anti-Depression Laws To Check Jobless

OTTAWA (CP)—The federal government is not planning "drastic" anti-depression measures to check unemployment.

Finance Minister Abbott said Friday in the Commons the government is ready to take action if economic activity slumps, but that there is "no justification" now for stronger measures than are in effect.

"I have a high degree of confidence that, when our winter season of normally-reduced activity is past economic activity in Canada is likely to resume its upward trend at a satisfactory rate."

He was replying to J. M. Macdonnell, Progressive Conservative financial critic, who had asked what "fiscal and monetary measures" were proposed against unemployment.

PLANS PREFERABLE

Labor Minister Gregg told the House recently that these were preferable to launching a large-scale program of public works to absorb jobless.

Friday, Mr. Abbott indicated the government will be undertaking more public works than previously.

"In planning our expenditures for the coming year," he said, "we have followed a less restrictive policy in public works."

He did not explain "less restrictive," but other government spokesmen have stated that next year the administration plans to spend all the money allotted to it by Parliament for public works. In the past, there usually has been a carryover of uncompleted spending from year to year.

NOT WARRANTED

However, Mr. Abbott said the cabinet does not believe that "present conditions warrant the adoption of drastic or large-scale anti-deflationary measures."

"Economic activity in some lines is at present below the levels of a year ago," he said, "but industrial and economic activity as a whole in Canada is still at a very high level."

He added "strong inflationary pressures" of two years ago have subsided, with the result the government has been withdrawing anti-inflation measures such as restrictions on credit.

Second Child Dies From Burns In House Fire

FIELD, Ont. (CP) — Death toll in a fire which levelled a frame home here rose to two today with the death of a two-year-old Aurel Garbeau seven hours after his mother braved the flames to carry him from a second - storey bedroom.

His brother, three-year-old Hubert Garbeau, died in the flames. The mother, Mrs. Fernand Garbeau, 24, suffered minor burns in rescuing Aurel. The father, 25, was at work in a lumber camp.

Aurel died in hospital this morning at Sturgeon Falls where he was taken in critical condition following the fire late Friday in this settlement 30 miles northwest of North Bay.

Mrs. Garbeau told authorities she was downstairs in the tiny house when she noticed smoke rolling down the stairs. She tried three times before she was able to force her way into the flame-filled upper storey. She found Aurel and carried him outside.

Neighbors had to restrain the mother from rushing back into the flames for the other child, who was trapped in an upstairs bedroom.

Mrs. Garbeau told authorities she believed the fire was caused by faulty wiring.

Canada, Italy Sign Agreement

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and Italy have signed an agreement to encourage the exchange of cultural information and aid students studying abroad.

The external affairs department today announced that under terms of the agreement the Italian government will pay $500,000 to a Canadian fund to be established at Rome. The annual interest of about $25,000 will be used in Italy for Canadian cultural activities including scholarships and fellowships for Canadians doing research or studying in Italy.

The $500,000 will be in Italian government bonds with an interest rate of five per cent. This payment is in accordance with a previous settlement concerning Canadian funds in Italy which cannot be taken from the country due to currency restrictions.

The agreement gives the Italian government the right to maintain at its own expense an Italian cultural institute in Montreal with generally similar aims to the Canadian foundation to be established in Rome.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP)—Only feature to trade Friday on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange was some modest export interest in barley in connection with trade reports that Japan had purchased one cargo of Canadian barley.

Other trade was dull as outside interest was at a minimum due to the holiday in the United States. As a result, all prices held to a narrow range, but generally higher. Prices for the top grades of Class 2, IWA and domestic wheat were unchanged.

Split Develops In Hearst CC

HEARST, Ont. (CP) — Denis Charbonneau, member of the Hearst Chamber of Commerce, said today that President Pat Philbin and a "minority group" have distorted the purposes of the chamber by "misrepresenting the actual state of Hearst's economy and adopting a policy of unwarranted hostility towards the Ontario government."

Mr. Charbonneau said he was expressing the opinion of 30 other chamber members and "most of the townspeople" of this town of about 2,000 people, 125 miles northwest of Timmins.

He said they objected to the way Mr. Philbin and the chamber's secretary, Tom Flood, and a few other members have exceeded their mandate and allowed "a program for economic betterment to turn into a political sideshow."

The split is one of policy in respect to the chamber's efforts to have provincial bans lifted on the export of pulpwood from the district, Mr. Charbonneau said.

U.F.O., and so impressed the party that she was nominated as its candidate for the 1921 election.

She toured her riding in an old car which broke down regularly and completed many of her trips on foot. She made 55 speeches in seven weeks, during which she had barely time to change her clothes.

Always outspoken, she was one of the hottest members of the CCF "ginger group." A hater of war, she fought cadet training, and in April, 1927, moved that an expenditure of $59,000 for this purpose be reduced to $1.

She still felt the same in 1948, but never opposed the maintenance of a standing army. She reluctantly voted for Canadian participation at the beginning of the Second World War in 1939.

In the early days of her career idealism prompted her to hand back $6,000 of the sessional indemnity, when it was increased from $2,500 to $4,000. The $6,000 represented the difference over a period of four years. She discovered later, however, that her legitimate expenses were higher than she figured, and threafter kept the money.

OFFERED SENATE SEAT

She was once offered a seat in the Senate. She refused with this comment: "The Senate as at present constituted is to me a huge joke. I couldn't possibly sit in it and spend the time laughing at myself." In 1949 she told a student's meeting, "I can't think that the Senate is any use at all except that it is a very nice club for a lot of nice people."

When the CCF was organized in 1932, she went into it with her farm clubs, but fought a consistent battle with Communists, who at that time seemed to be trying to move into the new party.

Between 1921 and 1948 she won seven elections and lost three. The only one that upset her was losing the South East Grey seat in 1940. The same year she accepted a nomination for a by-election in Saskatoon and lost. The third defeat was in the Ontario provincial election of 1945.

When she was stricken with coronary thrombosis in 1945 the doctor told her to rest. This she did for two years, but she was restless.

"So I don't live long," she told the doctor, "but I'll live what's left doing what I want to do."

In this spirit she entered the 1948 Ontario election and won the York East seat—again as the only woman in the House.

Despite Agnes Macphail's earnestness, her sense of humor saved her from being a heavy-handed politician, and she became popular as an after-dinner speaker. She nearly always referred to the male members of the government as "the boys," and while their procrastination bothered her in the early days, she later looked on their foibles almost philosophically.

French Ships Carry Goods To Red China

By RAWLE KNOX

SINGAPORE—Controls on the shipment of strategic materials to Communist China are once again harassing the port authorities here. Hard on an incident in which a French ship, the "Ouisterhom," was refused bunkers here after the Singapore authorities had been warned that in addition to her deck cargo of tanks for the French forces in Indo-China she was also carrying "iron and steel products" in her hold destined for Shanghai, there is news that other French ships carrying similar cargo to China are on their way.

Reliable sources say that one million pounds worth of iron and steel products purchased from France by the Peking government is being delivered in scattered ship-loads.

KEEN WATCH

The United States Consulate-General here, which naturally keeps a keen watch on such shipments, is calm about the whole affair. It is pointed out that the French export control system differs from that of the United States, as indeed does that of Britain (for example, Britain, like the United States, would not export to China iron goods likely to be used for war, but would supply unlimited quantities of anti-biotics, the exports of which to China is utterly prohibited by the United States).

United States diplomats here say that the French contract to China was entered into before the United Nations embargo agreement and this, by French regulations, may be fulfilled. Nevertheless they appear to approve the Singapore Government's action in the case of the "Ouisterhom" and predict that such shipments from France will drop off sharply in the near future.

Gold Coast Voters Given Greater Power

ACCRA, Gold Coast (Reuters)—For the first time in their history all the eligible voters in the Gold Coast, one of Britain's African colonies now heading rapidly for self-government, will be able to elect members directly to the legislative assembly in the colony's second general election due to take place in May or June.

In the last elections, held in 1951, only a proportion of the members of the assembly were elected by direct vote. This time the number of members of the assembly will be increased from 84 to 104, and all will be elected directly by the people.

Since there is no electoral roll, the first phase of the electoral campaign will be to get eligible voters to register. During the registration period, 19 movie and public address trucks, each based at a strategic point, will cover the area, stopping wherever there are a few mud huts. Leaflets are distributed which set out the details carefully in one of 10 different languages.

A big question is how many women will register. In many villages, particularly in the North, it depends on the attitude of the local chief. If he decides that the women shall register, all will do so. If he says they will not, not one will make her mark.

Chamberlain Appeasement Gave RAF Time To Prepare Forces

By JACK AULD

LONDON (Reuters)—The Munich pact negotiated by Neville Chamberlain failed to appease Hitler, but it gave the Royal Air Force time to prepare for the epic struggle.

Between the signing of the Munich pact in 1938 and the outbreak of war a year later the RAF was able to increase its strength in modern eight-gun fighters by more than five times.

This is one of the disclosures in "Fight at Odds," the first volume of an officially-commissioned three-volume, illustrated history of the RAF in the Second World War.

The author, Denis Richards, head of Morley College, London, was given access to secret documents. He points out that between the two world wars the RAF was "withered down" so that in September, 1938, the fighter command "including all reserves" could muster only 93 of the new eight-gun fighters to oppose a German long-range striking force of 1,200 modern bombers.

"All the remainder of its 666 aircraft were out-dated bipianes," he notes, adding that "a year later, when war came, over 500 of the modern fighters were immediately available for operations."

In addition to humanitarian considerations, he says, Britain and France decided at the outbreak of war to avoid unrestricted bombing because Britain had only 33 effective bombing squadrons and the French had "no bombers worth mentioning."

But when German bombers plastered Rotterdam in May, 1940, this policy was made unworkable and Britain decided to bomb the Ruhr, which Richards says was "an informal invitation to the Luftwaffe to bomb London."

Then he adds that owing to the inefficient bombing techniques available at the time the bombers achieved none of their objectives and "the assault on the Ruhr, most cherished of all air staff projects, was a failure."

Nevertheless, "Fight at Odds" discloses that Prime Minister Churchill told his cabinet on the first anniversary of the outbreak of the war: "The navy can lose us the war, but only air force can win it. Therefore our supreme effort must be to gain overwhelming mastery in the air. The fighters are our salvation, but the bombers alone provide the means to victory."

Republicans Won't Reveal Number Of Reds Found

WASHINGTON (AP)—After all the Republican talk in the 1952 campaign about Communists-in-government, just how many Communists did the Republicans find when they took over from the Democrats?

President Eisenhower himself announced 2,200 government employees had been "separated" from their jobs under his security program. Under that program a person could be fired not only for being a Communist or Communist sympathizer but for being a drunk, homo-sexual or a gossip.

How many of the 2,200 were found to be actual Communists or fellow-travellers or otherwise subversive and how many were let out for the various other reasons? Eisenhower didn't say.

In spite of demands by Democrats in Congress, and repeated questioning of the president by reporters, the administration still hasn't said how many of the "separated" people were subversive.

CLAIM NUMBER SMALL

Members of the House of Representatives have said they have information from the state department that only 11 of 534 employees cut loose from that department as security risks in the last year were fired for loyalty reasons.

Democrats protested in the Senate that Republicans inside and outside the White House have been implying most of the "separated" employees were Communists.

Some powerful Republicans have insisted Communists-in-government would be a main issue in this year's congressional elections. Eisenhower has said he hopes any fear of Reds "actively undermining" the government will have disappeared by November.

POLICE NOT FOOLING

"We have been given instructions to end, once and for all, the baby traffic out of Quebec," said George W. Hill, senior crown prosecutor in Montreal.

Baring of the baby racket came two days after arrival of Ernest A. Mitler, New York assistant district attorney, who came to Montreal with a woman detective to pursue the investigation. Earlier, Hill and a Montreal detective had worked with him on the case in New York.

Mr. Mitler said many of the babies went to Jewish parents in the U.S. He had interviewed 70 families who had "adopted" babies in Montreal.

Persons adopting the babies did not know anything was wrong. Members of the ring obtained false birth certificates and then asked U.S. couples to come to Montreal for appearance before a registrar.

The registrar issued a certificate declaring them the natural parents of the child, but the baby dealers told the couples these were legal adoption papers.

Officials in Montreal said Jewish couples in New York paid from $3,000 to $10,000 for a child, believing they were legally adopting a baby of the Jewish faith.

In fact, the babies were frequently bought from unmarried Christian mothers who had been paid $50 and hospital costs.

CRIME: NO PAYOFF

A more or less prominent habitue of Water St. spiked a parking meter with a deadly weapon for sub-zero temperatures Friday: a wet nickle. It froze midway in, causing the meter to rack up an hour's time which, of course, wouldn't expire until the meter thawed. Minutes later a meter officer happened along, dissembled the bandit and put it back into working order. Figuring someone had been out to gyp the city he racked up the expired sign and moved on. Conclusion: The offender got about half his nickle's worth of time from the infernal machine because he had tried to get too much. T.C.

Hungary Ends Collective Farms

By LAJOS LEDERER

LONDON — Dissolution of the collective farms in Hungary is now in full swing, according to independent reports reaching London.

Despite the initial hesitation following the new Hungarian government's conciliatory policy towards the peasants last summer, the Budapest regime has been forced to retreat from the collective farm system on account of the further deterioration of agriculture, caused by the effective resistance of the peasant community.

It is estimated that by the end of last year over 50 per cent of the collectivized peasants had left the collective farms. A recent statement made by the Hungarian Minister of Agriculture gives the figures of collective membership as 263,700. Before the withdrawals the official membership figure was over half a million. As a result of these mass withdrawals 70 per cent of the land is now once more in the hands of independent peasants. The remaining collectives in their present state have shown themselves to be inefficient in carrying out the agricultural program.

Thus the Bulgarian government now finds itself more dependent than ever before on the good will of the independent peasants — a community which six months ago the regime was condemning as its worst enemy. (OFNS, Copyright).

Hold Kelso Inquest Late In February

NORTH BAY (CP) — Inspector Tom Wright of the Ontario provincial police said today an inquest into the New Year's Eve death of Mrs. Jacqueline Kelso, 22, of Sturgeon Falls, will likely be held later this month or early in March.

Inspector Wright said the evidence he has gathered will be presented at the inquest.

"Numerous people have been questioned and there are many more to be questioned," he added. "I must be absent next week so an inquest will not be held immediately."

Mrs. Kelso, who was pregnant, collapsed and died in her home after returning from a movie on New Year's eve.

"There is no suspicion at the moment," Inspector Wright said.

"Missing" Farmer Appears At Ruins

COCHRANE (CP)—Guy Robinson, 50-year-old farmer and school secretary, appeared at the site of his burned farmhouse today as provincial police were searching the ruins for his body.

The farmhouse was razed by fire Friday night and no trace of Robinson could be found. It was feared he had perished in the flames.

Robinson told police he had burned his fingers in attempting to put out the fire with snow and trying to save his furniture and went to the home of a neighbor for the night.

Provincial police constable Mike Mintenko spotted the flames while on patrol and found furniture piled outside the flaming structure.

DIVED OUT

"I dived out the only open door just as the wagon started to tip," related Adams. "The next thing I knkew I was lying face down in about a foot of snow with the top part of the wagon on top of me. Luckily, my left arm was free and I scraped at the snow to get some air."

"The small oil burner, which I carry must have been ready to start a fire in the wagon. If the other guy (Robinson) hadn't come along I'd have been roasted as well."

(Mr. Adams who lives at 673 Gilchrist St., said that he had a fair number of full milk crates in the wagon. Most of them tumbled out on top of him. Apart from getting a scare, he thought Prince had not suffered any real harm. He did not know what had made the horse nervous. It was just one of those things.

Canton To Calais Railroad Scheme In China

By O. M. GREEN

LONDON—The Chinese Government has decided to undertake the most ambitious piece of engineering that the Communists have yet attempted, namely, to bridge the Yangtze River at Hankow, thus linking China's two chief trunk railways, the Canton-Hankow and Hankow-Peking, which have a total length of 1,160 miles.

If successful, the bridge will make it possible to travel continuously by rail from Canton (indeed from Hong Kong, if the Communists would open the Canton-Kowloon line to uninterrupted traffic) to Calais. The only change necessary would be at the Russian borders, from the European gauge, also used in China, to the broader Russian gauge.

The difficulty in bridging the Yangtze is not the length (the intended bridge will be only 325 yards long) but the tremendous difference between the Yangtze's levels in winter and in summer when the Tibetan snows melt.

At Hankow in winter one looks down into a gulf forty feet deep, with sides almost too steep to climb. At the bottom the water is still deep enough for steamers.

FLOOD PROBLEMS

A further problem is the floods. The Communists are trying to check these with reservoirs and sluices to contain flood water. But in 1931 flood water ran four feet deep in the streets of Hankow and spread over a tract of the middle Yangtze as big as Wales.

When the Canton-Hankow railway was completed in the nineteen-thirties with the aid of the British indemnity for the Boxer rebellion, the question of a bridge was carefully examined and would probably have been undertaken, but for the Japanese invasion.

The Chinese Government's decision was announced simultaneously with the departure of the first of the bi-weekly service of through expresses from Peking to Moscow, which was given a tremendous send-off by all the Communist bigwigs, including Mr. Yulin, the Russian Ambassador, and with the conventional encomiums in the Press on Russo-Chinese friendship.

Austria Rejects

(union) could take place between Austria and Germany. He also commented on another point of the Molotov plan that he thought it was unnecessary to change draft treaty provisions already agreed on by adding a new section to bar Austria from alliances — obviously meaning alliances with the Western powers.

Figl said his government is ready to adopt a policy of strict neutrality.

Advisers to the Big Four agreed earlier to wind up the conference next week.

MOST APPROVE

The decision to end the conference, was taken by the four-power experts at a meeting this morning.

Foreign Minister Molotov said Friday that Russian troops will remain in Austria until a German peace treaty is written. To this new condition he added an old one —the troublesome Trieste problem also must be solved first.

Western delegations indicate clearly that the conditions cannot be accepted. They now see no chance for completion of the German peace treaty for years. And a Yugoslav-Italian squabble blocks efforts of Britain and the United States to pull their troops from Trieste, the strategic free territory at the head of the Adriatic.

State Secretary Dulles denounced the Russian tactics as shabby. He said the Molotov proposal "gives me a cold chill."

AUSTRIAN GLUM

Austria's foreign minister, Leopold Figl, who had pleaded at the ministers' table for his country's independence, was glum. Within Austria, still waiting for redemption of the Big Four's wartime pledge to restore her sovereignty, the reaction was deep gloom, Hitlerian and Allied occupations have stretched out 16 years.

As Molotov has outlined Russia's position, there now cannot be an Austrian independence treaty until both the Trieste and German problems are settled; there cannot be a German treaty until both the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the European Defence Community project are liquidated; and there cannot be peace in Asia until Red China is granted an honored place among the world's big powers, a place [illegible] ists she does not deserve.

Only on the Asian front do the Western ministers see any hope in the closing days of the conference. Dulles indicated his own despair of progress by asking that a committee be named to map out the conference's unfinished work. He said he cannot remain indefinitely in Berlin, but must get back to Washington next week to report to President Eisenhower and Congress.

Howe Predicts Bright Future For West

WINNIPEG (CP) — Trade Minister Howe Friday night predicted a bright future for the West, though grain marketing had temporarily changed "for the worse."

In fact, if he had his career to live over, he would, without hesitation, move west—to the "land of opportunity," he said.

"If there are uncertainties about the outlook for prairie grain, there can certainly be none about the outlook for industrial development on the Prairies," he said in a speech prepared for delivery before the Winnipeg Chamber of Commerce, celebrating its 75th anniversary.

In some ways, industrial expansion has been greater on the Prairies since the Second World War that in any other part of Canada.

The Prairies had great spheres of development in oil, natural gas, chemical plants and discovery of new ore bodies.

GRAIN STILL ON TOP

He realized, of course, that for many more years, grain will be the principal source of prairie income. And the outlook was not entirely dark.

"For the time being, there has been a change for the worse in the marketing situation . . . I believe that if the people and nations are sensible, balance will in due course return.

"My own view, based on the long years that I have been associated with grain marketing, both in and out of government, is that the world is prepared, on the average, to pay prices for the kind of grain produced on our Prairies, which will enable Prairie farmers to earn a decent living."

Spokes For Knitting

VIENNA (Reuters) — Hungarian women have been taking spokes from bicycle wheels and sharpening them to substitute for scarce knitting needles, the Communist newspaper Esti Budapest, just received in Austria, complains. The newspaper said the practice was criticized at a recent public meeting as being costly and "a great danger to bicycle owners."

Sewer For Smuggling

COMO, Italy (Reuters)—A sewer running from Italian to Swiss territory near the frontier post of Chiasso has been used as an underground cigaret smuggling channel, police discovered Friday night. They saw a man scurry into the sewer and emerge half an hour later hugging a carton of cigarets wrapped in waterproof cloth. He was arrested.

Floods Hit Argentina

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — The worst floods in 20 years, fed by heavy rains and melting snow in the Andes, swept over Argentina's central Mendoza province today. They interrupted the Trans-Andean Railway to Chile and caused at least one death. A half-mile or more of the international railway was washed out and a short tunnel was blocked by debris.

Want Horses Featured More At Fall Fairs

TORONTO (CP) — J. S. Walker of Leamington, chairman of the class A and B fairs section of the Ontario Association of Agriculture, said Friday more consideration should be given the horse at fall fairs.

Delegates at the Association's closing session of its 1954 annual meeting agreed with him.

Mr. Walker suggested fair boards might find room for a class for standard bred brood mares and foals and also for yearling colts.

SOURCE OF REVENUE

Although the standard bred is not recognized as a utility breed, farmers have found a good source of revenue in raising it, he said.

Mr. Walker said harness races do a great deal for fall fairs and are a top drawing card. He said he feels a little more encouragement for this feature might not be out of line.

Howard Giles of Almonte was elected Association president. Vice-presidents are Raymond Comfort of St. Annes and C. R. Charlton of Ilderton. F. A. Lashley of Toronto is vice-president.

Giant's Causeway In Northern Ireland One Of Natural Wonders In World

Every tour of Northern Ireland should include a visit to the Giant's Causeway, one of the most extraordinary geological formations to be seen in Europe and one of the natural wonders of the world.

Is it the work of Finn MacCoul? The Giant's Causeway is said to be of volcanic origin. But it is also said to be the work of the giant, Finn MacCoul, who tried to bridge the narrow sea which lay between him and a rival giant on the Scottish coast.

The Causeway is a remarkable basaltic formation consisting of thousands of five-and six-sided rock columns packed together, grouped at the base of cliffs and stretching out to sea. It is of volcanic origin, and was possibly formed by the contact of molten basalt with sea water.

Situated on the Antrim Coast it is only 8 miles from the seaside and golfing resort of Portrush and there is good bus service. On the coast by the Causeway are two hotels so that meals are no problem, and reservations can be made for a stay right on the spot.

SEE IT IN SUNLIGHT

As one descends the path, the view of the Causeway is breathtaking. It shows in the sunlight a mixture of colors — green, yellow, blue, a faint pink and all speckled with gold. A first view of the Causeway should undoubtedly be in sunlight.

Although visitors can explore the Causeway with a guide for a few shillings, it can be more interesting when explored alone.

It is not a long causeway jutting into the sea in a style of a modern pier. It is its formation and its curious individual features, rather than its length, which makes it something never to be forgotten. Right in the middle of the clusters of many-sided columns is the Giant's Chair. It is a wishing chair of high order.

Then there is the Giant's Gateway. You cannot miss it. It towers above you, columned and queer— so that you are glad to be through in case the Giant's ghost might decide to close its portals.

LOOKS LIKE CASTLE

Following the path you soon come to the Ampitheatre, a wonder of symmetry which might have been made by human hands so exact are its measurements. Another outstanding feature is the Chimney Point, whose castellated appearance once led the vessels of the Spanish Armada to fire on it in 1588 in mistake for Dunlace Castle.

Northern Ireland is one of the most beautiful corners of the United Kingdom and Belfast itself is approached by a wide and lovely lough. The physical situation of Belfast rivals and perhaps surpasses that of Edinburgh and by travelling only a few miles from the centre of the city, the vistor finds himself either on an enchanting coast or in a well-cultivated countryside intersected by mountain ranges or long wooded glens.

The Mourne Mountains in County Down are another attraction for tourists. The Glens of Antrim are renowned for their beauty and so is the famous Antrim Coast Road.

GREAT VARIETY

The counties of Antrim and Down, separated only by Belfast Lough, could not be more dissimilar if they were a thousand miles apart. As the steamer sails up the lough, the voyager sees dark mountains on the Antrim side, low graceful green hills on the Down side. But there are no mountains in Antrim equal in height or massive grandeur to the Mournes in Down. Down has not the grand coast road that reaches from Larne to the Giant's Causeway, nor has it Antrim's lovely glens, but it has silent valleys in the Mournes which compel the traveller to believe that he is at last alone in an overcrowded world.

The second city in Northern Ireland is Londonderry, more popularly known as Derry. It is close to mountains and within easy reach of magnificent beaches. The shores of County Londonderry stretch from Lough Foyle to Portrush, where it is said the air is so potent that anyone living in that place and wishing to die must migrate. It is said to be physically impossible for anybody to die in Portrush where the Atlantic breakers roll down from the North Pole and fall on the sand and rocks in a smother of white foam.

The Ulster scene is superb and visitors are delighted with the friendly atmosphere of its people, a sturdy, loveable race.

St. Andrew's WA Hold Tea, Bake Sale

MILLBROOK (ENS) — St. Andrew's WMS met on Wednesday afternoon in the church hall.

A report of the presbyterial meeting in Peterborough, held on January 26th, was given by Mrs. Hetherington. Four members from St. Andrew's were in attendance.

Mrs. John Rowland, supply secretary, reported that one quilt was ready for quilting and that another was in preparation. The bale is to be sent the end of February. Articles for it may be left at the Mirror-Reporter office.

Mrs. John McKnight said that the Women's Association were passing in to the WMS a quilt which had been given the WA.

The corresponding secretary was asked to send letters of sympathy to two families recently bereaved.

A story, "Digging Deeper," was told by Miss Hetherington. The World Day of Prayer to be held this year in St. Andrew's church hall on March 5th was announced. The offering was received by Mrs. David Lunn and dedicated by "We give thee but thine own" repeated in unison.

At the close of the meeting candy was passed and a social half hour enjoyed.

Another Fire

A fire is a saddening spectacle and sad to think about. The fire which gutted the big Loblaw food store Thursday night, leaving it a grotesque and ugly spectre of ice and sludge and leering girders, makes the mind writhe and the heart sore. For it is destruction, waste of humanity's substance and food. Where there was brightness, buoyant business and attractive goods, there is now a stinking, dank and dirty mess. The two stores beside it which were destroyed at the same time are also an awful sight.

* * *

"Why so many fires in Peterborough? What is wrong?" Peterborough people ask. An investigation and report on the Loblaw fire is yet to be made, but we can remark, in a general way, that nothing is awry. Peterborough people are conscious of the number of Peterborough fires because they see and remember them. Other places have an equal number of costly fires, but the Peterborough memory of them fades. One reads of a big fire in St. Thomas, for instance, but two days later it is forgotten by Peterborough people. The fire loss in Peterborough in the last dozen years has not been abnormal, or wildly above the Provincial average.

* * *

Thursday night's fire shows again that even the most modern-appearing buildings are not proof against strong flame and heat. The Loblaw store was new, tidy, and substantial. It was not, of course, "fire-proof"; no building ever is, certainly not one with wooden floors, paper cartons and inflammable goods, and no sprinklers. And no building which has to be heated is ever secure from the risk of fire. The palaces of Venice have survived the centuries not because they are built over water but because they are stone, and have no central heating.

* * *

Fire has, unfortunately, always been a spectre to Peterborough, as to most other Canadian towns. Flames have savaged it from pioneer days of log houses and wooden shanties. The coming of concrete and structural steel have not laid the ravager. Since the Fire Department was organized on a permanent basis in 1908 and until the beginning of this year, the total fire loss in Peterborough amounted to $6,060,998. Thursday night's fire will add, it is estimated, another half-million to this total.

Canadians Drink Differently

The Alcoholism Research Foundation of Ontario, a government-sponsored institution, this week reported some of its findings. It has discovered statistically that the patterns of drinking and alcoholism in Canada are different from the American ways and are "peculiarly Canadian". We are in no position to assess the validity of the statistics, but the research paraphernalia employed suggests that the analysis is reasonably accurate.

The first evidence given is that Canadians drink less (by alcoholic content) today than their grandfathers did. Roaring stories of those days support the evidence. Canadians aged fifteen or more in the decade 1871-80 drank twice as much spirits (whisky, gin, rum) as they did in the decade 1941-50. In the seventies the average was 1.87 gallons of spirits each year; the last decade's average was only .85 gallons. Worse, the old boys' whisky was strong stuff—about 80 per cent. pure alcohol; the beverage of the last decade was only 34 per cent. absolute alcohol. True, in the later age Canadians on the average drank a little more wine (wine forms and always has formed only a small proportion of the liquid consumption of Canadians), and they drank a great deal more beer—3.7 gallons each in the seventies of the last century, 14.09 gallons in the recent forties. But the alcoholic content of beer is only a fraction of that of spirits.

What about the present? A real value in the Alcoholism Research Foundation's work is that Canadian drinking habits and results are being analysed separately from American. People who play around with liquor figures have generally taken for granted that Canadians drink the same way as Americans. The Foundation has found out differently. Of the total of alcoholic beverages consumed in Canada (reckoned in imperial gallons of absolute alcohol), 64 per cent. is beer, 30 per cent. spirits and 6 per cent. wine. In the U.S. beer accounts for only 52 per cent. of the total, spirits a high 37 per cent., and wine 11 per cent. Thus the Americans are harder drinkers than Canadians. Canadians are more like Britons, 85 per cent. of whose alcoholic diet is in beer.

The case against the Americans is made stronger by the fact that only 59 per cent. of Americans admit to using alcoholic beverages, compared with 70 per cent. of Canadians aged 21 and over. If they have told the truth, fewer Americans proportionately use booze, but these few use more, and it is harder stuff.

Is this the reason that the United States has the highest computed rate of alcoholism in the world (3,952 alcoholics in each hundred thousand of the population aged 15 and over)? Not entirely. The Ontario research people have found no discernible relationship between the amount of alcohol consumed by a nation's people and the rate of alcoholic addiction in that country. For instance, the U.S. per capita consumption of absolute alcohol is very little higher than the Canadian consumption, yet the amount of alcoholism for each 100,000 of the population in the States is more than double the Canadian rate.

This conclusion applies even within one country. In the period 1936 to 1940 each Canadian aged fifteen or over on the average annually drank .71 gallons of absolute alcohol in one form or another and there were 1,508 alcoholics in each hundred thousand of the people aged 20 or over. In 1951 Canadians consumed 1.48 gallons of absolute alcohol but there were only 1,581 alcoholics in each hundred thousand of the adult people. That is, they took in nearly twice as much alcohol in 1951 but almost no more alcoholics were created.

It seems fair to deduce, therefore, that booze alone is not the cause of alcoholism. Incidentally, Canada has the sixth highest rate of alcoholic addiction, being preceded by the U.S. (highest), France, Sweden, Switzerland and Denmark. Sweden has the lowest consumption, though it is third highest in alcoholism. By the way, our West Coast friends might be interested to know from these Ontario statistics that 2,532 adult British Columbians in each hundred thousand are alcoholics. This is by far the highest rate in Canada. Ontario has 1,687 for each hundred thousand, Quebec 1,813, the third and second highest, respectively.

Immigrants And Jobs

Of late we have heard the opinion expressed that immigrants to Canada are taking jobs which might otherwise by held by Canadians who are on the spot. We have not heard this view expressed widely, or with any particular conviction, but we have heard it. It is a familiar point of view, and a mistaken one. It is, furthermore, an opinion which ill-becomes any Canadian, for we were all immigrants at one time—ourselves, or our parents, or our grandparents—and our country has been made by immigrants.

Immigrants take jobs, certainly, but they also make jobs. They need houses, furnishings, food and all the necessities of life, as well as some of its luxuries. The immigrant who has a job is both a producer and a consumer. In the present Canadian economic set-up he is not likely to be able to work for less than anyone else, and his children will quickly make sure that he does not live more economically than other men with similar jobs. If he succeeds in earning his living, he is at least paying his way; if he thrives, he will in time create jobs for other people.

The bogey of the immigrant haunts people who think that a country can be kept healthy by preserving things precisely as they are now. But anyone who thinks about the matter must see that no country can stand still, and that immigration, as well as natural increase is necessary for such a country as Canada.

Better Markets In Britain

Rationing is ending this summer in Britain. So are controls of agricultural products. Britain is in a healthier financial position, internationally, than she has been since the war, with money to spend abroad, even in Canada. These improved conditions suggest that the British market for Canadian exports should be good this year, particularly for agricultural products. Will Canada be able to regain the lost British market? Given a continuance of the improvements noted above, there seems to be only one thing preventing more and bigger sales to Britain; that is the price. Can Canadian goods be produced to sell at a competitive price in the U.K., that is, in competition with products from the Argentine, Australia, New Zealand, Russia? Have Canadians the ability to compete "price-wise", as the phrase goes?

NOTE AND COMMENT

A woman in Bridgeport, Conn., is divorcing her husband 'because he behaves amorously toward her in public'. Embarrassing, perhaps, but more fun for the public than those quarrels about which one should have remembered the front-door key.

SIR JACOB EPSTEIN

Uproars Over Great Sculptor

By JAMES LAVER

(Ed. Note: James Laver is a Keeper of the Victoria and Albert Museum, London. The sculptor Epstein was knighted in January.)

JACOB EPSTEIN is a familiar figure in the art world of London. With his now burly form, his fluff of grizzled, receding hair, his big black hat, his expressive features, and—how shall I put it? — his disregard of the finer points of male fashion, he looks what he is: a sculptor who is also a craftsman — a man who works with his hands. It is a title of which he is legitimately proud.

✧ ✧ ✧

HE has spanned in his own lifetime the fundamental change which has taken place in the public attitude to sculpture. That is why he has had such a stormy life. He had to endure for the greater part of it the abuse of the academic critics and the non-comprehension of those who thought there was only one way to be a sculptur and that was to go on imitating the Greco-Roman imitations of the Greeks. And now in his old age he has to put up with the superiority of "advanced" young men who think that sculpture should be nearly as abstract as possible, and who try to cry down Epstein as naturalistic and old fashioned. But do not let us forget that if the public has been educated in this matter — or even over-educated — it is largely Epstein's doing. For nearly half a century he has been news, for even abuse is news. Hardly any exhibition of his has gone by without a row. He has made the public sculpture-conscious whether they liked it or not.

✧ ✧ ✧

JACOB EPSTEIN was born seventy-two years ago, of Polish-Jewish parents on the lower East Side of New York. All around him in his childhood was the swarming cosmopolitan life of a district which had not yet begun to lose it picturesque quality. It was a world within a world, with gas-lit shops open half the night, street barrows, wandering musicians — some of them playing uncommonly well—vivid cosmopolitan types of all kinds. The dominant note was of course Jewish, and Yiddish was the language not only of the side-walks but of some of the theatres.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT WAS in this world that the little Polish-Jewish boy was growing up. He had a talent for drawing and he drew so well that a firm of publishers commanded him to do a series of portraits of East Side types. They were reproduced in the Century magazine, and with the money they brought the young East Side kid was able to join an art class. But soon he grew dissatisfied with drawing. He began to study sculpture, and realised that sculpture was what he wanted to do. It is characteristic that one of the first things he did when he discovered his talent was to take work in a bronze-casting factory. There was never in Epstein anything of the gentlemanly, dilettante afraid of soiling his hands.

✧ ✧ ✧

HE SOON realised, however, that he could never learn to be a real sculptor in New York, which in those days had only one studio where sculpture was taught. So, having made just enough by his drawings, he went to Paris, and after a few years' study moved to England, and here — except for occasional trips to Europe and America — he has remained ever since. He liked London and he was fascinated by the British Museum, where he could see Egyptian, African and Polynesian carvings, very different from what then passed for sculpture at the Royal Academy.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN 1907, when he was not yet thirty came the first big public commission — and the first big row. His task was to provide a series of statues to decorate the new British Medical Association building in the Strand. He carved them in situ in fourteen months — an astounding feat of mere physical endurance. And then the trouble started. Somebody took it into his head that the statues were indecent, and one day when Epstein was at work on the scaffolding he was surprised to see a policeman climbing the ladder. The policeman produced a notebook, and Epstein, looking over his shoulder, saw that after examining the first statue he had written the single word: 'Rude.' After looking at the second statute he wrote 'Very rude,' closed his book and went off with his report. Not to be outdone Epstein got the Bishop of Stepney to climb the ladder and he saw nothing improper in the statues at all! But that did not prevent a regular campaign in the newspapers against the supposed indecency of Epstein's work.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE SECOND row came five years later—in 1912 — over the carving for the tomb of Oscar Wilde in the Cemetery of Pere Lachaise in Paris. Epstein carved in London the colossal figure of a sphinx weighing twenty tons. It was no small task to transplant it overseas and it was hardly in position before the Prefecture of Paris demanded its removal on the ground that it was indecent. Yet people continue to visit the cemetery, where the Wilde monument is now one of the sights, without obvious damage to their morals.

✧ ✧ ✧

WHILE in Paris, Epstein made contact with such leading artists as Picasso, Modigliani and Brancusi, and it was partly under their influence that he began to experiment with abstract forms; but Epstein was never an 'abstract' sculptor — he was always too deeply interested in life and in people. The rows I have been talking about were nothing to the uproar which broke out when his statue of Christ was exhibited in 1920. It produced a quite outstanding outburst of vituperation.

✧ ✧ ✧

ALL THIS helped to swell the Epstein legend. Epstein became a kind of bogeyman, and when he appeared at the Cafe Royal in his big black hat surrounded by his friends and accompanied by some of his models he was regarded by the unsophisticated as a kind of walking defiance of convention. The philistine mind is apt to find something a little lurid in the fact that an artist should have models at all. And certainly Epstein's models were very striking to look at.

✧ ✧ ✧

THERE WAS the Indian woman Sunita, whom he was later to depict with her little son as the 'Madonna and Child,' one of the most beautiful and tender of his works. People found cause of offence in this too, although she was surely nearer in physical type to the real mother of Jesus of Nazareth than most of the conventional Virgins of Western Europe. Even more picturesque than Sunita was Dolores. The artist himself says that it was she who started the myth of the Epstein model. She was a real child of nature with a streak of exhibitionism, and in a revue in which she appeared succeeded in shocking the Lord Chamberlain. 'I am Dolores,' Epstein's beautiful model,' she told everybody. 'She was certainly a very good model,' says Epstein. 'She always turned up.'

✧ ✧ ✧

MEANWHILE the rows continued. There was another major uproar over 'Rima,' the panel commissioned for the W. H. Hudson Memorial in Hyde Park. Mr. Baldwin (as he then was) performed the unveiling ceremony and was visibly startled when the veil fell and he saw it for the first time. He apparently expected some kind of bird-bath ornament. Hooligans daubed 'Rima' with paint, and one fanatic stood by the statue day after day denouncing it to anybody who would listen.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE ROW over the carving called 'Genesis' passed all common sense. People complained that the figure was primitive and lacked refinement. So did primitive man! They complained that the face was Asiatic — as if Asia were not the cradle of mankind. That was just what the sculptor was trying to express. Most astonishing of all, they complained that the figure was pregnant. If 'Genesis' had been barren we should none of us be here. It is absurd to criticise a symbol because it symbolises something.

✧ ✧ ✧

PERHAPS Epstein's stone figures, like his wonderful, primitive 'Adam' or his 'Lazarus,' now in the anti-chapel of New College, Oxford, will always be the subject of controversy. People feel strongly about them one way or another. They are too vital to be ignored. But everybody can appreciate Epstein's work in modelling. The portrait busts form a staggering series, and one hardly knows which to pick out. Then there is a whole group of female busts, none of them conventionally pretty but all of them alive.

✧ ✧ ✧

IF there are any who still think that Epstein is a kind of bogey-man, out to shock the public, they should study his children. Some of them have the charm of Renaissance cherubs; they are all freshly seen and modelled with infinite love and understanding. Epstein adores children, and yet he never sentimentalises or prettifies.

✧ ✧ ✧

EPSTEIN is that rare thing, a happy man, and his happiness consists in going on doing what he knows he can do well. Sculpture is his life, and when he is at work with stone or clay only one thing matters: to make the figures or busts as completely satisfying to himself as possible. His work will survive as one of the major achievements in art during the first half of the twentieth century.

Following The Sun

By ALASTAIR BUCHAN

AMERICANS may be more stay-at-home as far as the cinemas are concerned, but they have become, since the war, almost a nation of migrants as far as winter travel is concerned. They have always been a great nation of summer travellers; even at its present height, American tourist travel in Europe in recent summers has not yet regained the level of the years before the Great Depression of the 1930s. The difference is that the present level of American prosperity, and the existence of greater facilities, has made the American a winter as well as a summer traveller.

This winter it is expected that one hundred thoustond Americans will go to the Caribbean alone, out of a total of about a million who will be sunning themselves in any quarter of the globe from Tasmania to Morocco or Miami. It is expected that this winter about three thousand million dollars will be earned by hotels, steamship companies and airlines.

Nor are winter vacations any longer a diversion of the rich. More and more Americans of modest means feel it unnecessary to stand the slush and bleakness of the northern cities in January and February, and take two or three weeks of holiday in the winter. One can take a special air coach round trip to Mexico City from New York for $100 and less than $3 a night, or a $375 round trip from San Francisco to Honolulu.

More than half the tourists going abroad will go by sea. There is, for instance, the ninety-nine day cruise of the Cunard liner "Caronia" on which the cheapest fare is a single cabin for $2,700 going up to a double suite for $30,000. And there are many other cruises offered by steamship companies of all nations, including one in the beautiful new Swedish vessel, "Kungsholm."

Even bus companies offer special round-trip facilities; and since Christmas the big stores in New York and elsewhere have had their windows full of bathing dresses and sun-suits which make the passer-by who knows that he is not going to have a winter holiday feel green with envy.

Northern Ireland Swimmers

A special series of coaching courses for Northern Ireland swimmers who hope to represent Ulster at the forthcoming British Empire and Commonwealth Games in Vancouver has been arranged by the Northern Ireland Branch of the Irish Amateur Swimming Association. Competition is keen among the leading swimmers who are now being coached by Mr. E. McCartney, the well-known Irish International swimmer.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

The Lord God is a sun and shield: the Lord will give grace and glory: no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly. (Ps. 84:11.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Is not God in the height of heaven? and behold the height of the stars, how high they are! . . . Acquaint thyself with him, and be at peace: thereby good shall come unto thee. (Job. 22:12, 21.)

✧ ✧ ✧

Then Job answered and said . . . Oh that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat! . . . Behold, I go forward, but he is not there; and backward, but I cannot perceive him . . . my foot hath held his steps, his way have I kept, and not declined. Neither have I gone back from the commandment of his lips: I have esteemed the words of his mouth more than my necessary food. But he is in one mind, and who can turn him? and what his soul desireth, even that he doeth. (Job. 23: 1, 3, 8, 11-13.)

St. James's Pond

(New York Herald Tribune)

British weather has such a reputation for general unpleasantness that one pictures London in the winter time as a thoroughly frigid locality. So it is a bit surprising to read that the pond in St. James's Park which as all tourists know, is just opposite Buckingham Palace, froze over last week for the first time in seven years. However biting and raw a London Winter may become, it apparently seldom gets cold enough to freeze the ponds and lakes. And when this occurs, Londoners know that an opportunity has arrived for some rather special diversion.

So for the first time since 1947 the good Britons are treading, a bit gingerly, upon the ice in St. James's Lake. Some have even donned skates and are whizzing about with an abandon as complete as an Englishman ever manages to achieve. Others, like Mr. Pickwick, are merely sliding in a stately fashion. And still others, even more conservative, are treading carefully and deliberately on the ice, as if to affirm an Englishman's inalienable right to walk upon a lake when it is frozen over.

One imagines that the scene at St. James's Lake these days would make a fine Christmas Card, or at least a pretty snapshot for a family album. And from the windows of Buckingham Palace it must surely seem a perfect miniature of a bright, contented realm.

In 1899 Town Trust Ruled The Ratepayers' Roost; It Held Peterborough Purse

(This is the fifth in a series of articles by Mr. Theobald on the Peterborough City Trust.)

By HARRY THEOBALD

The previous instalment of these glimpses of Peterborough in its receding past, as reflected in the minutes of the Town Trust Commissioners, ended on some details of a drainage project for the west side of the town.

It was known as the Park St. drain, extending from Weller and Walton Streets to the neighborhood of the Canadian General Electric Co., north of Townsend St. That date was 1893. In the following year Simon R. Armstrong succeeded John R. Cobb as town clerk.

Council's bylaw, No. 715, authorized the spending of $10,000 on a bridge at Smith St., and for other permanent works on George, Charlotte, Water streets.

Somehow a proof sheet of a newspaper advertisement found its way into the old minute book, announcing the taking of a vote of the town ratepayers, June 7, 1894, on the proposed union of Peterborough and Ashburnham. The village was not for wooing.

More necessary spending is indicated in $5,000 required by the Board of Education for permanent improvements to Central School building and $3,000 for bridges over the creek on Reid and Donegal Streets.

TOWN WARDS

In the sixties there were three and then four polling places, one in each ward (on the west side of the river), but by 1894 the population required seven.

They were: No. 1—M. H. Halpin's store at George and Perry Streets, Angus Wililams, deputy returning officer; No. 2—Lewis Spry's tinsmith shop, on the east side of Stewart St., north of Dalhousie, Joseph Lundy, DRO; No. 3 — town council chamber, Charles Cameron; No. 4 Greene Brothers music store (Mendel and Carlos) Mendel Greene DRO, Charlotte St. south side at the creek; No. 5; J. W. Metheral's shop, Aylmer St., east side, north of Brock, Joseph Metheral DRO; No. 6—William McCall's shop, McDonnel St., John Irwin DRO; No. 7—J. T. Braund's store, George and Smith Streets, George W. Powell, DRO.

The Trust Commission's requisition on the town council in 1894 was $10,902, of which $3,446 was for school debentures, and $7,456 for general purposes of the municipality. The first demand in 1862 was for $5,706.

The ratepayers dutifully voted $21,000 for a main trunk sewer on George St. They went to the polls Aug. 15, 1894.

Presumably this sewer was built by way of George and Lock Streets to the river. James Kendry was mayor. He was the general manager of the Auburn Woollen Mills, situated on the site of the Whitaker wool warehouse of today.

BANK COLLAPSED

To Charles McGill, "late manager of the Ontario Bank in Peterborough", the Trust sent a congratulatory address "upon his appointment to the position as general manager of the bank". He was later held accountable for its collapse.

Alfred McDonald was given a deed of the lots on the north side of Rink St. which he had bought from the Commission, and filled with sawdust from his lumber mill out on the present park point at Little Lake.

In 1895 the Commission bought $6,500 of the town's debentures "with uninvested sinking fund money now on hand." The fund had accumulated again to $13,295 in April 1897.

The chairman of the Trust was instructed to get estimates of the cost of painting the exterior of the market building and a pipe railing to be placed in the centre of the stairs leading up to the market hall, and iron gates with locks at the foot of each of the staircases leading to the hall, "so that it may be closed at night."

OIL FOR PETERBOROUGH LAMPS

G. T. R. applied for a lease of part of the town land west of the Royal Oil house on Perry St. for cattle pens. The oil distributed from that building between the Belleville and Port Hope branches of the railway was "mostly kerosene, just plain coal oil for the lamps of Peterborough. The Trust replied that the property was being held for manufacturing purposes.

CPR was given a 5-year lease of land for cattle pens on the south side of Rink St., part of the site of Raybestos plant. Community refinements were gradually extending as indicated by a bill from the Peterborough Water Company for water used in flushing the "recently erected closet in the Arcade."

In February, 1898, the Trust notified the Water Company that they would pay the water rate for one closet in the market building; and a letter went to the Peterborough Light and Power Co. that the Trust would pay for one lamp in the Arcade by the year, it being understood that the Trust was allowed the usual discount for that lamp. For the first year the bill was $18, less 20%, net $14.40.

Use of the market hall was granted Dec. 9, 1898, to the Children's Aid Society to hold a meeting; also to groups planning separate poultry and dog shows, "the hall to be properly cleaned after using".

Aaron Cox was interested in the Stanley Piano Co. applying for lots on the north side of Perry St., east of Park, for a factory site. That was in 1899. Some years later the company was operating in the building at the northeast corner of George and Dalhousie Streets. Council was willing to sell the Perry St. lots for $1,500.

H. P. Kennedy was granted lease of land south of Rink and between the C.P.R. and G.T.R. for a stockyard at $100 a year.

City council immediately told the Trust to cancel the lease to Kennedy at once, "and if the Commissioners do not comply, they be asked to meet the council."

COUNCIL DEFIED

Council pressed its claim by applying to the Commission for "a lease of the vacant lands owned by the town."

The minutes record a resolution of Commission: "That the Commission being statutory trustees of the land for an express purpose, are of the opinion that they cannot act as requested by the council."

That exchange was in May. At the end of June, 1899, Mr. Kennedy applied to the council for a sewer connection to his cattle yards. His application was rejected and a letter from town clerk Armstrong conveyed a demand of the council that the Kennedy lease be terminated at once and the cattle yards removed.

Neighboring ratepayers complained to the Trust that Kennedy's "bawling cattle disturbed their sleep," and demanded that his lease be cancelled as soon as possible.

The Commission decided in Sept. that they could not satisfy themselves that any nuisance was caused by the stockyards, and that the deputation be so informed.

RESIGNATIONS

Edgecombe Pearse resigned as secretary-treasurer of the Commission. Applicants for the position were: Felix Townscombe, Arthur Stevenson, John Carnegie and J. W. Bennett.

James Stevenson resigned from the chairmanship. Commissioners R. S. Davidson and Richard Hall moved that Arthur Stevenson be appointed secretary-treasurer at $200 a year. W. H. Moore was elected to the chairmanship.

The Commission sent a note to the council directing that annual payments for sinking fund and interest be deposited "into the Ontario Bank to the credit of the Trust."

In Oct., 1899, the GTR proposed to pay overdue instalments of the principal of the company's mortgage to the town, for the eight-year period, 1893 to 1900 at $1,200 a year. They also enquired whether the Trust would be willing to receive the whole of the principal outstanding, and on what terms.

The Trust replied that they would accept the instalments overdue, "and with interest on such instalments up to date of payment, but the Commissioners do not desire to be paid in full."

MEMBERS 1900

The members of the Trust in 1900 were: W. H. Moore, chairman, Richard Hall, R. S. Davidson, James Stevenson and John Carnegie.

Council in Feb. asked for a loan of $5,000 from funds held by the Trust. The commission agreed providing the council passed a bylaw to pay 3½%, and to issue debentures to pay off the loan.

The minutes had shown the annual details of its requisition on the council for principal and interest on debentures. That practice ended in 1900.

William Cluxton died Mar. 29, 1901. He is mentioned as the sole surviving trustee of the GTR mortgage to the town.

Town council in May 1901 asked the Commission to fix a price at which it would sell to the town lots 10 and 11 on the north side of Perry St., intended for the Sanley Piano Co. The Trust quoted $1,000, and wrote H. P. Kennedy "to quit the premises, according to the terms of his lease."

June 14, 1901—George M. Roger, chairman of the finance committee of the council (in later years judge at Cobourg for the district of Durham and Northumberland), attended a meeting of the Trust and asked them what amount of the town debentures the Commission were prepared to buy.

NO GRANTS

In those days the Commission wasn't passing out substantial grants to the community through the council. They agreed to lend $8,000 for 30 years at 3½%.

Robert S. Davidson's death was recorded Aug. 2, 1901. He had been a Trust Commissioner 15 years, and lived at 202 Dalhousie St. The house was unoccupied in some recent years, but was finally sold and converted into apartments. Mr. Davidson was in the retail hardware business. His daughter Helen died a year or so ago.

Town council appointed Robert Innes to take the place of Mr. Davidson. He lived at the southeast corner of Rubidge and Simcoe Streets, in the house bought by Comstocks and altered into a funeral home. He was a partner of Richard Hall in the big drygoods store of Hall & Innes on Simcoe St. between the Bank of Montreal and Hamilton's. Incidentally, the partners became further associated as Commissioners of the City Trust.

In April 1903 the trustees voted themselves a "commission on ¾ of one per cent of the money received by them during the year."

EXPANDED WORK

Everything was increasing—expenditure for the improvement of the town; municipal borrowing and debt; and Mr. Moore told the Commission, as chairman, that its work had expanded to the extent of taking up a considerable part of his time.

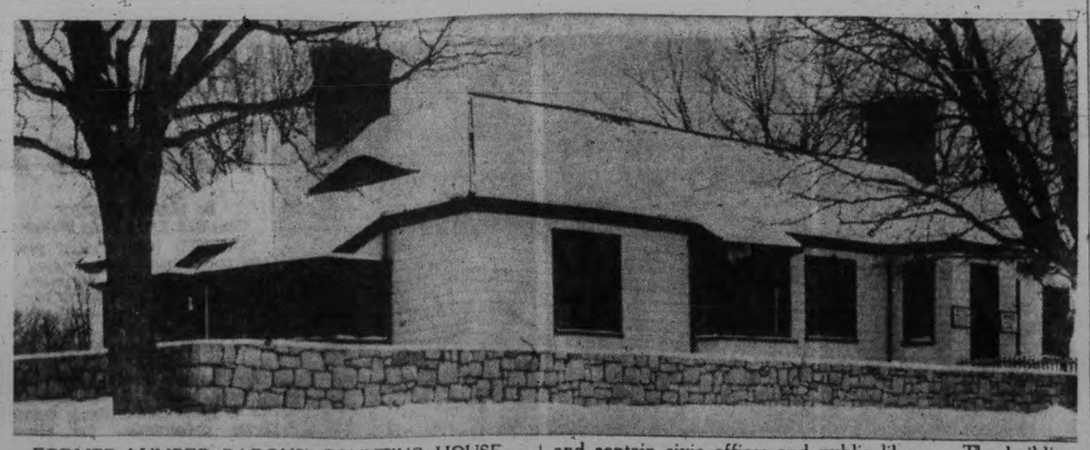
It was decided to pay the chairman $100 a year, out of the commission, and divide the rest evenly among the four other members. The Trust was landlord of the municipal properties.

In 1902 their total receipts were $38,565; the commission was $289; and the apportioning was: $100 to Mr. Moore and $47.25 to R. Hall, J. Stevenson, R. Innes and John Carnegie.

The Commission as a collective agency had served the town 40 years without fee.

NO SUMMER VACATION FOR THE DORMITORY

The double-purpose Norwegian Students Village at Sogn, near Oslo, welcomed tourists from all parts of the world, during the summer season, before reverting to its primary function of providing homes for students. Under the direction of the Norwegain Students' Federation, the number of rooms at Sogn is to be increased next year from 350 to 600. Summertime profits from the tourist trade in 1952 totalled nearly $6,000—and have permitted reduction of rentals to students to about $11 per month, with services included. Profits for 1953, not yet calculated, are expected to be substantially larger. Apart from lodging houses, the Federation runs seven cafeterias, five inns, two libraries and a shoe repair shop. Their enterprises employ 140 persons—most of them students. (UNESCO.)



FORMER LUMBER BARONS' COUNTING HOUSE—Business offices of the Boyd Lumber Company of Bobcaygeon have been restored to their original state by the Boyd Estate, and contain civic offices and public library. The building is to be officially transferred to the village trust in the near future.

Boyd Lumber Office Now Village Centre

A STUFFED BUFFALO HEAD in the village of Bobcaygeon's business office dominates the handsome old-fashioned bookkeepers' desks. The head is from the original sire of the famous but abortive Boyd experiment to cross-breed buffalo and domestic cattle.

BOBCAYGEON (Staff)—There are few villages of 1,500 population in Ontario that so plainly bear the mark of their most illustrious and prosperous family as Bobcaygeon. That family name is "Boyd".

In the heart of this small community where the first lock gates on the Trent Canal System have controlled the water levels between Sturgeon and Pigeon Lakes since 1837, stands a rambling Old Country-style brick house behind neat limestone walls. This is the home of the original Mossom Boyd, born in India of Scots who had migrated to Northern Ireland, and who came to the wilderness of Canada West in 1834 to found the family fortunes. He purchased the core of the big house and grounds from an aspiring blue-blood settler, Thomas Need, for £100.

Where Williams St., deadends at the canal and forms the western boundary of the Boyd home property stands a low shingle-covered building, also surrounded on four sides by a stone wall of varying heights; this was the office of the Boyd Lumber Company and its subsidiary enterprises.

Two blocks west of the office, Christ Church (Anglican) displays many rich appointments, gifts of the Boyd family. A mile and one-half south of the village sprawls a neat spacious farm, yet another Boyd enterprise, where show-ring Herefords are raised.

GIFT OF A LIBRARY

Miss Sheila Boyd is the only member of her family still living in the village, alone in the large house. As one of the executors of the Boyd Estate, she has seen fit to commemorate the family name in Bobcaygeon in a very signal manner. The old office has been made available to the village for municipal offices and public library. This fitting gift is to be officially transferred to the village in the near future, she says.

The squat cottage-like building had been unoccupied for many years. As the plan took form to put it to use again there was much work to do about the building and a deal of money to be spent, by the estate, to conform the building to its intended use. To begin with, in 1950, several tons of old journals, ledgers, day-books and some 700 maps and charts were trucked to the Dominion Archives Building in Ottawa where they are still being catalogued and set up in the "Boyd Section".

Renovating meant refurbishing the once-handsome interior without changing it to any great extent. A year ago last fall it was ready for occupancy. The municipal offices of the village and Veralum Township and the public library were moved from scattered, dingy quarters to the Boyd office. Today it is a charming functional place that retains the same old richness of the lumber baron's counting house.

HOLDS VILLAGE OFFICES

The main (village) office is bisected by a 20-foot maple counter for its entire length; a smaller counterpart parallels the east wall. Here, village clerk T. H. Henderson and secretary-treasurer of the Bobcaygeon Hydro Commission Marjorie Coulter perform their duties. Above the main entrance doorway the stuffed head of "Napoleon Bonaparte", the first noble buffalo bull imported from the West for the Boyd's famous cattalo-breeding experiments, eyes them fiercely. An oil furnace under this main office heats the whole building adequately.

In the front section of the building's west wing the Township of Veralum's clerk, T. H. Martin, holds open office on Thursday, Fridays and Saturdays. This was grandfather Mossom Boyd's private office, pine-panelled with a handsome fireplace. Behind this office a renovated storeroom with rich pine flooring is in the process of becoming the village council chamber.

The east wing of the building that fronts on William St., houses the Public Library; it is made up of three rooms. Willy Boyd's long, narrow office is now the public reading room. The main (children's) room has a fine fireplace as its focal point with a large chart of Newfoundland over it and a rosy-copper kettle of ancient Irish vintage on the mantel. This room was originally the private school room of the Boyd children where strong hooks embedded in the high plaster ceiling suggests that the private tutor trained the boys in gymnastics after school hours. A bright adjoining room on the south side houses book stacks; it was originally the headquarters office of the Trent Navigation Company, the steamship subsidiary of Boyd Lumber.

Miss Amy Cosh, a former high school teacher and village librarian for the past 15 years, is in charge of the 8,000-odd volumes. Besides being an enthusiastic and well-informed district historian she is especially interested in the progress of the Victoria County Library Co-operative, the only county venture of its kind in Eastern Ontario. In ten county village libraries, 90 schools and two deposit stations, run by the Women's Institute in Coboconk and Burnt River, reading matter is systematically shuffled about for a total turnover of 15,000 books and magazines annually.

LANDSCAPING

The ample walled grounds surrounding the office are being freshly landscaped, a project of the Bobcaygeon Horticultural Society, and a particular hobby dear to the heart of Miss Boyd.

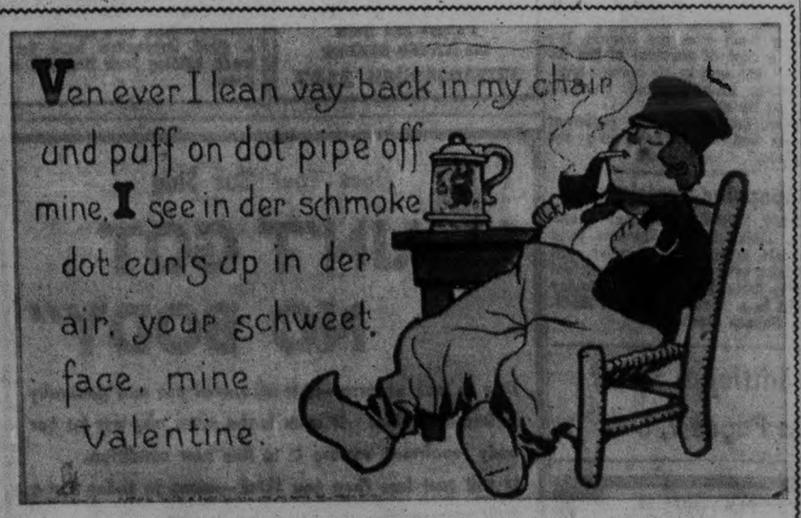
The people of Bobcaygeon are mighty proud of their municipal centre and so are the last-remaining members of the Boyd family: Miss Sheila of Bobcaygeon and brothers, Cush Boyd of Cowichan Lake, B.C., and Lawrence of Vancouver.

The building holds a certain charm for visitors, too. A newly-arrived Englishwoman remarked a few days ago that the interior reminded her of a Dickensian counting house. A fitting observation for the Boyds were nabobs in the days when white pine was king.

MAKE LAKE SHRINK

Dutch engineers, famous for their skill in capturing land from the sea, are increasingly called upon by other countries to help in great land-reclamation projects. Most recently, the authorities of western Bengal have asked technicians in the Netherlands to prepare plans for a huge drainage job in the Salt Lake area near Calcutta. This is expected to gain 5,000 acres for the city and 25,000 acres for agriculture. (UNESCO.)

A PLEASANT PLACE TO CHAT is in the main reading room of the public library for two women visitors with librarian Miss Amy Cosh, centre. This was originally a private schoolroom for two generations of Boyd children.



They Sent Valentine Cards in 1907, Too

Fancy, funny, or affectionate; flossy, glossy, or sassy; tricky, tender or tasty: the kinds and varieties of Valentine cards of other generations were as numerous as today's cards, and some of them were a good deal more imaginative or amusing. By Sunday, the good Saint Valentine's reputed birthday, cards will have been winging their way across the land or shyly hopping across the street, bringing their anonymous tributes of love and the heart's flutter. Above is reproduced a Valentine card, mailed February 13th, 1907, and preserved in the postcard album of Miss Fanny Dixon.

The deer population is wintering well in the Kawarthas, game wardens have found. A normal depth of snow in the bush enables the animals to move about for browse from one area to another. Their numbers show a slight increase over last year and a considerable increase over the 1952 herds which were badly depleted during that favourable hunting fall.

The driving safety measure of salting highways to remove snow is proving a suicidal attraction for deer; they come out of the woods to lick the tasty pavement and endanger their lives by making targets of themselves for travelling vehicles. Observers say that on certain stretches of the Apsley Highway (28) a dozen or more deer can be seen between midnight and dawn licking the salt. Motorists are cautioned to keep their eyes peeled at these hours, for, a deer is just as apt to jump in front of a moving car as away from it; results: car damage, deer deaths.

♣ ♣ ♣ ♣

A herd of 17 elk were seen crossing the Apsley road recently by several persons. Though some were shot last fall there is evidence of sufficient numbers wintering in the woods to provide breeding stock for next spring.

♣ ♣ ♣ ♣

By destroying nearly all of a large marauding wolf pack on the Crown Game Preserve last winter, conservation officer Bob Trotter hopes he has put a stop to these deer killers for this winter season. There have been no evidences of deer carcases in the bush so far which means that wolves are scarce, as wolf hunters will testify.

Report of the Outlanders

We used to look forward two or three times each winter to meeting some of the old Stony Lake guides on the streets and get some first-hand news of the wide open spaces. Since none have "come down to the Front" so far we presume they have decided to hole up 'till spring and we are the poorer for it.

Bernice and "Kieler" Harold Knapman of the Mount Julian area blew in the other day, their first visit to the Big Town since Christmas. Kieler was all dressed up like a stock broker. We are tempted to refer to the Knapmans as the "Crusoes or the Kawarthas", but that is hardly fitting since their home cottage is as up-to-date as it can be and they are not marooned on their island, except when the ice makes or breaks. They think we city slickers are slightly nuts to be caught in the conventional webb of life in crowded places.

Puttering around at remodelling their cottage, doing odd jobs on sailboat repairs, sail-skating, hiking and entertaining many week-end visitors makes life very pleasant for them.

"I will have to go to work in the spring, though," said Kieler.

In a new boathouse he finished in the fall and in his workshop 32 boats are stored, most of them in the sail class that will need painting and refitting. There are also innumerable cottage-repair jobs in his order book.

Their many friends will be glad to know that the Knapmans are wintering well.

Big Shot

Marksman Jack Boardman, Lakefield Highway, of the senior rifle club, Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association, won the Dominion Marksman Expert Shield recently for target shooting 5,907 points out of a possible 6,000. This is the first time this trophy has been taken in Peterborough and club chairman Don Blondeau is just about as steamed up about it as Jack; the enthusiasm for trying to better skills among his 35 boy-group had soared beyond the low roof of the Armouries shooting butts.

Neighbourhood Notes

OUR HOME THERMOMETER has been broken for some time. It is a blessing in disguise. We can't tell how cold it gets on frosty mornings so it doesn't involve us in arguments in a neighbourhood where each instrument seems to vary. We now depend on a ready-made thermometer on the river about 200 feet from our dock. On the down-current (south) end of Scout Island a long spur of ice grows or diminishes with the prevailing temperature. We measure it mentally from the living room windows in degrees of more-or-less ice in place. A bit complicated and unwieldly but close enough for, when it is really cold, what difference do a few yards matter one way or the other?

WE NEVER KNOW what we are going to run into next in our neighbourhood or what may run into us. Braking for a sharp, out-curve, icy bend the other evening, we nearly had the bonnet of our Gaseater Four bashed in when a galloping pony, small red cutter and smaller Jehu driver tried to make the bend on one runner. The little nag took to the drifts straight ahead, instead, ploughed through several stands of red willow in snow up to its belly and gained the road behind us in a wide loop. Our scout informed us later that the runaways arrived home safely and that such jet journeys were commonplace. We sure gotta be careful up our way.

Rationing In U.K. Ending

Britain's long, lean days are coming to an end. People will be able to buy what they want, provided they have the money, for nearly all forms of rationing and limitations are being ended.

Rationing of butter, cheese, margarine and cooking fats will end on May 8. The date for the ending of meat rationing, it is hoped, will be announced shortly.

Butter was first rationed in January, 1940. Margarine and cooking fats, including lard followed in July of the same year and cheese rationing began in May, 1941. Minister of Food Major Gwilym Lloyd George said recently that it was hoped to abolish rationing altogether this year.

Part of the reason rationing can be abolished is that Britain's exports (through which she earns money to buy foods) have increased.

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

Manager Jack McCormick of the Kingston Community Centre and Lorne Cook have supplied us with some info on the fine Centre there which should interest folks here anxiously awaiting a green light on our own auditorium in Morrow Park. The Kingston Centre was built at a firm price of $680,000 several years ago, the money being received in large Federal and Provincial grants, a grant from the city and by public subscription. We didn't learn the breakdown on these grants. The site was free in their Agricultural Grounds. It has a good heating system to enable the aud. to house shows, dances, roller skating, wrestling and hockey. Spacious alleyways are used for booth space at fairs, and such like.

* * * * * *

The building seats 3,340 people with a lot more room for standees. It is so arranged that another row of seats could be put in, along with the nine rows now. It has a portable wooden floor costing $7,000, which can be laid within three hours. A thousand extra chairs were purchased and a P.A. system. Ice surface is 200 by 90 feet. four dressing rooms were placed first, with two more added since. There are two permanent canteens and two auxiliary ones. It has refrigeration rooms for the exhibiting of cheese, butter, etc. Two refrigeration machines, a 55-ton one and one going 25 tons. It has a plastic floor, also, over the concrete floor, we're told.

Take Long-Range View

If and when the project in Peterborough is started, we trust the powers that be take a longe-range view of the accommodation required. If a city of similar size, like Kingston, packs in 3,700 fans for league hockey matches — not playoffs, mind you — then it seems reasonable that an auditorium here should be built to seat more than that. After all, we've drawn 4,000 at lacrosse matches, and the city continues to grow. Kingston Goodyears, a senior "B" team, will pack in more than 4,000 for their playoffs, so what would they do with senior or junior "A" in a few years from now? Same is true here. Political rallies, ice follies, exhibition shows and so forth require plenty of room, as well as does hockey. If we do it at all, let's do it right.

Here's a pro mat item ere we forget. The Mills brothers are returning to action at the Brock Arena next week. They go in the main bout, a tag team match, against rugged Fred Atkins and huge Hombre Montana on Wednesday, and we trust Jim Laidlaw nails down the chairs. Before 8,000 staid Ottawa fans last week, the mean Mills duo made their Capital City debut, and the aud. was nearly wrecked before they left. Chairs smashed, folks hurt, arrested or hospitalized, and police on the jump to keep Al and Tiny from being torn asunder by frenzied fans. No doubt the worst rabble-rousers to hit the grapple trail in years, those Mills. Pat Flanagan meets Johnny Barend in the semi-final here, and Earl McCready tackles Ray Cernandos in the prelim.

Ports Play Jr. Petes

"We've had a little edge on them in the schedule, and I think we'll take 'em in playoffs." That's Coach Red Creighton's outlook on the OHA junior "B" group finals which opens here Monday eve. It's between the scrappy Oshawa outfit (playing out of Port Perry) and the Junior Petes, who finished atop the loop, with Ports [illegible] Series is best-of-seven, and some hot frays are a sure thing here one club fades out of the picture for this year. The husky Port Perry crew tried to mob the referee the last time they showed on local ice as they're hard losers. Junior Petes are full of fight, too, and will certainly hustle in an effort to grab off that first victory. It rates a real crowd as the juniors serve up streamlined hockey.

* * * * * *

The Petes downed Oshawa Truckmen 6-3 here last e'en to again take over sole possession of the top rung in the senior "B" puck group ladder up this way. Not many games left to play, and the playoff clubs are jockeying for position. Best spot is the top rung, as that team plays the fourth-place club, so the Petes are there now and hope to hang onto it for the next two weeks. They only have one tilt next week. As in other games betwixt these two classy clubs, last night's number was a dandy. No rough stuff or nonsense, just fast, clean and smart hockey. The Petes had an edge in the first frame and a very narrow Margin in the third, but the second was quite even and only good goaltending by Jack Donlevy kept those Truckers down to three tallies. They're really good, but so are the Petes when they can take 'em by a 6-3 count. The scoring was well spread around. We liked Eddie Redmond's work on defence a lot.

Lyndhursts Trip Germans 7-3

FUESSEN, Germany (Reuters)—Toronto Lyndhursts, warming up for their role as Canadian representatives at the world hockey championships at Stockholm, defeated the West German E. V. Fuessen team 7-3 Friday night.

It was the Lyndhursts' seventh exhibition victory against one loss since their arrival in Europe.

Markus Egen gave Fuessen an early lead, but Moe Galand tied the score two minutes later and then Lyndhursts took the lead when Normie Gray tallied before the period ended.

Oswald Huber tied the score again in the second frame, but the visitors pulled away with a second goal by Galand and additional markers by Earl Clements, John Petro, Bob Kennedy and George Sayliss. Huber scored again for Fuessen's final goal.

Petes Back In The Top Slot By Taking Oshawa 6 To 3

Turning back the Oshawa Truckmen 6-3 here Friday night, the TPT Petes took over sole possession of first place once again in the keen OHA senior "B" race in Central Ontario. The two teams had been tied for top spot before the game, but now Oshawa drops back into second slot just a step and a half ahead of the on-rushing Orillia Pontiacs and Kingston Goodyears. All four clubs — with Belleville almost out of the running — are jockeying for playoff positions, the first, second and third places being preferred. Petes led 2-0 in the first frame and 4-2 to end the second of a clean, fast fray before some 1,400 fans. Only six penalties were meted out, three to each side.

CLEAN HOCKEY

As in previous meetings of these two teams all through the four-month puck season, good, clean and fast hockey prevailed. There was no rough stuff at any time, and even the rabid home rooters weren't yelling for penalties. The few penalties drawn were minor infractions with no intent to injure, and there was never a hint of a fight in the tussle. Yet play was very fast and generally pretty even, with some nifty passing plays shown, and good checking and goaltending.

The Petes' sniping was well spread around with goals by Ted Collins, Gus Leonard, Keith Montgomery, Denny Peterson, Rod Belisle and Chum Fryia. In assists, Doc Prentice led with two as singles went to Belisle, Leonard, Toddie Greenlaw, Peterson, Bert Hill, Jim Munroe and Fryia. The Oshawa lamp-lighters were Ernie Dickens, George Samolenko and Jed Wilson, while Jerry Scott had two assists, and Hooper, Dickens, Yourth and Peters one each.

GOOD CHECKING

Crowley went off early for boarding but the line of Belisle with McMaster and Redmond on defence checked so closely that Donlevy didn't have a shot to handle in his absence. Oshawa later pressed, Scott being robbed of an almost sure marker. Play was even, fast and clean for some time and then Gus Leonard tallied with a slap shot on Fryia's passout after McMaster pitched the puck into enemy territory. Thaler was away for holding when Petes got their next one, Collins counting from Munroe and Hill, with an Oshawa defenceman caroming a shot off his own goalie before the disc was finally in the twine.

The Samanski line threatened for Oshawa early in the second but a Hill-Collins thrust nearly paid off. Donlevy just hot his toe on a bullet fire by Samolenko in the hot going and then Samolenko scored from Peters and Scott on smart in-close combination with the goalie down. Belisle got that one back right away on a rebound after a corner passout on a play with Prentice and Peterson. Fryia added another from Greenlaw and Leonard after a drop pass and then a pass over to him in close for a quick slap to give Goalie Colvin no chance. The latter gave away nothing all through the game, but found the pesky Petes too often on his doorstep. Wilson narrowed the margin late in the heat on a close-in passing play with Yourth and Dickens with Donlevy sprawling after making one save on them.

COSTLY PENALTY

Greenlaw went over the wall to start the third for hooking and Dickens cashed in on it with Hooper and Scott assisting as they ganged up at close range. Later, Peterson got it back with Prentice and Belisle helping on a smart combination rush right in on goal. Montgomery made it safe when he checked and recovered just outside the blue line, weaved in a bit and then fired a high back-hander that caught a net corner. Redmond went off for holding, with Sinden then drawing a misconduct for arguing. But no further scoring resulted.

Oshawa: goal, Colvin; defence, Sinden and McBeth; centre, Scott, wings, Samolenko and Hooper; alts.: Samanski, Thaler, Etcher, Holden, Yourth, Wilson, Peters and Dickens.

PCVS Squad Triumph 59-52 Over Oshawa Quintet To Resume Old Rivalry

It's started again. The old rivalry between PCVS and Oshawa basketball teams was revived but good Friday night at Oshawa Central. In Central's own wide court, the PCVS Garnet and Grey seniors, coached by Zolton Temesy, rubbed salt in Central's old wounds with a 59-52 victory before a gym-packed crowd of enthusiastic home fans. The same quintets will play back at PCVS on February 26.

In other high school games the intermediate Regents worked out with St. Peter's High senior Saints to the tune of 76-25, PCVS juniors eked out a 52-50 victory over Kenner Rams, Kenner Rams bantams pounded PCVS midgets 50-35 and the Kenner girls recorded their fifth straight win over Lakefield High 35-31.

BEST OPPOSITION YET

Senior opposition from Oshawa helped renew the old feeling with PCVS Friday night. After several lean years the Central quintet has developed a well-balanced team to provide the best opposition for the Garnet and Grey this season. Therefore it was PCVS' best game of the year.

Central with 10 good players emphasized a fast-break which they employed almost perfectly on the large floor. But the Garnet and Grey played a heady game and even when they lost baskets didn't get excited.

TIED AT HALF

The Garnet and Grey spotted Central three baskets early in the first quarter but rallied for a 13-10 first quarter lead. Central tied the game at 30-all at the half but PCVS again took the lead 48-42 at three-quarters. The Garnet and Grey eked out a 11-10 fourth quarter score for the win.

Bob McKinney who has developed into one of PCVS' best paced the quintet with 16 points on one-hand push shots from the key. Terry Roberts who had four fouls in the first half scored 12 points even though he was used sparingly in the second half.

Bob Boorman although he didn't score played the role of the time-killer in the fourth for PCVS. Other PCVS points went to Doug Ash and John Boorman each with 11, Harry Carleton with five and Neil Courneya with four.

Central had two veterans leading their attack. Olynik working from the pivot and rebounding topped the scoring with 19 points while Starr, a short left forward, scored 16 points mostly in driving layups.

Without star forward Doug Galvin, the St. Peter's Saints attempted to hold the more experienced Regents. They moved the ball well but were stiffly checked when in close.

GOOD PASSING PLAY

The Regents on the other hand broke quickly, set up tricky passing plays and shot well to easily out-distance their young opposition.

Bob Smith, Don Ash and Ed Nicholls paced the Regents to a lengthy 19-10 in the first quarter. Murray Grafstein, Dave Langhorne and Dan Griffen took over in the second quarter and the Regents led 37-19 at the half.

Ash and Langhorne, set up by close-knit passing plays enabled the Regents to romp to a 21-point scoring spree in the third quarter while the Saints were held to four points. Then in the fourth it was again all Regents as they outscored the Saints 18-2.

Ash easily led the Regents, scoring 21 points, while Grafstein had 16 and Langhorne 14. The Saints' best was Abbie Ryan with 13.

RALLY FAILS

A last-quarter rally by Lakefield High girls fell short in their game with Kenner girls at Kenner Collegiate gym. The Kenner girls, outscored in the second half, relied upon a wide first half scoring margin for the slim 35-31 win.

Dianne Smith, with nine points, and Sally Reynolds with eight points paced the Kenner girls throughout the first half to a 26-12 score, But in the second half Jean Calvert, Barbara Chittick, and Jeanette Staples rallied Lakefield for 19 points, just five short of a win. Smith again led the Kenner scoring as the girls just scored enough for victory.

For opposition PCVS midgets played Kenner bantams, winners of district play, but the bantams were still too powerful. Led by Hendry and Wood, the Rams went ahead 14-13 in the first, 27-24 at the half, and then pulled ahead 41-27 at three-quarters.

Wood led the scoring for Kenner with 17 points, while Hendry had 14. PCVS' best was Dobbin with 11.

The final game at Kenner between the PCVS juniors and the Rams was the evening's best. It was decided then until the last minute as PCVS eked out a two-point win, 52-50.

Kenner took an early 15-11 first quarter lead and kept ahead 28-22 at the half. But PCVS became accustomed to the small court in the second half. They rallied, whittled the lead at three-quarters and took the victory in the fourth.

Kenner's Jerry Montgomery led the scoring with 18 points, while Ballany had 13, Bell 12, and Eastwood 11 for PCVS.

Collis Cagers Beat Blacks 55-21

Bus Manbeck's Collis quintette easily overpowered Black's 55-21 Friday night in the girls' city league basketball at the YWCA gym. At the same time Lindsay edged out a 26-21 victory over Nurses with a fourth quarter rally.

The Collis girls lost little time in racing to their victory, Pauline Stewart, Joan Dunk, N. Rose, S. Bestard and M. McIlvena all figured in the scoring as Collis took a 17-4 first quarter score. Blacks' strengthened in the second but Collis still led 26-10 at the half.

Stewart and Dunk began to find the range and the basket in the third quarter and once again the Collis girls romped, this time to lead 39-16 at three quarters. Dunk and Bestard helped Collis outscore Blacks 16-5 in the final quarter.

Dunk led the scoring with 22 points, followed by teammates, Bestard with 14 and Stewart with 11. Carol Gibson scored 10 for Blacks.

SLOW OPENING

Lindsay in a low-scoring first quarter took a 4-1 edge but Marg Owens started the Lindsay Neills entry to their victory in the second quarter with seven points. Lindsay promptly took the half score 16-7.

Jeannie Bell rallied the Nurses in the third and nearly wiped out the Lindsay lead. In fact the nurses were only behind one point, 20-19 at three-quarters. But Owen gave Lindsay the victory in the fourth.

Owen led the game scoring with 18 points while Bell had 11 for the Nurses.

Hockey Is Now Much Rougher Than In Ace Bailey's Day

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Twenty years ago more than 14,000 persons in Maple Leaf Gardens witnessed a memorable event: Two National Hockey League stars—one whose career was ended by the other—shook hands in friendship. The date was Feb. 14, 1934.

Ace Bailey, Toronto Maple Leaf forward, walked slowly over the ice to greet Eddie Shore, Boston Bruin defenceman, the player whose action two months earlier nearly cost Ace his life. The centre-ice handclasp wrote finis to one of the most boisterous brawls in NHL history, a police inquiry and riotous fist-swinging scenes in Boston Gardens between players, club officials and fans.

Bailey before signing with old Toronto St. Pats in 1926 played with senior O.H.A. team in Peterborough. That same year the Petes had captured the John Ross Robertson trophy as champions of the Senior O.H.A.

The scene ended an incident which climaxed hockey's blackest year; three minor-league players died of injuries.

Andy Ritchie, a member of Atlantic City Sea Gulls, United States amateur champions, fell on the point of one of his skates and died 10 days later.

A month later, 17-year-old William Riopelle, an Ottawa schoolboy died of injuries received six days previously when he crashed into the boards and the butt-end of his hockey stick jammed into his abdomen.

Harvey Robertson, 25-year-old Leduc, Alta., player, died of a fractured skull received during a game between Leduc and Wetaskiwin.

GAME AT BOSTON

The Bailey incident happened Dec. 12, 1933, during the Leafs' first Boston game of the season. Late in the second period Shore tripped Bailey from behind while racing back from the Toronto zone. Bailey went down hard, was unconscious for 10 minutes and removed to hospital. Toronto defenceman Red Horner charged Shore, planted a haymaker right to the jaw and Shore crashed to the ice, suffering a deep scalp wound. He also was carried off the ice and taken to hospital.

The 12,000 fans went wild and for minutes the arena was in confusion.

Bailey was on the critical list with a fractured skull for 10 days. Two delicate cerebral operations were performed. Canadian and American newspapers ran daily front-page stories on his condition. Police questioned Shore but no charges were laid.

Finally, Ace passed the crisis.

Shore, whose 14-year big-league career was one of triumphs, disappointments and heartaches, was suspended for 16 weeks. Formerly a hard-hitting hot-tempered player, Shore, who was born at Fort Qu'Appelle, Sask., returned a milder man but still a great player. He was still able to play 30, 40 or 50 and sometimes 60 minutes a game and as late as 1939, when he was 37, he played five games in six nights.

But it was curtains for Ace, as a player. He never skated again. It took him 16 months to recover. He then coached the University of Toronto Blues in the senior intercollegiate union from 1936 to 1948 and later piloted junior teams in Welland and Niagara Falls until 1952.

TOO MANY HEADACHES

"Then I retired from the game," he said in an interview. "Hockey got to be such a business. There were too many headaches."

Those 14,000 in the Gardens 20 years ago contributed $20,909 to the Ace Bailey benefit fund and in return were given an all-star game and the assurance that sportsmanship still was high in hockey.

Twenty years later, Shore, now owner of Springfield Indians of the Quebec League, is still sensitive about the incident. Ace, now 31, last saw Shore in Toronto two years ago.

"I don't correspond with him and I don't think Eddie wants to see me," Ace said. "But I hold no grudge."

Now a Toronto salesman and timekeeper at Maple Leaf Gardens Ace said hockey is much rougher today.

"In our day we played a hard-checking game. Nowadays they throw them over the boards. It's just a case of survival of the fittest." Ace said in his opinion high-sticking, boarding, and charging should be eliminated.

"But that's what the customer wants and it's drawing the crowds."

HOLDS NO GRUDGE—Ace Bailey (with overcoat and muffler) shakes hands with Eddie Shore (No. 2) to close one of major-league hockey's memorable incidents. This photo was taken 20 years ago this month in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens at a benefit game for Bailey. Two months earlier in a National Hockey League game at Boston, Shore, Boston Bruins defenceman, tripped Bailey, Toronto Maple Leaf forward. Bailey suffered head injuries which ended his big-time hockey career and the incident sparked on of the most boisterous brawls in NHL history. Others in the picture are not identified.

Maroons Dump Mercurys 4-1 Before 2,600 Fans

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The playoff berths in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series have just about been decided.

Five of the six teams in the seven-club loop are assured of post-season play. The last position is to be decided between Chatham Maroons and Niagara Falls Cataracts and the last-place Cataracts are all but out of the running.

A win and a tie for the Cataracts in their remaining seven would eliminate Niagara Falls. Or three losses for the cellar-dwellers would put them out no matter what happened to Chatham.

WALLOP NIAGARA

Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen, fighting for the league championship all but ended the playoff hopes of the Cataracts Friday night when they walloped Niagara Falls 8-0 on Cataracts' home ice. The victory put the Dutchmen into a first-place tie with Owen Sound Mercurys.

The Maroons helped both themselves and the Dutchmen by defeating the Mercurys 4-1 before 2,600 fans in Chatham.

In the other league game, Hamilton Tigers edged Windsor Bulldogs 3-2 in Hamilton to displace the Bulldogs from third place.

At Niagara Falls, George Scholes counted three goals for the defending Allan Cup champions. Joe Schertzl added a pair, one of them protested, and Jack McKenzie, Art Hurst and Ken Laufman rounded out the total.

Bill Lee tallied twice for the Maroons. Jim Connelly and Jim Campbell got the others. Roy Leckie scored Owen Sound's only goal.

Harvey Jacklin scored the winning goal for Hamilton midway through the third period. Jack Taylor counted Hamilton's first two. Gary Gordon and Bob Hayes were the Windsor scorers.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group Sudbury Wolves pulled to within two points of first place by edging Pembroke Lumber Kings 5-4 in overtime at Sudbury.

The loss left the Lumber Kings in third place, tied with North Bay Trappers.

LEADS WOLVES

Yacker Flynn led the Wolves with two goals. Len Speck scored the winning marker for Sudbury. Bruce Giesebrecht and Lionel Barber led the Lumber Kings.

Chatham is at Kitchener and Niagara Falls at Stratford in the OHA tonight. Owen Sound plays at Windsor in Sunday's only game.

Canadiens Face Crucial Time, Must Discard Histrionics For Hockey

By ED SIMON Canadian Press Staff Writer

There have been times this season when some people have wondered if Montreal Canadiens are more interested in winning the Stanley Cup or the academy award. The Habitants have been close to the top of the National Hockey League most of the season. But some of their histrionics on and off the ice have run the melodramatic gamut from Simon Legree to Little Eva. The red-shirted stalwarts have been involved in most of the memorable NHL brawls this season, as the club's position at the head of the penalty parade testified. They were sent to their dressing room in a body after one donnybrook in Toronto and helped Chicago Black Hawks pile up 82 minutes of penance only last Thursday.

ON TRIPLE CAREER

Trigger - shooting Bernie Geoffrion had the book thrown at him for breaking a man's jaw with a swing of his stick and Maurice Richard has embarked on a triple career as top goal-scorer, a leader in the penalty parade and a writer of polemics in the sports column of a Montreal newspaper.

The club's management, while it hastened to induce the Rocket to end his journalistic career after a bitter Richard attack on NHL President Clarence Campbell has also shown signs of getting into the act. Canadian officials have been quoted as uttering piteous cries that the team is consistently and grievously discriminated against.

When the spirit moves them, the Montrealers also play an effective brand of hockey. Their 155 goals scored to date are tops in the league. Gerry McNeil's record of 114 goals scored against him is surpassed only by Toronto's Harry Lumley and Detroit's Terry Sawchuk.

This is an excellent week-end for the Canadiens to be in a hockey-playing mood. Locked in a second-place tie with the Maple Leafs, and with Jacques Plante up from Buffalo to replace the injured McNeil in the nets, they are in Toronto tonight to play off the tie. Then they proceed to Boston to tackle the fourth-place Bruins.

Boston, with a two-point margin over New York Rangers for the last play-off spot, need home victories over the Canadiens and over the Rangers the night before to solidify their position in preparation for a four-game road trip.

In other Sunday night play the Rangers entertain the Leafs and Detroit Red Wings, who lead the league by eight points, visit the last-place Black Hawks.

Bill Clarke won the only bout for Toronto with a technical knockout over Paul Ramsay of McGill University, after 45 seconds of the third round in the 140-pound division.

John Stephens of Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph won by a technical knockout over Frank Bloom of McGill at 1:30 of the second round in the 135-pound class. John McGuffin added the second Guelph victory with a decision over Walter Schmida of Toronto in the 175-pound section.

Martin Puhvel of McGill outpointed John Iglar of Toronto in the heavyweight class and Oswald Downes won the second victory for McGill with a technical knockout over Tom Hurdman of Queen's University, Kingston, at 1:35 of the first round in the 175-pound division.

Queen's double victories went to Walter Roberts who decisioned Larry Corcoran of Toronto in the 155-pound class and John Mothersill who outpointed Lee Barnadis of Toronto in the 165-pound division.

Two bouts in which contestants from the Ontario Agricultural College were scheduled to take part were cancelled.

Chuck Logan was forced out because he was too heavy for the 140-pound class. Bill Barnes, who had planned to compete in an event in the 165-pound class, dropped out due to illness.

Orono Whips Lindsay 8-7 Shorthanded

LINDSAY (ENS) — The Orono Orfuns, playing with only ten men and using sub goaltender did it the hard way Friday night, handing the Lindsay Muskies an 8-7 defeat to frustrate the Lindsay club's drive for first place in the "A" division of the lakeshore league standing.

The win also sewed up first place in the overall standing for the B class Orfuns. Ken West's goal in the last minute of the game gave the Orfuns the win, after Robinson's third goal of the game tied the score at 7-7 two minutes earlier.

The Orfuns jumped into a 2-1 lead at the end of the first period and increased it 5-3 at the second interval, but saw it fade during the third, as the Muskies gained strength. Robinson, with three goals, led the winners in a great effort, other counters went to Dean West, Shetler, Junior West, Rumbaugh and Ken West.

The Muskies were led by veteran Stu Hicks and rookie Tommy Hutton, up from the Lindsay juniors, who scored two goals each, Green, Crawford and Corley scored their other goals.

A minute's silence was observed late Harry Abercrombie, trainer before the game in memory of the for some of Lindsay's greatest teams of the past including the Ontario intermediate champion midgets in 1909.

Greenshirts Skate Off Ice In Middle of OHA Game

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, which has had a number of hot problems dumped in its lap during the last couple of years, is faced with another one today. At least it's different.

The CAHA must deal with a team that skated off the ice in the middle of a game.

That's what Kitchener - Waterloo Greenshirts of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series did during their interlocking game against Jonquiere Marquis of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association Junior league in Jonquiere Friday night.

The Greenshirts, who were leading 4-2 at the time, left when referee Mullins disallowed a Kitchener goal. The goal was scored just as Mullins blew his whistle.

AWARDED GAME

When the Kitchener team withdrew from the ice, Mullins awarded the game to Jonquiere.

In all-Ontario action Friday night St. Catharines TeePees increased their first-place lead to six points by taking a 6-1 home-ice victory over the second-place Toronto Marlboros, Guelph Biltmores beat Toronto St. Michael's College Majors 4-3 in Guelph and Barrie Flyers took a 3-2 decision from Hamilton Cubs in Barrie.

Kitchener captain Grieg Hicks scored twice for the Greenshirts. Bud Horne and Gary Collins got the others. Roger Landry and Rodrique Pelchat were the snipers for the Marquis.

In St. Catharines, the TeePees allowed Marlboros the opening goal of the game, then came back with six in a row.

LEADS WINNERS

Hank Ciesla led the winners with two goals. Barry Cullen, Brian Cullen, Don McLean and Stan Maxwell scored the others. Centre Bill Harris tallied for Toronto.

In Barrie the Flyers scored three goals before the Cubs started their comeback. But it fell short.

Ross Hudson, Danny Poliziani and John Martan were the Barrie marksmen. Brian Kilrea notched both for the Cubs.

Biltmores also scored all their goals before allowing St. Michael's to count.

Ron Howell, Bob Forhan, Ed Shack and Ike Scott were the Guelph scorers. Noel Price, Jack Caffery and John Pascht tallied for the Collegians.

Trois-Rivieres Reds are at Hamilton and St. Catharines plays the Black Hawks in Galt in tonight's game.

Sunday, Kitchener meets the Frontenacs in Quebec City, Guelph is at Marlboros and Trois-Rivieres plays at St. Michael's.

Heffernan flipped the puck past Keating to make the score 2-1 for Donwoods. At 17:35 R. Allen banged in the rubber and three minutes later Kidd of Burns Bridge scored another.

R. Allen led the scoring for Donwoods with two goals, and L. Kidd of Burns Bridge accounted for their only goals.

The line-ups:

Sign With Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Red Schoendienst and pitcher Harvey Haddix, both unhappy over early St. Louis Cardinal offers, signed Friday for substantial pay raises with the Redbirds.

The redheaded second baseman, who just missed the National League batting crown last year, reportedly moved close to the $50,000 class. He was paid about $35,000 last season.

Three Ontario Rinks Place

SEIGNIORY CLUB, Que. (CP)—One Montreal rink and three from Ontario posted four-point winning margins Friday to lead a 24-rink field at completion of first round play in the 13th annual MacLaren Shield bonspiel.

Montreal Thistle's G. W. H. Wylie won 13-9 over A. R. MacLaren, Buckingham, and F. A. Graham, Morrisburg, defeated Seigniory Curling Club president Colin Rankin's rink 11-7.

W. S. McCauley, Carleton Place, shared the glory, downing Jack Clifford of Montreal Thistle 9-5 and Dr. A. H. Reid, Arnprior, defeated J. B. Brown, Seigniory, 13-9.

After three rounds of play, the four rinks having highest plus margins in three victories will play off for the shield.

E. L. Gallagher, Montreal West, winner of the consolation Buckingham Trophy last year, won 11-10 over C. L. Gulley, Pembroke, while defending champion J. B. Daugherty, Buckingham, also squeezed out an 11-10 victory over Dr. R. F. Price, Ottawa.

Phil Pryde Hits 837

Phil Pryde banged out top three of 837 and best single of 320 in the men's City Bowling League, as Cookie's led teams with (1269) 3,600. The 6-0 wins went to Cookie's over Monumental, and McGillis over Edward's, as 4-2 victories were taken by MacDonald, Stopawhile, Sunocos, Golfers, Primeau and Parkhill against Payne's, Family Credit, McBride & Anderson, Ferguson, Novelty, and Royal York.

McMaster Team Expects To Remain In Union

MONTREAL (CP)—Athletic director Ivor Wynne of McMaster University made it plain Friday that his Marauders expect to stay in the Intercollegiate Football Union.

In Montreal with his senior basketball squad for a game with McGill Tossers, Wynne said, "We definitely intend to stand by our constitutional rights."

Told that the league officials were reported to have drawn up a tentative schedule for next season, with the Macs not included, Wynne said:

"I don't know anything about that. We are going ahead on the assumption that we are still in the league."

The in-or-out status of the Marauders stems from an earlier union meeting at which Queen's, Toronto Varsity and University of Western Ontario voted to drop the first-year Hamilton team from the loop. The constitution, however, says there must be 100 per cent backing before any college can be dropped. McGill voted that the Macs stay.

"We are in a difficult position but appreciate the fact that McGill has still a greater problem," said Wynne. "McGill could just drop the issue and go ahead with the four-team loop as was the case before we were admitted last season.

"The McGill people backed us and the fact they are standing their ground proves they don't want to see the constitution tampered with."

College athletic directors meet in Kingston March 3 and it is expected the matter will be again brought up. Unless there is a definite decision beforehand, the question will go before the annual meeting of the Intercollegiate Athletic Union in Toronto March 20.

"We will demand a vote on whether the move in dropping us is constitutional," said Wynne.

"If Queens, Varsity and Western stick to their game, they will end up playing in a three-team loop, which would be an outlaw group. That wouldn't make sense."

HASTINGS (ENS) — The Hastings Chamber of Commerce team kept up their winning streak by defeating Norwood Lions 6-1 on Hastings ice before one of the best crowds of the season.

The locals took an early lead, scoring two goals in the first five minutes and sewed up the result with two more in the first period. Norwood opened the scoring in the second stanza, but Hastings came back with two more to complete their tally. The final period was scoreless.

Bertrand Shows Heels To Skiing Pack

LAC BEAUPORT, Que. (CP)—Laval University's Andre Bertrand showed his heels to the rest of the pack Friday to walk away with both the downhill and slalom events in the Canadian intercollegiate skiing championships at this resort town near Quebec.

Bertrand, member of Canada's 1952 Olympic ski team and former Canadian junior and senior combined champion, flashed down the 4,000-foot downhill course on Mount St. Castin in 53.4 seconds.

Landy May Run In United States

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—John Landy, top Australian miler, said Friday he will discuss with United States professional sprinter Mel Patton next week an offer to run in the United States this year.

Landy is interested in the U.S. tour because plans for a proposed trip to Finland are "up in the air" and he doesn't want to go to the Empire games in Vancouver next July without a chance to keep in shape at some interim meets.

ARBOUR RECALLED

DETROIT (AP)—The Detroit Red Wings Friday sent defenceman Jim (Red Eye) Hay to their Sherbrooke farm club in the Quebec Hockey League. He had played 13 games with the Wings, failing to score.

Al Arbour was recalled from Sherbrooke and will report in time for the game Wednesday night against the Toronto Maple Leafs.

✦ ✦ ✦

NEW BOARD MEMBER

DETROIT (AP)—Who is Bruce Norris, the Detroit Red Wings' new representative on the National Hockey League's board of governors?

He is the youngest son of James D. Norris, Sr., who died in 1952 after building the Wings into a hockey powerhouse. Bruce's sister is Marguerite Norris, president of the Red Wings.

The younger Norris, 29, replaced Jack Adams Thursday on the NHL board. But Adams, Detroit's general manager, remains the key figure in the Red Wing picture.

It was reported that, in quiet stock transactions, Bruce has become co-owner of both the Red Wings and Olympia Stadium, home of the Wings. To do this, he had to drop all interests in the Chicago Black Hawks, where he had been a member of the board of directors.

James D. Norris, Jr., runs the Black Hawks, as well as other sports enterprises.

DOESN'T WANT WAR

DETROIT (AP)—Nick Kerbawy, general manager of the champion Detroit Lions of the National Football League, feels American players have more opportunity by playing pro ball in the United States than in Canada.

"I'm not trying to start a personal war with the Canadian league," Kerbawy said Friday, "but I think a player is better off staying in this country to do his playing."

"He builds up invaluable contacts while playing in our league," he added, "and these contacts help him get good jobs when he's done as a player. Right now I can name a hundred such players.

"But if a boy wants to go to Canada, and lose his identity, so to speak, plus these contacts—well that's his business."

Kerbawy conceded that the Canadian league is a threat to the NFL but is hardly alarmed about it.

"I don't see how they can operate in this day of high payrolls and expenses when they have stadiums which seat only 20 to 24 thousand. Why, in this country, we play in stadiums which seat from 50 to 100 thousand."

MORE MONEY NEEDED

TORONTO (CP) — A campaign started nearly six months ago to finance cost of sending more than 200 Canadian athletes to the July 30-Aug. 7 British Empire Games at Vancouver has netted only $17,500 to date, it was announced here Friday.

"We need between $50,000 and $75,000 to pay all expenses of the athletes from the time they leave their homes until they return from the games, and we are confident we can get the money," Lt.-Col. George C. Machum of Montreal told a meeting of sports officials.

Col. Machum, chairman of the games finance committee, said he expected $30,000 from the Dominion and provincial governments, $6,000 from civic governments, $31,000 from private individuals and business firms in Canada and $6,500 from civic governments.

"As host country to the games we shall have entries in every event in the games and we expect about 224 athletes to go to Vancouver from various parts of the country," he said.

TORONTO (CP)—Torchy Peden, Victoria's famed six-day cyclist of yesteryear and one of Canada's most popular athletes of all time, will be a head table guest at the celebrities dinner of the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters here Feb. 18. Proceeds of the $25-a-plate dinner will go to the Ontario Society for Crippled Children.

100 Golfers Start Off In Laredo Open

LAREDO, Tex. (AP) — A field of more than 100 golfers headed by Tony Holquin, Marty Furgol, Ed (Porky) Oliver and Shelley Mayfield of the touring professionals and a hot-shot amateur, Wesley Ellis of San Antonio, moved out today in the first round of the $3,000 Laredo open.

While the first-place money winner is expected to come from among Holquin, Oliver, Mayfield and Furgol, chances of Ellis finishing on top or high up are considered good in view of the way he has been shooting in practice rounds. He has had three consecutive five-under-par 67s.

The tournament is a 36-hole affair and is a substitute for the Tucson open, scheduled this week but cancelled by its sponsors. The final 18 holes will be played Sunday.

Par-cracking over the 6,683-yard Casa Blanca course was furious Friday as 71 professionals engaged in a $500 sweepstakes. Willie Goggin of New York shot a 67 to win first money of $100. There was a tie for second with three Ontario pros included. They were Rudy Horvath of Windsor, Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener and Al Balding of Toronto. Each shot a 68 and won $49.

Injured McNeil Out For Two Games

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens management announced Friday that goalie Gerry McNeil, injured in Chicago Thursday night, will be out of the next two games and will be replaced by Jacques Plante.

Canadiens arrived in Toronto Friday where they are scheduled to meet Maple Leafs tonight. The National Hockey League Montrealers move on to Boston for a Sunday night game.

Plante, who has done fill-in jobs with Canadiens before, has been called up from Buffalo of the American League.

McNeil suffered an ankle injury when Pete Conacher of the Black Hawks crashed into him.

Morrow Park Attractions: Good Or Bad?

Opinion on McGill St., concerning the Exhibition grounds, the stabling of horses thereon—and the annual fair, varies from a frenzied distress to calm unconcern. One party feels that the entire shebang: barns, buildings, track and stands, should be transported to distant lands. Others feel that the general hullabaloo stems from a select group of some half dozen chronic groaners who would complain that the Taj Mahal was a water hazard.

Generally, however, those affected and those living immediately out of range, feel that the fly problem arising in the spring from piled manure, should be eliminated. Hugh Stewart, owner of the horses, told the Examiner that his stock would be removed on or before April 15 and most parties interviewed today feel that this date will be early enough to combat the fly scourge, providing the manure piles are removed at this time. A few claim that flies will appear with the first touch of warm weather—well before the April deadline.

"It is not the horses themselves which cause the disturbance," said one gentleman. "They seem to be well cared for and as long as the manure is removed before the heat sets in, I, for one, will be satisfied."

PACK AND GET

"There are some people who want the whole thing removed," said another. "They'd like a nice green park installed at their doorstep." He implied that it would be much simpler for these parties to pack their belongings and go in search of such a park.

"When the board of health set the date at January 31 for the grounds to be cleared—why didn't they stick to it?" queried another. "Seems to me that if it was some poor little man who was in there, he'd be out by now."

"Yes, the flies are the big annoyance," said one lady. "We were bothered with them up until last November . . . in fact I had three bottles full before the season was over." She explained that she had purchased a bottle-type fly trap early in the season.

"There are other annoyances such as the screams and racket coming from the PA system during fair time, and night game and racing events—but I suppose we'll just have to accept them. The flies are the big problem."

Irate gentleman: "Some people want a lot of things done to that park. All I want is the Memorial Centre."

Plan To Give Cancer Fellowships

TORONTO (CP) — Cancer research fellowships are to be awarded soon by the Ontario division of the Canadian Cancer Society.

E. S. Welch of Toronto, division president, Friday night announced terms under which they will be given.

He said at an executive committee meeting that the division through its research committee offers financial help up to $4,000 a year "to each person ordinarily resident of Ontario who in the opinion of the advisory committee is deserving of the support which such a fellowship would furnish in completing studies which would contribute to the better understanding of cancer."

The award will be known as the Gordon E. Richards fellowship in memory of a Toronto doctor who died of cancer several years ago.

MOBILE CENTRE

It was also announced at the meeting that a mobile information centre, the mobile little red door, will start in Kitchener Feb. 22 on tours of Ontario to encourage citizens to seek early diagnosis and prompt treatment of cancer.

The division's education and publicity committee, including delegates from St. Catharines, Peterborough, Kitchener and Brantford, was sold at its meeting Friday night that the fourth in a series of speakers' conferences will be held in London March 25 to provide information which speakers can use in addresses to community organizations. The previous conferences have been in Hamilton, Windsor and Kingston.

W. M. Nickle, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature for Kingston, will be the speaker at the division's annual meeting to be held here March 5.

Your Peterborough Chamber of Commerce presents

A PROGRESS REPORT for 1953

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT-1953

JOHN MADDEN

This is the 65th Annual Report, submitted to the members of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce, and the citizens of the City of Peterborough, whom we serve.

It has been an honour and a privilege for me to serve as your President during the year 1953. In so doing, I have gained a greater insight into the problems of our rapidly growing community and also the work which the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce is doing.

Chamber of Commerce work is community service. It has been well said in the past,—"So long as there exists a difference between what a community is, and what a community should be, there is a need for a Chamber of Commerce".

It is not easy to review our activities over the past year, in the limitations of this space. It is only in looking back that one realizes the many hours of deliberation spent by leading citizens, as Directors, the countless letters received and written, the thousands of phone calls made, and the long hours of work put in by our paid staff, to secure the economic prosperity of Peterborough—to carry on the traditions laid down by our far-sighted citizen pioneers.

Ours is not a new organization. In the 1890's, the groundwork of the then Board of Trade, was laid. The work we do now, was started by these outstanding businessmen, of Peterborough, whose names are bywords in our long history of progress. Many thousands of our citizens today are gainfully employed in Industries brought here through the efforts of earlier Chamber of Commerce committees. Even though times change; the need for constant community service continues, in varying forms. The same far-sighted community spirit, which was evidenced in the laying out of our many parks, in the securing of some of our present Industries—in the campaigning for better highways, and, in promoting our resort areas exists to-day, in our present Chamber of Commerce. Its non-partisan, non-sectarian interest in this City's development must always continue.

Our steadily-increasing membership over the past few years, levelled off in 1953 at around 400. It was consolidated in greater activity, and a stronger Retail Section. Our membership today is more representative than ever before of the community as a whole. We are proud to number among our members, independent retail merchants, and chain store managers, doctors, lawyers, and dentists, resort operators, and tourist home owners, farmers and gasoline station operators, industrialists and members of Parliament. Truly ours is a democratic organization, made up of Catholic, Protestant and Jewish members of the community.

To the Peterborough Examiner, the Review and, Radio Station CHEX, go our sincere thanks for their support and assistance over the past year. Their reporting of our activities have been fair and unbiased. Their response to our requests for space and radio time has been gratifying.

To Mayor Hugh Waddell, the 1953 City Council, and, the City officials and staff at the City Hall our sincere thanks for their gracious co-operation, in matters of mutual interest to the City. To the Members of the Peterborough County Council, also, our gratitude. We share with both these hard-working councils the feeling of pride in the growth of our community.

It is to be regretted that we could not do as much as we have done in the past, or as much as we would have liked to do, because of an ever-growing deficit. For example, we were unable to exhibit for the Kawartha area at any sportsmen's show in 1953. We were unable to produce a new Peterborough folder of the type desired but had to use material from previous years.

My sincere thanks to the members of our 1953 Directorate, our retail representatives, and the many members whose physical, financial and moral support made possible this year of progress. I will continue to support our Chamber, and the 1954 Board of Directors. You have chosen them well, and for them I bespeak the same whole-hearted support that you gave me.

(Signed) JOHN MADDEN

WHAT IS A CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

A Chamber of Commerce is a voluntary association of citizens organized to promote the commercial, industrial, agricultural and civic welfare of the community and the district in which it lies.

There are over 700 Chambers of Commerce (or Boards of Trade) across Canada today, all non-profit organizations working on behalf of their respective communities. Most are affiliated through provincial, national and international Chamber of Commerce organizations.

Membership in the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce is open to all citizens, regardless of race, colour, creed or political affiliation — interested in the development of this community.

Chambers of Commerce are not subsidized by any governments—federal, provincial or municipal. They are financed mainly by individual memberships, although in many cases they do ask and receive payment for direct promotional services rendered to the city.

The great potential of this community as visualized by the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce is one to stir the imagination of all forward-looking citizens. This Chamber will consistently aim to insure that the social and economic affairs of our community function upon well-founded, long term policy and principles embodying the greatest respect for private enterprise.

The Board of Directors of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce determines and sets the policy of the Chamber. The Directors are elected annually from and by the members at large. Policies are executed by standing and/or special committees with administrative details carried out by the Chamber staff.

Business Protection Service

This phase of the Chamber's activities, for the protection of all citizens, merchants and members, continued to be a most important part of the staff's daily routine. As an affiliate of the Toronto Better Business Bureau, we were contacted daily by 'phone, letter and in person on matters pertaining to house-to-house solicitation, telephone high-pressuring, sidewalk canvassing on the downtown streets, direct-mail approaches and other like matters.

Peterborough is known far and wide as a prosperous community. As such it is the target of many unscrupulous, fly-by-night "gyp" artists. This office conducted a continuous campaign locally to stamp out these unsavoury promoters, as well as to promote fair business practices.

Recent case histories include cooking ware "deals", appliance promotions, chimney repairs, magazine and program rackets, and telephone solicitations for athletic organizations. Industrial and retail members saved themselves hundreds of dollars by checking with this office when in doubt. Church and fraternal organizations and countless citizens also availed themselves of this service.

No individual or group is ever authorized to use the name of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce as a reference. Remember, before you invest, investigate.

City Promotion

Industrial concerns, financial and business publications, advertising agencies and others from all over Canada requested this office to supply them with up-to-date information on Peterborough's industrial progress. Countless letters were received soliciting data on the number and types of local industries, number of employees, annual payrolls, building statistics, etc.

There was also a steady demand on this office for assistance from individuals wanting to purchase or establish businesses here, looking for jobs, housing and accommodation, employing local salesmen, asking for specific local products.

Because of the confidential nature of most of these enquiries, specific cases cannot be stated here. Suffice is to say that there are several local retail establishments and services now operating in Peterborough through the co-operation and assistance of this office.

This Chamber continued to work in close association and co-operation with the City Industrial Commissioner in connection with industrial enquiries.

Many New Canadians, as well as new residents, called on the Chamber for assistance in getting settled in Peterborough. The Chamber staff is pleased to have been of assistance to our newcomers.

...motion

This office continued to be the focal point in the Kawartha Lakes area for distributing information regarding hotel, motel, cottage and cabin accommodations, fishing areas, navigation maps, folders, etc. A heavy volume of mail from the United States and other parts of Canada on tourist matters was handled in the course of the year. Travel bureaus of both the federal and provincial governments sent this office the names of all prospective U.S. visitors requesting information on the Kawarthas. Accordingly over two thousand form letter replies were sent out along with Kawartha folders and maps, following which these names were passed along to our resort members for their follow-up.

Approximately three thousand other Kawartha folders and maps were also distributed through government offices, border-crossing points, railway and travel agents, automobile clubs and Chambers of Commerce in the United States and Canada. Cost was borne by the Chamber, assisted by nominal grants for tourist promotion purposes from the City and County Councils.

During the summer months many U.S. tourists visit these offices for information on where to shop, where to stay, fish, etc. This Chamber was also pleased to assist the Junior Chamber of Commerce in their most worthwhile operation of a tourist information booth on Charlotte Street.

RESORT OPERATORS SECTIONS

Continual improvement in Kawartha district accommodation for tourists is strived for through this special section for owners and operators of resorts, fishing camps, motels, etc. Much benefit has been achieved in matters of inspection, promotion, sanitation, taxation, hydro rates, restocking and conservation through group action on the part of these local operators. A voice in local matters is obtained through resort representation on the Chamber executive.

GENERAL

Bus tours throughout the area by visiting women's organizations, children's choirs, French-speaking businessmen and others from Canada, the United States and other parts of the world were important details in the Chamber's tourist promotion work last year. Considerable assistance was also given to several local organizations arranging conventions in Peterborough.

Group Hospitalization

Value of the Chamber's group insurance and hospitalization plan was evidenced in the fact that almost $23,000.00 in claims was paid out locally by the Great-West Life Assurance Company in 1953. This was in the form of payments for hospital, doctors' and surgeons' services and weekly indemnity cheques. Over 90 firms participated with 768 employees, staff members and dependents covered.

Coverage through the Chamber to its members permits small business and professional men to enjoy group privileges. Employees of these smaller retail establishments are thereby able to obtain the same prepaid medical protection as those in larger stores and industries.

Since the inception of this plan three years ago, 757 cheques have been paid out to a total of $49,051.36. In several instances individual claims have ranged from $500 to over $1,400. Without such prepaid medical and hospitalization insurance, a great many Peterborough families would not only have had their savings wiped out but would have been in debt for years to come.

Cost of administering this plan is borne entirely by those participating.

Retail Activities

1953 marked the second year of the Chamber's Retail Section which replaced the Business Men's Association. A voice in retail policy matters was afforded all retailers, members or otherwise, through the system of one or more representatives for each retail classification forming retail section executive. Their appointed chairman then sat in with the Chamber's elected directors.

Highlights of the retail activities included: Three-night course in human relations and salesmanship; Coronation decorations on downtown streets; presentations to Ornamental Swimming Club members; and Christmas Shopping Jamboree. Street decorations, Christmas lights, trees and carol singing gained Peterborough an enviable reputation far and wide and brought many visitors from other communities.

The retail directors wish to express their appreciation to the Peterborough Utilities Commission, the City Works Department and the Fire Department for their valuable assistance in street decorating at Christmas time.

Approximately 30 meetings were held of individual classifications as well as executive and other committees on store closing bylaws, program advertisings, sales training and other retail matters.

Community Services

Motor vehicle licensing for Peterborough and district continued to be one of the Chamber's most demanding functions. While every effort was made to speed up the issuing of these licenses during the first three months of the year, the motoring public's unfortunate tendency to put off until the last possible date swamped even the extra staff members on duty. Every possible means, however, was adopted to provide fast, courteous service.

While 1953 totals are not yet available, it is interesting to note that in 1952 there were 8,901 automobiles and 1,380 trucks licensed in Peterborough with a total of 13,636 automobiles and 2,672 trucks licensed in Peterborough County.

This office was also the headquarters of the Peterborough Automobile Club. Daily reports on highway conditions during the winter months and weekly reports at other times were made available to the motoring public. Highway routing and hotel information for Automobile Club members and visitors, as well as the general public, were among other important services provided.

The Chamber is pleased to have been affiliated with and assisted the following organizations: Kawartha Recreations Inc. (Cedar Lakes Citizens' Park); Peterborough Red Cross and Community Campaign; Ontario Industrial Educational Council, Peterborough Chapter; United Nations Society; Peterborough Film Council; Junior Chamber of Commerce; Canadian Tourist Association; Ontario Chamber of Commerce; Canadian Chamber of Commerce and others.

PETERBOROUGH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

SERVING THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

IT PAYS DIVIDENDS to use rust-resistant nails on siding and trim, and to cover nail holes with putty before painting to avoid rust streaks later.

Exterior Painting Requires Care In Preparing Wood

As more and more family men with little or no experience in major construction turn to building their own homes to avoid the high cost of hired labour, again and again they trip over the same snags.

One isto be found in exterior house painting on new surfaces. Homeowners are shocked to find that, within a year, the paint job they worked so slavishly over have begun to chip and peel.

This will give some pointers on exterior painting that can just a swell as be applied in many cases other than painting of new homes.

Dry masonry walls that are sure to remain dry after painting may be covered satisfactorily with oil paints. Soft or common clay brick is generally the most paintable of brick masonary. Used brick is even better than new.

From the time the wall is constructed, about six months should elapse before painting, to give active alkali time to leach out of mortar and for brick and mortar to become thoroughly dry. The time may be less if mortar without lime is used.

PICK DRY WEATHER

Apply the priming coat if there has been a week of clear, dry weather.

It is important to buy the best paint available for the job undertaken, and to use it as the manufacturer directs.

In northern latitudes the best time for painting is from the middle of spring to mid-autumn. Rain, dew, frost or sharp drops in temperature are chief hazards to new exterior paint jobs. Don't paint before dew has dried off and stop painting about two hours before sunset.

Since hardwoods are not generally used for exterior surfaces—although many withstand weathering better than softwoods —it is best to prime softwoods with one coat of aluminum house paint and follow that with two coats of good quality exterior paint.

White paint and lighter colours given this treatment ought to last four to five years; darker colours at least two years longer.

Preparation consists of cleaning off marks of oil, asphalt or carpenter's crayon, removing loose grain or splinters, and planing or sandpapering afterward. Remove soft resin with mineral spirits or turpentine

PUTTY HOLES

Nail holes and other imperfections should be puttied after the priming coat has thoroughly dried.

It will pay dividends to use rust resistant nails, for corrosion and discolouration from nails ruins the appearance of expertly painted siding.

Aluminum nails and heavily galvanized nails are recommended. Exposed nails should be counter-sunk, puttied over and painted for best appearance, whether or not the nails used are rust-resistant. There is always danger that moisture seeping into nail holes will cause rust and resulting stains.

The Movie Column

Jane Russell Given Lead In New Film

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Jane Russell has declared her independence and signed up for what could be the best role of her career.

The beauteous bruniette was swimming under water in the RKO tank when I saw her this week. She came out of the water, shed her breathing tank, swim fins and goggles and announced that she also has disposed of her 13-year connection with Howard Hughes.

As of now, she is a free agent, although she might sign a one-picture-a-year deal with RKO. She has some strange fear that she will not be able to find work. Silly girl.

She is all set for one of the leads of "Guys and Dolls," which William Goetz will produce for a Columbia release. Her leading man will be none other than Clark Gable. Betty Grable will play Miss Adelaide and another top star is destined for the role of Nathan Detroit. Bob Hope maybe.

HUSBAND OBSERVES

"But the interesting part is that my husband will follow Bill Goetz around like a bird dog during the production, asking him why he does this and why he does that," she added. Her husband is Robert Waterfield, formerly of pro football. The reason for his apprenticeship is that the Waterfields have formed their own production company, Russ-Field.

Gilbert Roland, Jane's co-star in "The Big Rainbow," also has plans of his own. He is anxious to begin work on "Blood on the Horns," the story of his bull-fighting father. He already has a script from Niven Busch, who wrote "Duel in the Sun."

Find Dentist's Body

TORONTO (CP)—The body of Dr. Edgar Robinson, 80-year-old retired dentist, was found Friday in the house in which he lived alone for some years. It is believed he suffered a heart attack earlier in the day.

Authorities are trying to find a cousin believed living in Brockville.

Rev. Dan McIvor Has 81st Birthday

OTTAWA (CP) —The Commons Friday extended birthday greetings, two days early, to its oldest member, Rev. Dan McIvor, who will be 81 Sunday, St. Valentine's Day.

Hugh A. Mackenzie (L—Lambton Kent) who sits behind the Liberal member for Fort William, expressed birthday wishes while members applauded.

"I don't feel very old yet," replied the Irish-born Mc. McIvor. "He who keeps His eye on the sparrow will keep His eye on old Dan."

Although the oldest person in the Commons, Mr. McIvor, a member since 1935, is not the dean in point of service. That honor is held by Hon. C. G. Power, Liberal member for Quebec South since 1917.

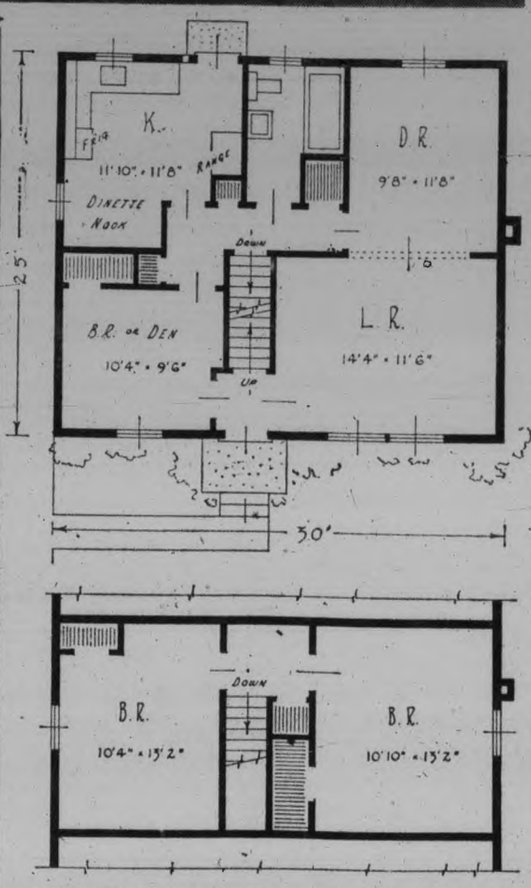
WI Presentation

MOUNT PLEASANT (ENS).—Members of the Women's Institute met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Ruth on Tuesday evening to present a gift to Mr. P. Gilleshan, who is leaving for Scotland February 17.

Mrs. Eric McLean presented a gift of a shirt from the Institute, and Mrs. Althouse presented a basket of gifts from other friends.

Mr. Gilleshan made a suitable reply, thanking all those who had helped in any way while he had been in Toronto hospital and when he had been staying in the village.

Lunch was served by the ladies and a social hour spent.



RELEASE No. 63-246—Here is a small home designed to give the very best value for your building dollars. For the new family it would be very hard to beat—where finances are a problem the two upstairs rooms could be left unfinished until funds are available at a later date. A feature of the first floor is the open planning of living and dining room combination. Nicely handled entrance millwork gives a real "lift" to an otherwise rather plain facade. Located in a development in the northern suburbs of Toronto, this home was built three years ago to sell for only $8,910 including 47' lot. For working drawings, write Home Building In Canada, 2842 Bloor St. W., Toronto.

Stone Hunters Find Jade In Fraser River Gravel

CHILLIWACK, B.C. (CP)—Frank Edwards and his wife have been searching for precious and decorative stones for 25 years and call themselves "rockhounds."

Mostly they have searched through the Fraser valley, but they have also accompanied rock-hunting expeditions all over North America from Alaska to Mexico and have boxes loaded with precious and semi-precious stones and display stones of no commercial value—all of varying colors and shapes.

In their home they have equipment for cutting and polishing and make brooches, stickpins, earrings and other ornaments.

The Edwards are members of the recently - formed Fraser Canyon Jade and Rock Society.

JADE IN GRAVEL BARS

Jade, originally considered an exclusively oriental gem, is found in gravel bars of the Fraser river, varying in size from a pebble to boulders weighing hundreds of tons.

Clear imperial jade, particularly the apple green variety, is the most valuable kind found locally and has high commercial value. Zircons—clear stones—are found along the Fraser and Vedder rivers. These are fairly valuable.

"Thunder egg," a volcanic bubble thrown up in ages past, is found along the Fraser and from it can be taken agates of brilliant colors.

Petrified palm tree roots have also been found locally and from the Columbia has come petrified teakwood, suggesting that a much warmer climate once prevailed in this area.

"There are some weird deposits indeed," said Frank Edwards. "Near Princeton there is a mountain of petrified wood of all colors."

Won't Have To Pay $41.90 Said Overpaid

BRANTFORD (CP) — John W. Bishop will not have to repay the $41.90 Ottawa claims he was overpaid in gratuities for service in the armed forces during the Second World War.

Judge D. J. Cowan, before whom the case was heard two months ago, handed down a decision dismissing the suit of the federal attorney-general's department against Mr. Bishop.

Said Judge Cowan: "There is too much uncertainty about this claim to justify me in saying the claim has been proven. I am, however, of the opinion that payment was made in mistake of fact and not of law or correct interpretation of statutes."

Judge Cowan noted that three different amounts were claimed at various times since June, 1947, when the attorney-general first attempted to retrieve the amounts overpaid.

Color Styling Starts With The Roof

So much has been written about the complexities of color styling that many new home owners feel lost when it comes to selecting the best color scheme for their house. Actually, there's nothing too complicated or very technical about color selection—but there does exist a need for some understanding of the few basic principles condensed for quick reading in these columns.

Since the roof is the most dominant permanent feature in the color scheme of most houses, it is a good place to start your study of colors.

First, keep in mind that different colors create different feelings—green is quiet and restful, red is warm and yellow is gay and sunny. Blue lends a cold and dignified note. Purple is austere and formal.

CONTRASTS, BLENDS AND ACCENTS

Color may be used in contrast, blend or accent. Contrasting colors are opposites, tones of opposing values but yet which do not clash . . . such as a blue green and a red brown. Blending colors are the eye-pleasing, restful combinations such as a light green and a dark green, or a cream and yellow. The accents are striking color touches used sparingly but boldly to introduce an individual or different color note into some special house detail. Examples might be a turquoise door, a flame-red shutter or chrome yellow terrace pottery.

When planning your overall color scheme, it is advisable to bear in mind that there are at least a dozen good opportunities for using color in addition to the roof . . . the doors, shutters, sidewalls, masonry, trim, window sash, flower boxes, the doorstep, awnings, outdoor furniture, breezeway or terrace, etc. Somewhere in the scheme of things you'll want to have some points of sharp contrast. One rule to keep in mind always is that the charm of a light-color house is set off by darker trims and the dark house is brightened by light touches.

Light colors for the walls are more generally used in the warmer climates with cool, light colors for the roof. One of the main reasons for this, of course, is that light colors reflect rather than absorb the heat. Greens, blues, and silver grays are cool colors that make a house appear more comfortable and restful to the eye.

In our own colder climate the tendency is more towards the use of warmer colors. Yellows, creams and tans are good. Here, too, darker roof colors are more successful with warm browns, rich reds as bright accent tones.

INFORMAL OR DIGNIFIED?

Color helps a house to express feeling. Bright, gay colors give an informal and inviting appearance while dark, rich colors seem to suggest dignity. Color also has the ability to shrink or stretch the apparent size of a house. White is expensive . . . dark colors tend to restrict. Blue recedes . . . red comes forward.

Colors should be chosen that will emphasize the points of a house that are attractive and subdue those that are less pleasing to the eye. Remember that contrasting colors will bring features out in importance . . . soft blending colors will tend to conceal them.

If you want to make a house appear reserved and formal, color areas should generally be kept unbroken. This is achieved by using blending tones rather than colors that contrast or accent. A house may be given a gay and lively appearance by turning to yellow or reds for accent with light or contrasting areas to set them off. Cozy and relaxed effects may be accomplished by using soft ivories and creams with tones of brown, green or rust for emphasis.

CORRECTING POOR PROPORTIONS

An excessively tall house may be made to appear lower by the use of a dark roof and dark upper floor shutters. A squatty house will appear taller when a bright roof is used to draw the eyes upward.

Always consider the setting and orientation of your home when choosing a color scheme. No one house should clash with those adjacent to it and all should blend with the general feeling of the street. If your house perches high on a hill so that the roof is projected against the blue of the sky, a warm red will set it off admirably. Where the house on a knoll or hill is tall, the choice of blue or black as a roof color is good.

Reckless Driving Conviction For Finnigan

KITCHENER (CP) — An Ontario Supreme Court jury Friday found Joseph Finnigan of Guelph guilty of reckless driving but not guilty of manslaughter.

Finnigan had been charged with manslaughter in connection with an accident Oct. 11 on highway 24 east of here, in which Mrs. Lena Irene Leader of Guelph was killed. The Finnigan automobile struck the rear of the car in which Mrs. Leader was riding.

Thursday Dr. L. H. Leggett of Guelph testified that in a unique test he gave beer to Finnigan and then tested his reactions. Testimony concerning the specially-conducted test was admitted as defence evidence.

FIRST TIME PRESENTED

Lawyers said they did not know of such evidence ever before being presented to a jury at a manslaughter trial in Canada.

The test was conducted at the request of Finnigan's counsel, Abraham Acker. Mr. Acker asked the evidence be admitted as it was the only way in which he could counter crown evidence regarding Finnigan's condition after the mishap.

Dr. Leggett said the tests showed Finnigan had "greater than normal resistance to the effects of alcohol." He also said it is "difficult to distinguish between "deep concussion and deep alcoholism."

GETTING HER MONEY'S WORTH — When Helen Mack, of Glasgow, Scotland, paid $10 to kiss screen star Errol Flynn during a Frankfurt, Germany, program to raise March of Dimes funds, she expected to get her money's worth. All she got was a brother-type peck, left, from Flynn, and she felt she was being short-changed. Grabbing the actor, right, the Scotch lassie moved in for what she called a real "Scotch kiss." All Flynn could say was, "Even if it is for the March of Dimes, I am selling myself too cheaply."

Ready To Test Law Validity

MONTREAL (CP)—Glen Howe of Toronto, counsel for the Witnesses of Jehovah, said Friday validity of a new Quebec law aimed at the sect may be tested in the courts within a couple of weeks.

In an interview, Mr. Howe said that in Quebec City Thursday Mr. Justice Fernand Choquette rejected only one part of the Witnesses' action against the legislation and its sponsors.

The legislation bans distribution of abusive literature attacking any religion and Premier Duplessis has said it was aimed at the Witnesses of Jehovah.

Mr. Howe said a declaration of nullity, which he described as having the same effect as an injunction, could be obtained against a public official.

Efforts, he said, now are being made to have the court hear within the next couple of weeks the remainder of the action which includes a request that the legislation be declared unconstitutional.

Spoils Beauty

TRENTON, Ont. (CP) — Complaints were heard from residents that the scenic beauty of the Bay of Quinte, at the outskirts of Trenton, is being spoiled by people dumping their garbage on the ice of the bay. The district is a popular spot for scenic drives in winter.

Will Review Australian Case

OTTAWA (CP)—The immigration department will review the case of an Australian woman who was turned back at Vancouver while trying to join her married son in Calgary.

The woman, Mrs. Jessie Wilson of Sydney, Australia, was denied entry to Canada because of an arrested case of tuberculosis.

However, Immigration Minister Harris said Friday in the Commons that she will be given another medical examination when she returns to Australia.

The woman's case was raised by Carl Nickle (PC—Calgary South).

Mr. Harris said the mother had applied in Australia to enter Canada but was rejected because of "arrested TB." Despite that, she sailed to Canada. However, the department would review her case again because she has a married son in Canada.

Asks If Policeman Can Be Prosecuted

OTTAWA (CP)—Can a Quebec policeman who disturbs a meeting of Jehovah Witnesses under provincial law be prosecuted under federal law?

The question was asked Justice Minister Garson in the Commons Friday night by J. H. Ferguson (PC—Simcoe East) during clause-by-clause study of a new Criminal Code.

A section of the code says that, "Everyone who wilfully disturbs or interrupts an assemblage of persons met for religious worship. . . is guilty of an offence punishable on summary conviction."

Mr. Garson said he must obtain expert opinion on the matter before making a reply.

Convict Driver In 100 MPH Race

BARRIE (CP)—Edward Levy of Toronto, freed last summer on a dangerous driving charge laid after police chased his car at speeds up to 100 miles an hour, Friday was convicted on the charge and fined $100 and costs.

Simcoe county judge J. G. Harvey also ordered Levy's driving licence suspended for three months.

Magistrate Gordon Foster of Barrie dismissed the charge last July. He said he was not satisfied Levy was guilty of dangerous driving under the Highway Traffic Act.

The Ontario attorney-general's department appealed the decision and asked for a new trial.

"No one was injured but we must consider the potential danger to the public," Judge Harvey said. "They have got to be protected."

Man Pleads Guilty To Three Charges

SARNIA (CP) — William Harold Thompson Friday pleaded guilty to three charges laid under the Customs Act.

Police said Thompson last fall took used cars into the United States, listing as equipment seat covers, arm rests and radios and other accessories not then a part of the automobile. When Thompson returned to Canada, customs inspectors noticed the equipment was on the car.

Thompson was convicted of the illegal importation of the accessories and their illegal sale.

He was fined $100 and costs in each case plus the value of the seized goods—$143. He previously had been compelled to pay the duty plus statutory penalties provided under the Customs Act.

Alert Operator Sounds Fire Alarm

PERTH (CP)—An operator who investigated a clicking noise on the telephone circuit of A. J. Conlon Friday saved his meat market and upstairs apartment from serious fire damage.

Miss Margaret M. Adam called Mr. Conlon when she heard a clicking noise, caused by the flames burning the wires, on the circuit. She then notified the fire department.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, was confined to the rear portion of the store and apartment. There was no immediate estimate of damage.

Perth is 60 miles southwest of Ottawa.

Suspend 15 Liquor Licences

TORONTO (CP)—Fifteen liquor licences in Ontario were suspended for infractions of regulations during the 1952-53 fiscal year, the annual report of the liquor licence board showed Friday.

The report, by board chairman W. T. Robb and tabled in the Legislature by Provincial Secretary Arthur Welsh, also showed that 54 new licences were granted, bringing the total number of licensed outlets to 2,024.

Of the suspensions, six were for unsatisfactory operation, four for improper entertainment, three for such infractions as allowing minors on the premises, serving drunks and staying open beyond the permitted hours; one for unsatisfactory sanitation and one for non-observance of the board's instructions.

PERMITS ISSUED

A total of 34,942 banquet permits were issued to individuals for specific functions.

Of the 54 new licences granted, 13 were for military messes, 13 veterans' clubs, nine social clubs, nine hotels, eight taverns, one restaurant and one labor club.

The total licences in the province including several held by one establishment, in many cases, was 4,465.

Horton To Join HMCS Cornwallis

Richard B. (Dick) Horton, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Horton, 368 Brock St., who joined the Royal Canadian Navy, and left for H.M.C.S. York a week ago, will be leaving today for HMCS Cornwallis, at Halifax, N.S.

Prior to his departure on Thursday last, about 25 of his boy friends surprised him with a lively musical party. Highlight of the evening was the presentation of a handsome "Speidel" expansion watch bracelet, by the boys. His parents also presented him with a gold watch as a going-away gift. The boys provided the music with a band of their own and singing was also enjoyed. The happy evening came to a close with refreshments of sandwiches, cake and soft drinks.

Injunction Granted To Restrain Picketing

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice D. C. Wells of the Ontario Supreme Court granted an injunction Friday to restrain members of Local 713, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners (AFL), from picketing four Niagara peninsula building projects.

The pickets have stopped work on a crippled children's camp near Port Colborne, a federal building at Ridgeway and at the Bank of Montreal building at Niagara Falls.

Work was also stopped at the Welland plant of North American Cyanamid but there was no picketing here.

Mr. Justice Wells said that even though the picketing has been peaceful it has "interfered without any legal justification."

Swan Rescued

OSHAWA (CP)—A white swan Friday was freed from ice on Oshawa harbor after being caught fast for 12 hours. The 25-pound bird was caught in thickening ice about 100 yards from shore and was at first thought to be dead. However, Ross Bennet broke the ice with a rowboat, got the bird and freed it in open water.

Crusade Launched

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—The Fraternal Order of Eagles Friday launched its Crusade For Freedom campaign from the centre of the Ambassador Bridge to the United States. Three helium-filled balloons were set free.

About 5,000 balloons were launched at various points in the United States. Each contained contribution envelopes and messages urging support for radio free Europe. The campaign is designed to remind Americans and Canadians of the importance of the freedom they possess.

Sleeping Pills For Fish New Lands Dept. Wrinkle

NORTH BAY (CP)—Ever see a fish take a sleeping pill?

Well, that's a slight exaggeration, but Ontario department of lands and forest experts are undertaking experiments here in drugging fish with sodium amytal before transporting them by airplane to stock lakes.

Last year speckled trout were planted in 116 North Bay area lakes from aircraft.

Space and weight are the problems which cause the most worry in carrying fish by plane and it is hoped the sodium amytal will provide some answers to both.

Fish breathe through their gills and get oxygen from the water. The amount of water c[illegible] fore, be reduced. [illegible] fish will die from [illegible]

A partly-drugged fish, [illegible] needs less oxygen because its metabolism is greatly reduced. In addition to the drugging of the water, oxygen is also pumped in. Drugged fish thresh about less and can be packed in closer.

At the moment 6,000 can be handled in aircraft fish tanks, and up to 60,000 can be planted by one aircraft in one day. The planes normally fly 200 or 300 feet above the water and the pilots become so accurate at "bombing" the lakes with their fish cargo, that they can score a direct hit on a lake target only 200 feet in radius.

This year new equipment will be in use and it will be possible to [illegible] 9,000 fish [illegible]

New Version Of The Bible Gains Wider Acceptance

By Rev. A. C. FORREST

I checked recently with some of my friends who are very interested in the spread of the Scriptures to see how the sale of the new Revised Standard Version has been keeping up. Despite the rather bitter opposition of some of the ultra-fundamentalists to the new version when it first appeared, I noticed that the R.S.V. topped the sales of non-fiction for 1953. And recently I see that the opposition seems to have died down.

When you recall that it took almost a hundred years for the old King James version to gain general approval, this seems like a good record. Only a year ago some of the fiery southern preachers were calling the new version the "New Unholy Bible," and some of them publicly tore it up and burned it. Since then some of the conservative groups have begun to praise it.

UNDER ATTACK 70 YEARS

Dr. Luther A. Weigle, one of its editors, has replied to some of the critics by saying that the King James version was under attack for 70 years after its publication in 1611. The critics three hundred years ago said that the translation was ecclesiastically biased, and that the translators were "blasphemous, most damnably corrupt and intellectually deceitful" persons who truckled to King James I, at whose royal command the new translation was made.

At the same time there are those who find the new version disappointing, for they thought they were getting a new translation, not a revision. There are a great many translations on the market today which are nearer to the modern idiom than the R.S.V. For while attempting to remove ambiguities, and the words whose meanings have changed through the centuries, the scholars who worked on the R.C.V. also have attempted to keep as much of the music and poetry of the old King James as they could.

There are, for example, in the King James some three hundred words and phrases which now have, for the most of us, a different meaning than they had for early readers. The King James, like some of the prayers, uses "prevent" for "precede." I can recall being confused by the petition "Prevent us with thy blessings, O Lord . . ." which to an adult means "Go before us with thy blessings . . ."

Every time I read the baptismal service and quote those lovely words, "Suffer the little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven," I wonder if my children understand them. The new version has: "Let the children come unto me, do not hinder them; for to such belongs the Kingdom of God." I'm old-fashioned enough to regret the change a little, but at the same time I know that is clearer in its meaning for the children of my congregation.

But what is still more important is the quality of scholarship in the new version. The King James was based on a Greek text marred by many mistakes, and contained the accumulated errors of fourteen centuries of manuscript copying. Today there are many more ancient manuscripts available, and these have been used. The evidence for the text of the New Testament is better than for any other ancient book. And while even some of the errors and ambiguities of the old text may have come to be loved by us, it seems a privilege that in our day, we have available for us and our children the finest and clearest text which learned and devout men can produce.

HOPES IT MAY BE USED

However, even with these advantages, what pleases me most about the new Revision and the interest which has been given to it, is the hope that the Bible may be taken down from its hallowed place on the shelf and used in the living-room and at the bedside table.

And to that end a new edition has just been brought out by Thomas Nelson and Sons, which should help. It was planned as a youth Bible, is illustrated with full-page colored plates, a dozen maps of the Holy Land in the back, and sells more cheaply. However, the National Council of Churches people in the United States talked the publishers out of the idea of calling it a youth edition; it is called an illustrated edition. The thought behind the change was that many older people found the original edition too expensive, and would welcome a cheaper R.S.V. The National Council has been proved right. Already the sales indicate that adults are the big buyers.

Having been brought up on Hurlbut's "Stories of the Bible" with all the pictures, I welcome the new cuts in the latest edition. Some are old familiar ones, and others are new to me. I'm sorry there are not more of them.

One of the things which is helping to popularize the new version in the U.S.A. is a radio program, "When Evening Comes," in which Milton Cross reads extracts from the Scriptures to good background religious music. The only place in Canada the program is yet heard is over CFCF, in Montreal, late Sunday afternoon. It is probable that more stations here will carry it later. For you can say what you like, much of the Bible is hard to read. But it comes alive for us, when a cultured voice can add light and shade and meaning.

Canoe Made Company, City Famous

Firm To Celebrate 75th Anniversary, Known Round World

The 75th anniversary this year of the Peterborough Canoe Company sets it apart as the city's oldest industry.

Its origins were in Ashburnham when the separate municipality across the river, somewhat enviously known as the Scotch village, presented itself against a sturdy industrial background forgotten today in the unremembered ashes of successive fires.

The late Frank H. Dobbin once wrote as a voluntary chronicler of the community: "The name Peterborough Canoe has made the company and the city famous."

That was when its product, the Peterborough cedar-ribbed canoe, was collecting awards of gold and silver medals at such international displays as these:

1881—Fisheries Exhibition, London, England.

1885—Antwerp Exhibition, Belgium.

1886—Colonial and Indian Exhibition, London, Eng.

1900—Paris Exhibition, Paris, France.

1901—Glasgow Exhibition, Scotland.

ORIGINAL SITE

Those were coveted prizes awarded to the Peterborough canoe in the first years of its manufacture in premises on the south side of Hunter St., on the present site of the Canadian Oil Co., immediately east of the entrance to the fuel yards of McCarthy and Johnston.

Three-quarters of a century ago, the office of the company faced on Hunter St., occupying the ground on which stand today the pumps of a modern gasoline service station.

Peterborough's manufacturing establishment has been greatly enlarged and enhanced during the first half of this century by firms that were not even conceived as possibilities when the canoe company's products were on display and winning acclaim in metropolitan cities of western Europe.

NOW HAS TWO PLANTS

Now in its 75th year, Peterborough Canoe is continuing to flourish in two plants, one at Water and King streets, the other on Monaghan Rd. south.

The Peterborough canoe was first made on the present site of the Lions Club swimming pool at Riverside park about the year 1870 by its inventor, James Stephenson. He lived in a three-house terrace on the west side of Burnham St. and north of Calcutt's brewery.

It is worth recalling that in the building of the Hunter St. bridge large quantities of gravel were required for its concrete structure and also for the fill above its arches as the base for the final paving of its roadway. From the park fronting on the river, south of the bridge, the land rose abruptly in a broad knoll that ended on a level with Burnham St.

Much of the gravel was at hand in that incline, and as the building of the bridge progressed the knoll gradually vanished. Its material was transferred into the concrete and fill of the bridge. The depth of that digging and removal can be roughly estimated in a glance at the height of Burnham St. above the floor of Riverside Bowl.

HOUSES CLEARED AWAY

Houses reaching along Burnham St. to the Hunter St. corner were cleared away, and one of them was the terrace in which James Stephenson lived. The community park then taking shape was extended about the time Rollie Denne was mayor by the purchase of the old brewery and its demolition.

James Stephenson had built himself a small workshop among a clump of lilacs on the face of the knoll behind his house. That common interest in the outdoors and fishing became fixed on the Stephenson conception of what a serviceable canoe should be. From the surveying of possibilities, Rogers acquired patterns and models from Stephenson. From one step to another, the Ontario Canoe Company was formed in 1879 and the making of canoes in volume was begun in Ashburnham. Four years later, in 1883, the business was organized as a limited liability company, and production was considerably expanded.

Thinking back to the years when the made-in-Peterborough canoe was first on show in Europe, that quality of product became a hallmark of the company from its first stage of manufacturing. By 1884 it was turning out both cedar rib canoes, of which the present and the other type with the cedar firm still has the original patents, strips laid lengthwise. They gradually replaced the basswood and cedar board canoes.

BEFORE CPR CAME

The market in that period can be visualized from the fact that the CPR did not come through Peterborough until 1885. Railway expansion was just beginning, and with it the macadam road of horse and wagon traffic.

A great bulk of transport was by water routes, all the way across Canada in the early projection of trade routes, surveys and general settlement of the country. That is too voluminous a story to attempt recall. Peterborough canoes found their way into Europe and Africa. The Nile has been mentioned. That was only one corner of the dark continent in which the new Peterborough canoe was being used.

FACTORY BURNED

The Ashburnham factory at the north end of the old Cobourg, Harwood and Peterborough railway yards was levelled by fire in 1892. That disaster wiped out building, lumber, canoes, models and other equipment. By the way, the address of the Ontario Canoe Co. had been Elizabeth St., Ashburnham, not Hunter St., Peterborough.

From that reverse, the directors looked around for a water front site, and began the building of a new factory at King and Water Sts., the [illegible] first grey pioneer [illegible] Stephenson to the new park at the foot of the bridge, did not even consider the memory of the Ashburnham man of the same sounding name, the homonymic Stephenson, whose invention, F. H. Dobbin wrote, gained fame for Peterborough from Hudson's bay to the Nile river.

Enquiry into canoe models and prototypes fetches up with the birch bark and the log dug-out types of the Indians.

AIM OF BUILDER

A sportsman and paddler himself, James Stephenson turned his imagining to some form stouter than the boat of birch bark, but retaining lightness by means of strips of wood laid along or across an inner frame. Briefly, then, that was his idea which evolved in the cedar-rib canoe.

The first products of his craftsmanship used basswood strips lengthwise, but that fairly wide material was subject to splitting.

The cedar-rib detail of manufacture is so generally known today that only passing reference to it should suffice in a preface to the establishing of the Peterborough Canoe Co.

Col. J. Z. Rogers and James Stephenson were Ashburnham men, and both sportsmen, and it naturally came about that their [illegible] ganized [illegible] Peterborough Canoe Co. Its directors were: Col. James Z. Rogers, William H. Hill, E. Burritt Edwards, E. B. Loucks and George A. Schofield. The new building on Water St. was 70 ft. by 30 ft. in three storeys. Production was resumed in 1893, and the fame of the Peterborough canoe continued to spread into far-off places.

It is recalled, for instance, that William Ogilvy, Dominion Land Surveyor and first Governor of the Yukon, penetrated into the far north of the Pacific coast in a Peterborough canoe.

The North West Mounted Police were supplied with the same craft, and other Peterborough canoes were forwarded to engineers of the United States and Canada for the Alaskan boundary survey.

Col. J. Z. Rogers died in 1909, and the management of the company devolved to Claude H. Rodgers, son of the founder, and W. A. Richardson, both of whom died in recent years.

DIRECTED COMPANY 40 YEARS

Mr. Richardson had joined the company just before 1900. He became president with responsibility for sales, and Mr. Rogers vice-president in charge of manufacturing. They directed the

TWO OF PETERBOROUGH'S civic-minded citizens during the first half of the present century and now both dead were Claude H. Rogers, left, son of the founder of the Peterborough Canoe Co. and William A. Poor health in later years curtailed many of Mr. Rogers' activities but Mr. Richardson remained a leader in civic affairs until his death, a little more than a year ago.

Car Collides In Sideswipe With Transport

A 1937 car suffered damages estimated at $400 when it was in collision with a Smith Transport tractor-trailer on Highway 28 near Scott's Corners at 2 a.m. Saturday.

Galvin Stabler, 36, of Park St., Peterborough, was proceeding north on the highway when he was in collision with the tractor-trailer, driven by Stanley Keating, 32, of Bradford, heading south. The two vehicles side-swiped each other, Stabler's car meeting the left rear dual wheels of the transport.

Stabler managed to keep his car on the highway though it was damaged on the left side and front $400 worth. The tractor-trailer suffered only dents. Neither driver was injured.

OPP Constable John Cawood investigated the accident.

St. Paul's Names New Organist

St. Paul's Presbyterian church has appointed Aubrey Brand, A.R.G.O., A.C.C.O., L.R.A.M. as organist and choirmaster He will take up his duties on April 1.

Mr. Brand, who arrived from England a few years ago; has been organist at St. Paul's United church, New Liskeard, and more recently at St. Paul's Anglican cathedral, Sault Ste. Marie. At Sault Ste. Marie, he was also in charge of music instruction in public schools and conductor of the well-known Ladies' Philharmonic choir, several times winners at the Kiwanis music festival held annually in Toronto.

Mr. Brand is replacing Christopher Gledhill who left St. Paul's at the beginning of the year.

Abandoned Car Leads Police To Break-In

LINDSAY (ENS)—Lindsay police are investigating a break-in at Kawartha Motor Sales which apparently occurred Thursday night.

The occurrence was brought to light Friday just before noon, when the OPP discovered a 1954-model car in a ditch on Highway 7, about a mile west of Lindsay. An investigation indicated the car had been stolen from the garage on Lindsay St. S.

Also stolen were $150 in cash and a cheque for $1,500 from a till in the office of the garage.

Further investigation by Sgt. Gordon Eberts of the Lindsay police revealed that a set of 1954 licence plates had been stolen from a used car on the lot and placed on the new model before it was driven away.

STEAMED UP

Sgt. Eberts said today that the thief had apparently been unfamiliar with the control mechanisms of the car and had been unable to turn on the defroster. It seemed that the windshield had steamed up and the driver was unaware that he was approaching a sharp curve.

The car had missed the curve and gone off the road into the ditch. The drive-shaft of the car appeared to have been broken when it hit the ditch.

Carl Signorotti Heads UE Local

Carl Signorotti, a member of Local 524, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (Indep.), has been elected president of his local for 1954. He succeeds George Wallace who has been in office since 1951.

Mr. Signorotti has been active in union affairs since he joined in 1947. Last year he was a member of the executive board.

Election of officers for 1954 was announced Friday after Thursday's voting. Here is the slate:

Carl Signorotti, president; Alex Seppala, vice-president, who has been vice-president with the exception of one year since Local 524 was started in 1946; Bill Wallace, financial secretary, a steward and executive member for the past four years; Roy Wagar, treasurer, also executive member for the last four years; George Stevens, recording secretary; and 11 zone representatives, three trustees and a floor guard.

Local 524, UE, is the largest union in Peterborough. It is the bargaining agent for 3,300 production workers at the CGE plant.

Dream Stuff

The big fire at Loblaw's Thursday night seems to be the stuff that nightmares are made of. During Friday night, the boys at the firehall were called forth twice to extinguish imaginary [illegible] the first alarm [illegible] hour today, 4.40 a.m. to be exact, a group of frantic ladies informed the fire department that they could see the reflection of a blaze in Ashburnham. Another cold ride was all.

You Can't Go Canoeing Tonight, Daughter, The River Would Free ze To Your Keel

Peterburians are "pouring on the coal" these days without giving a thought to how or when they will be able to pay the fuel bills. They want heat and plenty of it as the thermometer, for the second time in less than a month, sagged to minus 18 on Friday night. The other equally cold night was January 18.

The cold has been holding steady for the past two days. It was 15 degrees below on Thursday; the night of the Loblaw fire, 18 on Friday night and six degrees below today at 9 a.m. People went about their business briskly all day Friday as the cutting north-west wind kept the thermometer down to two below zero.

If it is any satisfaction to district people there are millions of fellow Canadians in the same situation. It is freezing cold from coast to coast—that is, if you move the Pacific coast inland to the foothill country where it was three below in Edmonton on Friday night. It was four below in Halifax.

Some of the cold bogy places did not come up with anything too scary; White River, 26 below; 28 at Sudbury; 22 at Muskoka airport and 21 below in Ottawa.

Perhaps home owners may be able to rest on their coal shovels over the weekend. The weatherman promises milder temperatures in Southern Ontario, with some snow.

CGE Workers Ask 15c Raise

Resumed Negotiations In Peterborough First Time Since 1947

Negotiations on a union contract that includes 3,300 CGE production workers in Peterborough will be resumed at 10.30 a.m. Tuesday at the Club Aragon.

It is the first time since 1947—the year before the first master agreement was signed in the CGE chain — that negotiations have been held in Peterborough. Local 524, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (Indep.) are the bargaining agents for the Peterborough production workers.

Union proposals include:

1. A general wage increase of 15 cents an hour;
2. A half-hour lunch period with pay for all shift workers;
3. Reduction of the gap between the rates for men and women workers;
4. Longer holidays—two weeks after two years, three weeks after 10 years, and four weeks after 25 years;
5. November 11, Armistice Day, to be counted as a statutory holiday, making nine altogether;
6. A general tightening of the contract, from the union point of view, on union security, seniority provisions, grievance procedure, and protection for incentive workers.

HOURS SETTLED

This year there is no dispute about the hours of work. In accord with the agreement the CGE went on a 40-hour week January 1.

The contract ends March 27.

Minimum rate for women at present is $1.22 an hour; for men $1.42 an hour ranging up to $2.11 for toolmakers.

First meeting between the company and the union to discuss the new contract was February 1 and 2 in Toronto.

C. S. Jackson, Canadian UE president, heads the union negotiators. Also representing the union will be Carl Signorotti, president-elect for 1954, and Lawrence Thornington, secretary of the grievance panel.

Measure 'Lunge Snout To Tail Tip

Regional forester W. B. Greenwood revealed today that under the new government system of measuring game fish muskies shall be measured from the end of the snout to the tip of the tail when the tail lobes are depressed. The minimum length by this method is to be 30 inches.

Since possession limits for all species of fish have been cut to one day's catch instead of two as in past seasons, only two muskies per day, minimum 30 inches, may be taken. Tourists may take home only two muskies instead of four.

An extra speckled trout is to be given away, according to the new regulations. One trout of any size may be added to 14 per day providing the 14 fish in the aggregate weight do not total more than ten pounds. Fifteen speckled in the aggregate of 10 pounds was the rule last season.

Black bass, from nose to closed tail tip, are now to be 11 inches instead of ten with the usual daily bag limit of six fish. Yellow pickerel by the same means of measurement must be 15 inches long instead of 13 inches heretofor. The bag limit still remains at six fish.

City Teachers To Get [illegible]

plan for teachers and other board of education employees has been worked out.

Beginning January 1, 1954, teachers will be allowed to accumulate 50 per cent of their unused statutory sick leave, to a maximum of 10 days each year, up to a total of 80 days.

A line has been drawn between "leave of absence for reasons of health" and "sick leave." On a leave of absence where the employee is not actually incapacitated by illness he will not be entitled to the accumulated sick-leave credit.

Sick leave for other employees will be 20 working days in any calendar year with the privilege of accumulating additional sick leave under the same terms as set forth for the teachers.

Little Damage

Two accidents reported in the city Friday were not serious and no persons were injured.

At [illegible] and Lafayette streets Leonard [illegible]ers, RR 7, Peterborough, was driving a dump truck which came into collision with a car driven by John C. Chiddle, 721 Frank St.

Charles J. McCabe, 293 Burnham St. and Dermott Calver, 472 Mark St., were drivers of vehicles which collided at Douro St. and Driscoll Terrace.

Main Street Topics

NAME INSURANCE BROKER

Charles Ray has been approved as the board of education's insurance broker for 1954. All the board's insurance will be placed in his hands.

PROPOSE TRUSTEE

Ernest McWilliam, newly-elected board of education trustee, has been suggested by the board as their nominee on the recreation commission. He will succeed Charles Huffman in that post.

EXTEND TEACHERS' SERVICE

Five teachers have been given a year's extended service by the board of education. They are Mrs. Mary Scott and Misses Ethel Garbutt, Lillian Esplen and Eva Fusee of the public school staff, and Harry H. Graham of PCVS.

AGREES TO BOND

After further consultation with city clerk E. A. Outram and Mayor Norman Graham, Hugh Stewart informed the Examiner, Friday, that he is willing to post a bond of $5,000 with the board of health guaranteeing removal of his stock at Morrow Park, on or before April 15.

APPROVE SUNDAY SCHOOL

A request from the Rev. A. Roblin of Park Street Baptist Church, asking the use of Armour Heights public school for a Sunday school, from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sundays, has been approved by the board of education. The only cost will be $5 weekly to cover caretaker's fees.

HEADS CAMPAIGN

Al Wilson, former accountant of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, now manager of the Kingston branch will head a mass blitz organized by the Canadian Red Cross Society which hopes to raise $30,000 in one day in Kingston with an army of 1,000 canvassers.

BOOST COMMUNITY CHEST

Another penny-a-day collection will be held in city schools, Feb. 26 to March 5, the board of education have agreed. C. G. Collins asked that this annual collection be staged a week ahead of the usual drive for the Red Cross and Community Fund. A tentative objective of $650 has been named, but board officials made it plain that this was not to be a competitive project; the purpose of the collection is publicity for the main drive.

Fire, Monday Closing Swells Shopping Crowds

Cashier lines in the local supermarkets are plugged to capacity today for two reasons: (1) The surplus patronage from one that isn't anymore, and (2) Augmented grocery lists to provide for the Monday closing to begin next week. Each of the remaining supermarkets, A and P, Dominion, Buehler's and the Charlotte St. Loblaw's store, have enlisted additional help to cope with the increased demand. Some of the help comes from the staff of the razed Loblaw store on George St.; the rest from out-of-town affiliates of the other supermarkets. It is understood that Loblaw's will accommodate their misplaced staff members if they choose to take a transfer.

National Grocer's estimate their increased output over previous Saturdays to be between 25 and 30 per cent. Against normal policy, they accepted orders up until noon today, although delivery in such cases was impossible; the stores had to transport their own orders.

The company pointed out that although warnings were sent out [illegible] day for the wholesalers and most of the delivery is completed on Friday.

York Trading, which does the majority of its business with the outlying district, was not severely affected. The week's orders were completed before the fire, except one which was to arrive at Loblaw's Friday morning, and had to be cancelled.

WILL CONFLICT

"We will not encounter much reaction until the beginning of the week," said a York official today. The problem is not so much supplying the retailer for the long weekend, but rearranging traveller's schedules so they can cover the town and country areas effectively. This problem arises from the conflicting Wednesday afternoon and Monday holidays in the country and city, respectively.

York Trading, and presumably National Grocers, will remain open Mondays to prepare for the weeks deliveries. "Should we close at all," said the York official, "it will be on Saturday morning." As it is now, Saturday is a half [illegible] Friday, with some delivery saturday morning.

Filtration Plant To Welcome Guests With Coffee

Flowers on the greensward, diagrams in the lobby, magnificent approaches and coffee in the cafeteria may be among the new order of things at the filtration plant. It would be a "splendid idea" said George Macdonald at the Peterborough Utilities Commission meeting Friday, to make the filtration plant the focal point of a concentrated PUC public relations campaign.

There should be an open house at the plant for several days and evenings during the summer, said Mr. Macdonald. This would give citizens an opportunity to see their plant in action "for I doubt if 25 per cent understand what goes on at the filtration plant."

Much work remains to be done before the filtration plant finishes its current beauty treatment, said PUC manager Howard Powell. But after the redecorating is done he sees the day when citizens will be making pilgrimages to the far northend to see the plant in action.

EXPLANATION

There should be a huge diagram inside the lobby to explain filtration of water schematically, said commissioner Richard Raine. This would be especially valuable for students for "they are always being assigned essays on the filtration plant."

But "let's not go overboard" on this thing, suggested chairman Fred Hills. He was all in favor of educating people to an appreciation of their filtration plant and having conducted tours through the buildings. He was less enthusiastic about the suggestion that visitors be repaid for their interest with sandwiches, cakes and coffee.

When you start making even a little food in terms of 200 or 300 people, "things begin to add up." He favored Mr. Powell's suggestion that coffee ought to be just about enough.

In any case it looks as if a public relations campaign will be launched to acquaint citizens with their filtration plant. Meanwhile decoration work is proceeding apace. Workmen are now fixing up the interior, with exterior work planned later in the spring.

HOLDING HIS OWN

Ronald White, six-year-old boy who was severely hurt when struck by a motor transport on Lansdowne St on Thursday, was reported by Civic Hospital authorities today to be still holding his own.

Board May Hike Rent To Theatre For Auditorium

The cost of letting the Peterborough Summer Theatre group use Queen Mary School auditorium for a 12-week period, as requested by Michael Sadlier, is giving the board of education some concern.

In fact the whole problem has been tossed back into the lap of the supervision committee for further study.

After hearing Mr. Sadlier's proposal on January 26, the supervision committee made this recommendation:

1. Outright rejection of an offer to go halves with the board on a $3,500 refrigeration unit;
2. Rental at the same rate as last year, from June 28 to Sept. 11. If it was no inconvenience to Queen Mary school the run would be from June 21, a week earlier. This would make 12 weeks in all.

After consultation with Queen Mary's principal, K. S. Wightman, superintendent of schools, said: "We have very decided objections to letting the Summer Theatre in there before June 28. There is traditionally a school graduation night, about June 25; and other school activities would be pretty well handicapped."

LIMIT USE

The projection screen and the hangings would have to be taken down in advance for safe keeping and this would limit the use of the auditorium for the school children.

Last year's rental to the Summer Theatre was $160 a week, which just about met costs—not allowing for wear and tear on the auditorium and lounge. With insurance rates increased this year, Charles Huffman, chairman of the board, estimated that the old rental would not produce enough to meet the costs of insurance, caretakers and renovations—still not allowing for wear and tear.

Hearing this, board members voted to refer the matter back to supervision again.

Other Provinces Study Reading Methods In N.S.

HALIFAX (CP) — Nova Scotia has taken an important step in the age-old controversy on how children should be taught to read.

The new program teaches children the skill of word recognition through pronunciation and word picture systems and discards the old idea of teaching the alphabet in the primary grades.

The plan, being considered for adoption by several other provinces, parts of the United States and the United Kingdom, brings parents into the school for conferences to eliminate conflict in home-teaching methods.

The program for improved reading was started three years ago by Harold M. Nason, chief inspector of schools and assistant director of educational services for the provincial education department.

Mr. Nason's plan was to sell the idea that all students possess different powers and abilities and should be taught as individuals rather than as a group.

He believes that parents should learn how the educational system works and how their child can learn more easily, erasing the possibility of confusing the children at home.

The child should be able to pick out any word, pronounce it by syllables and thereby master the art of word recognition and meaning, Mr. Nason believes. The old way was to learn to spell a word by constant repetition, and learning only one word at a time is a memory-straining and slow process, he says.

Mr. Nason says that the improvement in reading habits in the primary grades throughout the province has been "outstanding" and that research in the future might well be centred upon reading habits of the older pupils.

Education officers in Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick and Ontario, along with several states in the United States and the British ministry of education, have asked for information.

Missing Jet Crashed On Vancouver Harbor

VANCOUVER (CP)—A U. S. Air Force F86D Sabre jet, lost in rain-shrouded skies with useless instruments, crashed Friday on a mountain rising abruptly from the harbour here.

An RCAF official said early today that wreckage found on the mountain was "definitely identified as part of the aircraft in question.

He said a wing-tip with identification letters had been found and they agreed with U.S. Air Force records on the missing Sabre.

Italian Police Chisel Name Off Church Wall

ROME (AP) — Italian police descended today upon Rome's Church of Christ, chiselled its name off a wall and took a news photographer of The Associated Press into custody for photographing them.

They vainly ordered an AP correspondent away from the scene.

The word "Christ," in six-inch-high letters, was the first word removed in this action against the Protestant religious organization, which has American financial backing.

The police struck quickly after worshippers were forced to leave a Church of Christ in Leghorn late Friday night.

AP photographer Remo Nassi, an Italian citizen, was seized with his camera and hustled off in a police car despite protests. AP correspondent Allan Jacks, a United States citizen, was ordered to leave, but refused.

ON DIRECT ORDERS

The police left as soon as the name had been entirely removed from the wall.

Later Nassi was released without charge, and his camera was returned to him.

The sign was removed on direct orders of the Rome questura, or police headquarters, which is under the Italian ministry of interior.

Mario Scelba, new premier of Italy, which is predominately Roman Catholic, is the minister of the interior as well as government chief.

APOLOGIZED LATER

The chief of the police party declined at first to give his name and identified himself as "commendatore Pinko." This was an obvious jibe at Church of Christ preachers, who in the past frequently have been assailed by Italian critics as leftists. This they have always denied.

Later the police officer apologized and identified himself as Commissario de Rusk.

In 1950, when the cult's troubles with Italian authorities first began, Scalba criticized the Church of Christ and other Protestant evangelical cults as "aiding communism in Italy."

Just two days ago the Vatican and the Italian government celebrated the 25th anniversary of the lateran pacts, which established Roman Catholicism as the Italian state religion.

GIVEN WARNING

The new Italian constitution says "all religious confessions are equal before the law."

In the first collective letter of its kind, Italy's Roman Catholic prelates warned their adherents Feb. 1 against what was described as Protestant propaganda. The letter, signed by the cardinal archbishops of eight major Italian cities, and bishops and archbishops of 11 other cities, said:

"Pernicious errors are arising in Italy from Protestant propaganda which tends to menace the spiritual unity of the Italian people."

Russian Wins Chess Match

TORONTO (CP)—Igor Z. Bondarevsky, Russian grand master, won a five-day cable chess match Friday by forcing Canadian co-champion Frank R. Anderson to resign after 41 moves.

Anderson resigned at 10:50 p.m. after the Russian pressed his attack in the last stages of the long, tense struggle. "It was futile to continue," the Canadian said after the match.

After Bondarevsky made his 41st move, Anderson had his king, queen, knight and four pawns left while the Russian had his king, queen, bishop and six pawns. It was at this point that the Canadian conceded the match.

The players had agreed to play 40 moves each in 2½ hours. They both had completed the required moves, Anderson with 30 seconds to spare, and had agreed to continue at the rate of 16 moves an hour when the match ended.

Anderson, 26-year-old University of Toronto student, played before a five-foot square board in the Coliseum Building here where the progress of the play was watched by hundreds of spectators.

Hold Public Hearing On Use Of $35,000

SARNIA (CP)—A public hearing opened Friday to receive suggestions on what should be done with the $35,000 left in the Sarnia tornado relief fund.

Rev. Douglas G. Eaton, representing the tornado committee, said business claims should be considered. Another man suggested the $35,000 be given to the national disaster fund.

The public hearing is being held by a three-man arbitration board set up by city council and the tornado committee after the two bodies were unable to agree on disposition of the money.

Judge E. A. Shaunessy, chairman of the board, said a decision will be made in the next 10 days.

Postal Head Says Increases Unsatisfactory

KINGSTON (CP) — Dan Cross, national president of the Canadian Postal Association, says recently-announced pay increases for post office employees are unsatisfactory.

In an interview Friday night, he called them "a few crumbs from our benevolent benefactor, our employer."

He said the civil service commission added insult to injury by saying the increase was not as large as it might have been "because they (the postal workers) are shortly to go on a five-day, 40-hour week basis."

NOT ON SUCH BASIS

Mr. Cross said many post offices across the country will not be on such a basis.

"We are definitely opposed to implementation on a piecemeal basis," he said.

He also said postal employees are denied bargaining rights accorded to industry. He criticized exclusion of civil servants from provisions of the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act. He said the day for collective bargaining by government employees has arrived.

Canadian Artists Defend Collection of Paintings Now On Tour In Europe

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A Belgian-born Canadian painter and some Swedish art critics have stirred up a fuss about a $20,000 collection of contemporary Canadian art commissioned by a liquor firm.

The artist called the paintings "calendar pictures," the collection a "farce." The Swedes called them "brightly colored postcards" and described the whole collection as a "whisky monument."

The Canadian artists who contributed to the collection called it "a fine idea" and "a good sample of an important phase of Canadian painting."

The 22 paintings, urban profiles of Canada from St. John's to Victoria, were collected by the House of Seagram with co-operation of the Royal Canadian Academy which commissioned 20 artists for the task.

GLIMPSES OF CANADA

After a brief exhibit in Ottawa last spring the paintings were taken on a tour of Latin America and Europe. Samuel Bronfman, of Montreal, Seagram president, said the object of the tour was to carry abroad some glimpses of the Canadian landscape and skyline and to promote understanding of Canada.

Reports from Canadian missions abroad where the pictures have been shown said thousands had seen the paintings and generally criticism was favorable.

But finally the paintings arrived in Stockholm. The Swedish critics hit hard.

One newspaper, Dagens Nyheter, described the collection as "a brown cupboard furnished with a firm's trade mark." It suggested that the House of Seagram might have created more goodwill for Canada by sending "first-rate whisky instead of second-rate oil paintings." Aftonbladet called the colection a "whisky monument."

Then a Canadian painter, 47-year-old Henri Masson, told Ottawa's Richelieu Club in an address Wednesday that the collection was "a major publicity stunt."

Belgin-born Mr. Masson, who describes himself as a "near-modern impressionist," said only two or three good Canadian artists were asked to exhibit and they were "great artists among a group of bad buttons." The painters were commercial artists rather than artists in the true sense, he said.

He used the word "dirt" and called the tour "a scandal."

REPLIES ARE PROMPT

Replies to Mr. Masson's remarks were quick in coming.

Clare Bice, curator of the London, Ont., art gallery and museum, suggested "perhaps the best answer to Mr. Masson would be to exhibit some of his paintings by way of comparison."

"I understand that Mr. Masson has a very enthusiastic sponsor," said Mr. Bice whose view of London is in the collection. "Perhaps for that reason he doesn't have to accept commercial work."

A. J. Casson of Toronto, who helped assemble the collection and painted the colorful scene of Hamilton, called the remark "absurd." He said being a commercial artist had nothing to do with the artistic merit of the paintings. Even a portrait painter is "commercial" if he sells his works, said Mr. Casson.

SKETCHES TURNED DOWN

Mr. Casson said Mr. Masson had been asked to submit several sketches of Ottawa but these had been turned down "because of the subject matter and not from an artistic point of view."

Guelph artist Evan MacDonald, who painted the sunny scene of King's Square in Saint John, N.B., said: "Anyone who executes a commission, whether it be for a cathedral or an advertisement for burglar tools, is a commercial artist."

A. Y. Jackson of Toronto, member of Canada's famed Group of Seven, described Mr. Masson as "a good painter" but "inclined to rush into print."

POORLY PLANNED

Mr. Jackson, who painted the scene of St. John's, Nfld., thought the collection could have been better planned. It was "too hurried . . . artists weren't given time . . . there were some very good ones and some very poor ones . . . the poor ones should not have been included."

Robert W. Pilot of Montreal, who painted Sherbrooke, said the artists are among the most eminent in their profession in Canada.

"Therefore, when an individual in Ottawa . . . uses such phrases as 'scandal' and 'farce' and this address is publicized throughout the country, it is a great disservice to the whole profession of painting in Canada."

Canoe Made

operations of the company for 40 years.

Fire on the night of January 6, 1918, swept through the main building of 1892, but was checked in its threat to annexes erected in the intervening years. Reconstruction was begun at once, and eventually the company picked up its pace of production again.

Invention of the outboard motor brought various changes in design of boats for its use, concentrating finally on a special type of outboard motor that has been widely accepted throughout Canada and the United States.

The manufacturing facilities of the company were requisitioned by the government of Canada in both world wars. In the first, Peterborough Canoe made thousands of wooden boxes as containers for the shells that were being produced in other factories.

During World War II, the company manufactured for war purposes a wide variety of items such as: pontoons for bridge building, assault boats, RCAF crash boats, naval tenders and bomb loading dinghies, sailing dinghies, airplane skiis, and the regular snow ski that was used by branches of the army.

Memories of the company include many distinguished visitors, particularly the Governor-General of Canada, Viscount Willingdon, accompanied by Lady Willingdon, on an unscheduled call while touring through central Ontario.

GIFT TO NOW QUEEN

City of Peterborough in 1948 requested the company to build a special canoe to be presented to Princess Elizabeth as a gift on the occasion of her wedding. An 18-inch model of a Peterborough canoe was also made for presentation to Viscount Alexander of Tunis on his official visit to Peterborough as Governor-General. It was conceived as a typical Peterborough product and a remembrance of his visit.

Peterborough Canoe Company has today a payroll of about 200 employees, and is producing 65 per cent of the canoes used by the boating public of Canada.

"Although it is not a large business, it is exceptionally proud of the fact that it no dobut brings more world-wide recognition and advertising to the city than any other industry," John F. Richardson, president of the company, remarked to the Examiner yesterday.

The made-in-Peterborough combination of motor and outboard motor boat offer an economical unit that appeals widely today in the extended leisure which has come to many people. The sale of canoes in 1953 was "away above the total for any recent years." Last custom-built pleasure boats is also an important part of the company's output. More people than ever own cottages, and, living on lake and river fronts, they are naturally not content to sit on the shore throughout the sunny months of summer.

Freight canoes are still in steady demand. This type, from 17 to 25 ft. in length, has a capacity of 3,000 to 5,000 pounds of freight. Companies like the Hudson's Bay, survey parties and other groups are the more numerous buyers of this utility canoe.

Some of the recent sales of the Peterborough canoe were in New York and elsewhere in the old New England States.

With all its years of experience in boat building, Peterborough Canoe Co. has retained its vitality and enterprise. The construction in 1946 of an additional plant on Monaghan Rd., neighbor to Nashua Paper Co., was a project during the later years of Wm. A. Richardson, who obviously perceived the increasing trend to that former area of North Monaghan township and its adjacence to a residential section of the growing city.

Mr. Richardson and his associate executive, Claude H. Rogers, well deserve to be remembered among the builders of the larger Peterborough developing through the first half of this 20th century. John F. Richardson is now the third president at Peterborough Canoe.

Oldest Student I. E. Pedlow Dies

RENFREW (CP) — Isaac Ellis Pedlow, Irish-born business man and one-time member of Parliament who became the oldest student ever to attend Queen's University, died today at the age of 93 years.

The colorful Ottawa valley resident, born near Belfast, opened a successful drapery business here late in the 19th century and for 40 years played a leading role in the community's business development.

He was elected to parliament in 1917 when he ran as a Liberal on the anti-conscription issue. He again was offered the Liberal nomination in 1921, but bowed out for business and health reasons.

STUDENT AT 69

Finally, in 1929 he sold his business to a Toronto firm, but feeling himself too young to retire at 69, decided to enter Queen's to seek degrees in arts and commerce.

He is said to have taken part in most undergraduate capers, cheering with other students at college games and marching with them down Princess street singing college songs.

He played a prominent part in building Renfrew Hospital.

A daughter survives. Funeral services will be held in Renfrew Presbyterian church next Tuesday.

Against Sunday TV

LONDON (Reuters)—Gen. Albert Orsborn, head of the Salvation Army, has asked salvationists to cover up their television sets on Sundays. Writing in the Army's newspaper, War Cry, Orsborn said salvationists "should definitely put a cover over their sets on Sundays, even during children's hour. It is impossible to pick and choose the helpful from the harmful."

Young Gun Slicks Give Hearing To Blind People

As the lithe form strode down the aisle one could see a certain swagger in his walk, or maybe it was just the way his low-slung gun brushed the heavy jeans. He found a seat halfway down the theatre and sat down with two or three hundred just like him.

Yes, they were a tough looking bunch, these young western movie fans who filled the Odeon theatre Saturday morning for their weekly picture show. There was evidence of enough artillery to make even the greatest wild west screen heroes quail

However, apart from a steady crunching of popcorn the children were very quiet. They were listening to Walter Simons, field officer for Peterborough district, National Institute for the Blind, giving a short talk on White Cane Week and its meaning for them.

He told them that their eyes, taken for granted by some people, were their most valuable possession. Once they lost them, or at least their sight, they could never be replaced. They were well worth looking after.

"You can keep those eyes by being careful", said Mr. Simmons. "When you are playing with pocket knives, sticks or guns, be careful because it is so easy to cause an accident that might take someone's sight".

He asked the children to try and do what they could to help a blind person. If they saw a man or woman carrying a white cane, they would know that person was blind. No one should be shy of going up to a blind person in the street and offering to assist them across intersections, or around any obstacle.

CLEAR SIDEWALKS

"There is another way you youngsters can help and that's by keeping the sidewalks clear of tricycles, bicycles, wagons and toy cars. These things, often left sprawled on a sidewalk, present a menace to the blind person, who could only rely on his cane to find a clear passage."

By being a little thoughtful, everyone could do the blind a great service, concluded Mr. Simmons.

The citizens of tomorrow gave the speaker a resounding cheer, adjusted their armament and got on with the serious business of the Saturday morning show.

It is to be hoped that they will continue to see many more shows and yet a small percentage of them may one day remember Mr. Simmons' words as they, too, grasp a white cane.

When you're considering buying a new TV set there are a few important factors you should keep in mind and we're passing them on to you this week in hope they'll help you avoid regrets later.

Of primary importance of course is a clear, sharp picture under all light conditions. If a set offers a slightly out-of-focus image keep hunting until you get one with an image that avoids eye-strain. Even the larger screens should provide edge-to-edge focus with no creeping of the horizontal lines that make the picture.

While there are excellent models in both 17 and 21 inch, if you can stretch the budget to cover the larger screen it's your best b[illegible] time co[illegible] the larg[illegible] greater trad[illegible] value.

Your tuning adjustments are important so make sure your new set tunes easily and quickly. There is no need to have the touch of a Houdini to get a good picture on a quality TV set these days. Also provision to ultimate conversion to UHF is important though any set can be converted.

But above all KNOW YOUR DEALER. We act like a clucking hen with her chicks when it comes to looking after your needs regardless of the size of your budget. Canadian Newspaper Man Broke Horsemeat Racket

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — A Canadian newspaper man sat in the Mother of Parliaments and relished an experience that falls to few men.

From a gallery seat in the House of Commons, young Patrick Keatley of Vancouver watched the world's oldest parliamentary democracy grind out legislation bearing his own personal trademark. Here's the background:

About 18 months ago Keatley, breaking in with the Manchester Guardian, blew the lid off a million-dollar racket in horsemeat. After a five-week investigation in England, Ireland and France, Keatley wrote a series of articles which raised a public outcry, prompted a personal intervention by Prime Minister Churchill and sharply accelerated the sometimes sluggish processes of democracy.

A royal commission was appointed and the Commons took up its recommendations. The crowning moment came Jan. 29 when British legislators, after a five-hour discussion that lacked a dissenting voice, gave second reading to a bill designed to make sure horses go to their deaths as painlessly as possible. The bill now goes to a committee and is virtually certain to reach the statute books.

FELT CONSPICUOUS

"It was a funny feeling, sitting there and hearing your name tossed around by members of Parliament," Keatley said later. "I'm afraid I blushed and twisted in my seat. Then, when I leaned over to get a better look, a cop motioned me back and I felt more conspicuous than ever."

The effect of the bill will be to ensure humane treatment of horses for slaughter.

Arthur Moyle, labor MP and sponsor of the bill, took as the starting point of his Commons speech the Manchester Guardian articles. Moyle said he had checked the facts and they could not be denied. In 1949, no fewer than 70,000 horses were slaughtered in Britain for home consumption.

LETTERS FROM AFAR

The debate also touched briefly on some reported cases of cruelty similar to those mentioned in the newspaper articles, which drew more than 3,000 letters from as far off as Saskatchewan, South Africa, Yugoslavia and California.

Keatley wrote the series while working here under an exchange plan approved by his home newspaper, the Vancouver Sun. He has since said that the horse traffic is controlled by a small group of "spivs"—men who live by their wits—six of them millionaires. At one point Keatley was offered a £1,500 bribe to call off his investigation.

His "legwork" on the story included a nightmare sea journey to France and a cops-and-robbers chase among hay bales in a Paris abattoir. In the slaughterhouse he was twice caught by suspicious employees and twice escaped, finally getting safely to the Eiffel Tower where he stood himself to a "nice stiff drink."

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Elliott

The good wishes of many friends and relatives in the Lakehurst-Peterborough area were joined with their counterparts in Vermillion, Albert, last January 20th when Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Elliott celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

It was on that date in 1904 that Wilbert Elliot and Janet Shaw were married in Lakehurst district where they farmed until 1912, then moved to Alberta and homesteaded in the Vanesti district 30 miles from Vermilion and farmed there for 32 years.

They raised three sons, Robert, Clarence and Arthur, all of whom are living in Alberta and were with them for the celebration, the former accompanied by his wife and 2 sons and the latter by his wife and daughter. Also present was Mrs. George Guernsey of Edmonton, sister of Mrs. Elliott who was bridesmaid at the wedding.

A reception was held at the home of a neice, Mrs. Ken Urquhart, and her husband, with 75 friends attending and many more prevented by extremely cold weather from paying respects to a highly esteemed couple.

St. Paul's WMS Studies Set-Up Of Indian Schools

St. Paul's Auxiliary of the WMS met Friday afternoon with President, Mrs. J. H. Eastwood presiding. Devotional period was conducted by Mrs. F. W. Brockley, members stood for a minute's silence, in memory of two devoted and valued members, Mrs. Alex Strong and Mrs. James Dutton, who have recently died.

The study book was presented by a panel of four, consisting of Miss J. S. Jackson, Mrs. R. F. Raines, Mrs. T. E. Kee and Mrs. D. L. Diplock. It dealt chiefly with the work in Indian Residential Schools at Birtle, Man. and the Cecilia Jeffrey School at Kenora. These schools built and owned by the Federal Government are managed by the Missionary Society which is assisted in its financing by the per capita grant given for each child in residence by the Department of Indian Affairs at Ottawa. There are approximately 150 children in each school, some coming from Indian Reserves as far away as 500 miles.

The children are taught the regular curriculum of the province by a staff of teachers and principal and matron. There is also a nurse at each school and dental and T.B. clinics are sent in each year to guard the development of disease. The girls have a well balanced course in Household Science and the boys are skilfully trained in repairing and making furniture and in farming. They also receive instruction in making repairs to motors, machinery and plumbing fixtures. Many, after graduating from these schools, attend the nearest high school. In Canada in 1945 there were only 70 Indian pupils in high school whereas in 1952 there were 1,103 it was stated. While at high school they remain in residence at their former schools.

Mrs. Fred Hills presided at the piano.

HANDY TOOL

Rubber spatulas are excellent for removing grease and bits of food that are stuck to pans and for cleaning mixing bowls. When they have done their work, they need no special cleaning to put them back in condition; rinsing will do it.

PLAN YOUR WORK

Plan your housework to avoid overworking any set of muscles. For instance, it is not wise to go from bending over a wash basin to bending over an ironing board. You'll find it far less tiring to switch from washing to hanging curtains or dusting pictures.

Major Bennett Again Has Successful Valentine Ball

With the proceeds to be devoted to charitable work and education, it is a pleasure to report that the annual Valentine Ball of the Major Bennett Chapter, IODE, was again highly successful. Three hundred couples attended this gay social event of the month at Brock Ballroom Friday evening.

Tradition hands down the tale that cupids are about in the season of St. Valentine's Day piercing hearts of lovers with their arrows. Just how many romances have their beginning in a cupid's bow is not known, but certainly the suggestion was made for the dancers by a bevy of cupids in figure, and dozens of hearts exposed to their aim. (The majority of the guests being married couples may indicate that in the past this suggestive system has been successful.)

In any case, the decorative hearts and cupids throughout the ballroom set the scene for a very happy evening. But gaining much admiration and comment was the Valentine picture on the backdrop of the bandstand. This might have been copied from the cover of the flowery-versed Valentine some chapter member's grandfather sent to her grandmother, with its centre a beautifully quilted satin heart edged with lace, and gilded cupids and other satin hearts arranged on the border.

Atop this design by decoration convener Mrs. J. B. Dobbin were the gilded letters, "Major Bennett Chapter, IODE," bringing it back to the present day.

Dance conveners Mrs. Don Wood and Mrs. Stan McBride, and a committee of helpers, assisted in the making of the wall decorations and table favors of flower baskets topped with hearts and cupids. Meanwhile, the ticket sales were being handled by Mrs. F. S. Atkinson, the prizes and favors being secured by Mrs. Gordon Barns, reservations taken by Mrs. Wm. Taylor and Mrs. R. Garner and the dance was being publicized by Mrs. Wm. Nash.

Small beauty kits were the favors given to each lady at the door, by Miss Jessie Johnston and Mrs. John Evans, as tickets were taken by Mrs. Glen Moher and Mrs. Reg. Reid. The prizes were all awarded by draws made by the new chapter regent, Mrs. Ralph Clark.

First prize went to Miss Lillian Luther and Mr. Stewart Taylor, the lady receiving a brocaded jewel box and the gentleman a leather jewel box. Mr. and Mrs. Elmore Williamson were the next winners and they got a hammered aluminum tray and a leather-backed clothes brush. Next prizes were a piece of Staffordshire china and a leather case with a folded drinking cup and the winners were Mr. and Mrs. J. Whyte. Mr. and Mrs. Stan Darling got the fourth prize, a sachet and cologne concentrate set and a man's toilet set.

Regent Mrs. Clark and her husband, Dr. Ralph Clark, received the guests, assisted by Mayor and Mrs. Norman Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon K. Fraser and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. W. Gordon Hall.

Those attending were:

Variety of Table Types For Use In 1-Room Home

By K. SHERWOOD (NEA)

Plotting a place to eat is a poser for the girl who keeps house in a small apartment. For that matter, in many small homes there is no adequate dining space.

When an apartment's sole concession to the need of the tenants for food is to line up the ice box, sink and stove in an alcove in the wall or hall or to box them in an "efficiency" kitchen, it's hardly surprising that finding space for leisurely eating would be left to the ingenuity of the homemaker.

When I kept house in an apartment, I could stir the spaghetti on the stove, get the baby's bottle out of the ice box and open the front door to greet the dinner guests without moving more than a foot in any direction. Our one large room was a triple threat—living, dining and sleeping. Cosy is one way of describing it.

If you're trying to wangle dining space out of a similar dilemma here are some suggestions:

If you're in the market for a table and chairs, you'll find new designs which cater to the needs without exhausting the bank account. For example, one new table is long and narrow and serves as a space-saving side table or a generous dining table.

Slim black satin tubing legs give X-shaped support to a black, woodgrain, plastic laminate top which features 10-inch drop leaves at each end.

Closed, the table measures 40 by 28 inches. Companion chairs upholstered in a plastic which simulates hand-loomed black and white tweed are light and comfortable. Because of the heat-and-scratch-resistant top, this table can move later into a more spacious dream kitchen.

Another new plastic-topped table, equally sturdy and suitable for small apartments, owes its streamlining to a gate-leg design. Side leaves are flipped up and locked in place by a slight nudge of the foot against the leg.

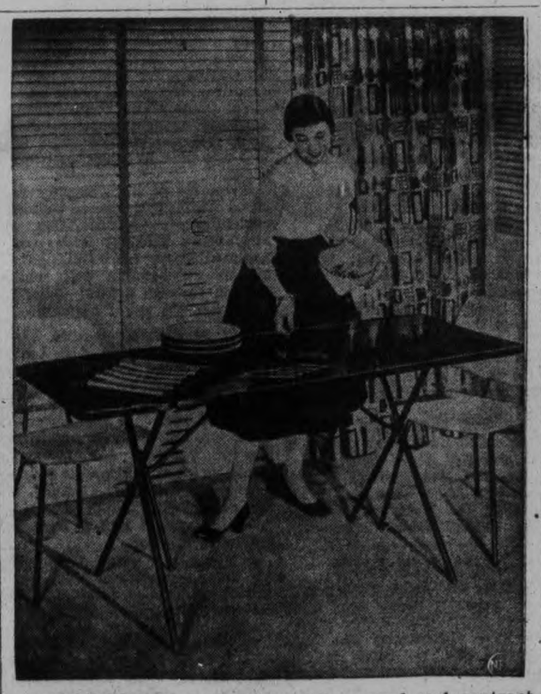
With a package of four wrought-iron legs and a narrow slab of plywood from the lumber yard, you can make your own table. If you object to the exposed edges of the wood, cover them with half-round molding tacked in place and painted, or stained, to match the top.

Although old-time hand-me-downs are apt to be too bulky for a small room, a friend of mine used an old pine trestle table to good advantage.

She shoved one end against the wall at right angles to her kitchen. Then she painted it to match the room's walls—a pale, silvery grey.

Matching benches also felt the touch of the paint brush. Seat pads were cut from foam rubber and upholstered in a modern geometric print to match the drapes.

Large enough to seat six at mealtimes, it also acts as a sort of room divider, partially blocking the view of the unavoidable cooking clutter.



DROP LEAVES make this table expand and contract to fit the needs of small-apartment dwellers. The black plastic laminate top gives the homemaker a surface which resists heat, scratches and stains, a practical working surface for any homemaker's kitchen.

P.T.A. News

Mr. P. D. Scollard was guest speaker at St. Peter's Parish P.T.A. meeting Tuesday evening. Subject of his address was "Making a Will".

Mr. Scollard said: "A business man does not neglect his business in this life, why should he neglect it after he is gone? Many people will not face the question of disposing of their affairs, believing that making a will brings death much closer. On the contrary, putting their affairs in order gives them a feeling of security."

"When a man dies and there is no will, the estate must be administered and divided among his heirs. When the estate is less than five thousand dollars, the widow inherits all of it. If the estate is more than five thousand dollars, the widow gets the first five thousand and two thirds of the remainder. If there is one child, the child gets one third of the remainder. If he is under twenty-one, his share is paid into court, and at twenty-one, he may make application for it. If there are two or more children, the wife gets the first five thousand and half the remainder, while the other half is divided eually among the children."

"Wills should be made in simple language. They must be signed in the presence of two witnesses, neither of whom may be beneficiaries. Wills may be changed. If a wife's allottment is not sufficient to keep her in the same standard of living that she was used to when her husband was alive, the amount may be increased."

"The courts try to carry out the man's intentions in the case of a contested will." Mr. Scollard recounted several well-known cases which arose from will made by wealthy but eccentric men whose bequests were bitterly contested by relatives.

"Many large fortunes are reduced by succession duties which have to be paid twice. If a man leaves an estate of over fifty thousand dollars, succession duties must be paid. If the wife inherits what is left, and dies without leaving a will, her estate is liable for succession duties."

Mr. Harold Crowley thanked the speaker.

Attendance prizes were won by Mrs. McDonald's and Miss Downer's rooms, St. Mary's, and by Sister Regina's room, St. Peter's School.

CUTICLES STAY SOFT

Keep your cuticles soft by scrubbing daily with a sudsy brush. Occasionally massage both nails and cuticles with a paste made of soap and a few drops of salad oil.

PERFUME YOUR HANDS

When applying perfume, don't stop at the wrists, put it right on the palms of your hands. Then, as you move your hands, you will send forth waves of the scent.

Girl's School Chums Frown On Her Dating Two Boys

DEAR MISS DIX: I live in a small community where the custom is that you go with one boy who is known as your steady, and have no other dates. My problem is that I like two boys. One is out of high school, the other is in my class (sophomore). Since I have dated them both, and, in fact, have class rings from both of them, the other kids in school are mad at me.

FLOSSIE

✧ ✧ ✧

TWO CLASS RINGS

ANSWER: I can understand your wanting to date two boys, but, when it comes to having two class rings, I suspect a bit of the flirt in you, Flossie. Either return both rings, or make your choice and keep one. Two is rather cornering the market. Most communities have the same attitude toward dating—either you go steady or you just don't go. It's not an ideal arrangement by any means, but until a better one comes along, you take it or leave it. Just make up your mind.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: About 10 years ago I met Mark. We have broken up and gone together again several times. I love him very much but wonder if he's taking me too much for granted. Apparently he is fully aware that I'll always be waiting for him.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Naturally, he takes you for granted. What other idea could he possibly have? Whether or not you're wise to be so available, depends upon the type of boy he is, and the nature of your continual arguments.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been attending college for the past three years but, because of my low standing, I left. Now I have a very good job with a fine future. However, my girl friend was so distressed about my leaving school, that she has broken off with me. I think her parents had something to do with it. I love the girl and would like to convince her that there's more to life than a college education.

D. M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: I'm a firm believer in every young person's acquiring as good an education as possible, but there's no denying there's a limit to what some people can take. You were much wiser to leave school and get on with your business career, than to try sticking it out with low marks. At the end you might have had trouble in getting your degree anyway. A fine young man out working is much better than a wastrel in school. Perhaps your success in a job will convince the young lady and her parents that character is, after all, what is paramount.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I am only 15, but very much in love with a young man of 21, though my mother thinks he's only 18. He's in service, and has asked me to marry him on my seventeenth birthday. Since he's been away, I've heard some very unpleasant tales about him. Do you think I should tell him this and break the engagement?

A. A. M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: The source of your advice should be your mother. You are too young to go around making important decisions for yourself, particularly concerning a matter as serious as accepting gossip. You need guidance. In any case, your mother should be told the boy's real age, you should not be bound by any promises at 15, and no idea of engagement should exist between you. Get Mom's advice, and learn to lean more on her judgment.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: You'll probably think me a horrible person, but I have been making some pretty bad mistakes, and would like to correct them. I work in a large plant where most of the workers are men. For some reason I can't understand, I delight in making the wives of some of these men jealous. I'll smear lipstick on their shirts, stick my telephone number in their pockets or call up one of the men in the evening. I know this is wrong, but how can I stop?

R. R.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: More despicable habits you couldn't have, but perhaps some wives, realizing that there are women like you, will becareful about jumping to conclusions. Your trouble may be so deep-seated that only psychiatry can help, but a closer relationship to God is your ultimate answer. Go to church, go to your clergyman and, through prayer, get your mind straightened out.

Readers' Saturday Column By Mary Moore

By MARY MOORE

EXCERPT FROM LETTER: ". . . . if you wish to blast me in your column feel free to do so." (I quote that sentence from an unsigned letter I received to attract the attention of the writer.

ANSWER: Dear Unsigned: I deserved the blast . . . but only my pride is hurt. Since pride is one of the seven deadly sins I shall try to atone by stifling and obliterating it. Perennial Boy Friend is too far away to ever read this column. That's my simple answer. I wouldn't hurt his feelings . . . as for Marianne . . . you have silenced me effectively and I thank you.

ANSWER: Lucky little girls to have such a thoughtful mother.

SIMPLE SPICE CAKE
(using beater)

Have shortening, eggs and milk at room temperature. Two-thirds cups soft shortening, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, two-thirds cup milk, 2 cups sifted flour, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 3½ teaspoons baking powder. Place sugar and shortening in beater bowl and mix 2½ minutes at medium speed. Add eggs and mix 1 minute at medium speed. Stop beater and add sifted dry ingredients and milk, then start beater at medium speed and beat 1½ minutes. Pour batter into 2 8-inch buttered and floured layer tins or square pan 8 x 8 x 2 inches. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 25 to 35 minutes.

✧ ✧ ✧

STREAM-LINED CHOCOLATE CAKE

You may use electric or hand-rotary or wooden spoon beater for this.

Stand sifter over large bowl. Into it put 2 cups sifted flour, 1¾ cups sugar, one-third teaspoon baking powder, 1¾ teaspoons soda, 1 teaspoon salt, two-thirds cup cocoa, and sift them into the bowl. Add two-thirds cup soft shortening. Mix together 1 cup water and 1 teaspoon vanilla and add a little more than half of this to ingredients in bowl. Now beat for 2 minutes or until completely smooth. Now add 3 eggs unbeaten and the remaining water and vanilla mixture. Beat 2 minutes or until batter is smooth. Pour into buttered and floured layer cake tins or square or oblong pan and bake at 350 deg. Fahr.—layers 30 to 40 minutes, square or oblong 35 to 40 minutes.

✧ ✧ ✧

PICKLED HERRING

Buy a keg of Holland Herring, salted. This contains about 10 kilos (approx. 5 lb.) and there are 18 or 20 of them. They are called milkers (males). Freshen the herring overnight in clear cold water. Drain. Remove milk sac (reserve it and put it in pickle too in cheesecloth bag — otherwise it makes the pickle milky.) Trim off gills, fins, head and tail, also any scales left on. Cut in 1-inch cross sections. Put in crock and cover with ½ vinegar and ½ water (white wine is best). Add about 10 1-inch onions sliced ¼-inch thick or 1 to 3 sliced Bermuda or Spanish onions. (These are usually eaten with the fish so slice them carefully.) Add 1 or 2 cloves of garlic if desired, 2 or 3 sliced lemons (skin and all) and 1 cup whole mixed spices tied in cheesecloth bag. Cover with plate to keep it dustproof. Store in cold cellar from 10 days to 2 weeks. When ready to use, remove bone from each cross section, cut in half at fold, and roll each half on a toothpick to serve.

Montreal Municipality Has Its First Woman Mayor

MONTREAL (CP)—Mrs. Thomas Urquhart is the first woman to be elected mayor of a Montreal island municipality, but she figures she won't be the last.

The new mayor of Pointe Claire says there is no essential difference between the sexes when it comes to politics—"You are not a woman or a man; you're a person."

If a woman is capable of running for office she should do so, says Mrs. Urquhart, who looks after her husband and 11-year-old son besides running the affairs of the good-sized town.

Women who do not run for political office because they feel the job requires a college education are misguided, she says.

"They don't realize the councils have to be representative of the community as a whole. The college man is needed, but so is the representative of the pick - and - shovel class.

"But it's ridiculous to think that just being a woman makes a good mayor. After all, a lot of men aren't suited to politics, and the same thing applies to some women."

ENOUGH TO RUN HOME

For instance, the woman with a large family and no help in the house, has enough to do at home.

But she believes housewives make good civic leaders for several reasons.

"First, they are in the community all the day while their husbands are at the office. And they are the ones who know if the garbage service is poor, if the roads haven't been cleared or if the electricity fails."

The only problem Mayor Urquhart has found hard to handle either at home or in town hall is cooking. Sometimes she is too busy with official duties to potter around with home cooking and, "as I'm not a perfectionist," her husband and son, Glen, have to rely on a few tins.

FOR PARENTS ONLY:

Family Share In Making Of Valentines

By NANCY CLEAVER

"Roses are red, violets are blue,
Honey is sweet and so are you."

Everyone knows this old rhyme and there are few better ones to print or write on a Valentine. But how about trying to make up an original short rhyme or poem? Mother, or grandmother would get a big thrill out of a verse a child wrote all himself, even if it were "doggerel."

Making Valentines is great fun and everyone likes to receive pretty cards from their friends. Suggest to your children that the members of one's own family, even if some of them are "grown up", enjoy getting Valentines too! Why not make a Valentine place card for each person in the home and put them on the table at supper time on February 14?

If there are young brothers or sisters in your home, do let them share in Valentine making! They may be too small to cut out a well-shaped heart from red cardboard. But they can find scissors and paste and look for pretty colored pictures in old magazines or seed catalogues

An old sample wallpaper book is another wonderful place to search for attractive Valentine decorations. If you ask the merchant who has sold wallpaper or paint to you to keep an out-of-date sample book, he will likely be glad to oblige you. With a little direction from you, a younger child can put paste on the back of a cut-out picture and choose where it is to be placed on the heart.

Small brothers or sisters will love to have a share in making Valentines. Mother will help you work together happily. If she has any paper doilies, perhaps she could suggest a paper lace edging for the nicest Valentines. They can be pasted on the back of the red cardboard with small plaits, making a frilly edge.

The children might decorate ordinary paper serviettes with some red hearts which they drew and colored with their crayons or cut out from red paper and pasted on them. Mother might have a good idea about a pretty table centre piece, possibly using a little man and woman salt and pepper shakers as the two central figures. One family made a charming decoration for the table out of plasticene figures using four contrasting colors. Likely Mother will have a good idea about the first course, but perhaps either she or Big Sister could make heart-shaped cookies. Red gelatine jelly is an attractive dessert. A school age child can make it himself because the directions are so easy to follow.

This Fourteenth of February, half way through the long winter months, can be a very jolly time for everyone, if each member in the home co-operates in making Valentine Greetings and in the preparations for a Valentine Home Party! These "Special Occasions" in family life provide a feeling of belonging. They are also very nice to remember when little folks are grown and away from home!

St. John's Guild To Provide Carpet

LAKEFIELD (ENS) — Twenty-two members were present when the Guild of St. John the Baptist Anglican church met, with the president, Mrs. Hugh Gastle, presiding. The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. John Twist.

Guild meetings have been held in the afternoon; but it was decided to hold them in the evenings on alternate Wednesdays. The budget for the year was presented by the treasurer, Mrs. George Birch, and approved.

The big project for the coming year will be the purchase of carpet for the back of the church, formerly the choir rooms. Since the building of the new parish hall, these rooms are no longer needed and the removal of partitions has enlarged the church.

The ladies hemmed the drapes for the hall. Tea hostesses were Mrs. L. J. Delaney, Mrs. J. Mose and Mrs. R. C. Connors.

Girls Prepare Mothers' Dinners

LAKEFIELD (ENS)—The mothers of the girls' club, the Kitchen Cut-Ups, will be guests of honor at a dinner party at the home of Mrs. Eldon Johnston in the near future. Plans for the event were made at a meeting held at the home of Jane Deladonne.

At the party the girls will present a skit with Joanne Wannamaker, Sharon Johnston, Donna Farrow and Mrs. Roy Farrow taking part.

The exhibits will be in charge of Jane Deladonne, Marie Curry and Mrs. T. Payton.

START WITH COLLARS

Ironing blouses and dresses will go smoothly if you do collars, sleeves and trim first, leaving smooth areas to the last.

CHINA Highlights by TOM O'CONNOR

We have been so busy with our February Sale that we completely forgot to continue our story about Belleek—however some of you were kind enough to remind us.

Belleek China is a Parian China, no Bone Ash is used so it's not Bone China. The China Clay being Irish lends itself to Elfin shapes and Fairy-like intricate patterns. Naturally enough says you as this is the land the fairies come from.

6—In Memoriam

BERTOK—In loving memory of our daughter, Marion, who passed away one year ago, Feb. 14, 1953.
We are sad within our memory,
Lonely are our hearts today;
For the one we loved so dearly
Has forever been called away.
We think of her in silence,
No eye can see us weep,
But many silent tears are shed
When others are asleep.
—Mother and Dad, Betty and Georgie.

CUNNINGHAM—In loving memory of a dear mother, Mrs. Mary Cunningham, who passed away, February 14, 1953.
One year today, dear mother was called,
To her eternal rest
Gone where the angels sing so sweet
And taken where God knew best,
We miss her here so very much
Her presence oft seems nigh,
But we all hope in heaven to meet,
Where no one says good-bye.
—Lovingly remembered by daughters, Mrs. Eva Lloyd, Mrs. J. White.

NEWTON—In loving memory of Mrs. George H. Newton, who passed away February 13, 1952.
Two dear bright eyes, a tender smile,
A loving heart that knew no guile,
Deep trust in God that all was right,
Her joy to make some other bright,
If sick or suffering one she knew
Some gentle act of love she'd do
No thought of self, but of "the other"
I know He said "well done dear mother."
—Ever remembered by son and daughter-in-law, Donald and Hazel Newton, Havelock.

NEWTON—In loving memory of Mrs. George Newton, of Havelock, who passed away, February 13th, 1952.
What would I give her hand to clasp
Her patient face to see
To hear her voice, to see her smile
As in the days that used to be
But some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife
And clasp each other's hand once more
In heaven, that happy life.
—Lovingly remembered by her husband.

Mrs. Stanley Andrews presented her report from last year's Toronto convention and Mrs. Gordon Parker for the recent convention in Belleville.

Mr. Brethen presided for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. Clarence Copp; vice-president, Mrs. Golden Andrews; secretary, Mrs. Malcolm MacPherson; directors, Mesdames Albert Gill, Fred English, Charles Coughlin, Roy Nevins, George Skaniker, and Stanley Andrews; delegates to the Toronto convention, Mrs. Clarence Copp, Mrs. Gordon Parker, Mrs. Alfred Bongard (alternate).

NEW PROJECTS

Ways and means of improving exhibits and displays were discussed and accepted for the 1954 fair. One new project, "Let's have a Bazaar" will be open to one organization from any church. The display is to consist of 10 articles suitable for a bazaar. Food prizes will be given. A baby show and antique display will also be held.

New Canadians of the district are to be invited to display their handicraft, for which they will be reimbursed.

Another project is to be the "Senior Citizens' Class" which will be open to all men and women 65 and over.

The advanced lists are to be printed at once and sent out to all exhibitors.

New Money Troubles For Haymes

NEW YORK (AP) — Crooner Dick Haymes, who already has ex-wife alimony trouble, back-income-tax headaches and faces a government threat to deport him to his native Argentina, has aded another "blue" note to the form of a landlord complaint over allegedly unpaid rent.

The owner of a furnished house in Greenwich, Conn., claims Haymes and his actress wife, Rita Hayworth, owe him $675 back rent plus $5,000 damage he says was done to the luxurious, 14-room house. He did not specify the "damage."

To enforce his demands, Joseph Kraeler installed deputy sheriffs in the house to watch over the effects of Rita and Dick, who are not there but are staying somewhere in Manhattan.

CHILDREN INSIDE

Miss Hayworth's two children by previous marriages still live in the house with a governess. The children are Yasmin, 3, whose father is Aly Khan, and Rebecca, 8, daughter of Orson Welles.

Recently Kaeler got an eviction order against Rita, who signed the lease, for non-payment of rent. This was withdrawn when the couple paid up for December and agreed to pay $670 for the six-week period ending Monday, Feb. 15.

About 10 days ago Rita and Dick were besieged in a New York hotel room for 24 hours by deputies outside their door trying to collect $33,000 which Haymes' former wife, actress Joanne Dru, says he owes her in back alimony.

After a lawyers' conference and a part-payment of about $4,000, the siege was lifted.

In New York Friday Bartley Crum, the Haymes' lawyer, said he plans to file a $100,000 damage suit next week against Kraeler.

Colder Weather Increases Use of Gas, Electricity

"We're selling gas like hot-cakes," PUC General-Manager W. Howard Powell reported to a meeting of the commission Friday. Propane used in gas making increased 24 per cent and the gas made was up 31 per cent last month over the same period in 1953.

The gas department's operating report for January shows 52,881 gallons of, propane used (up 12,742 gallons) and 7,447,000 cubic feet of gas manufactured, (up 2,324,000).

The number of space heating installations has shown considerable increase too. Whereas there were 46 in January 1953, last month saw 84 installed.

ELECTRIC DEPARTMENT

The electric department also shows substantial increases with last month's peak load 3,575 kilowatts above January 1953. Average peak last month was 28,000 kilowatts. Friday at noon the peak was 26,000.

Peterborough's relatively severe winter was cited as a cause for increases in both gas and electric consumption by Mr. Powell. He mentioned that there had been 4½ feet of frost on Parkhill Rd.

The temporary transformer station on Bellevue St. was put into operation last month with an initial installation of three 600-kilowatt transformers. Load is being transferred to this station as lines are completed to carry it.

The Peterborough CGE has been awarded a contract to supply switchgear to this new transformer station. Cost to the PUC will be $60,500.

NEW SERVICES

The electric department also reported that lines are being started to serve houses under construction in the Westmount Gardens subdivision. Work continues in the Queen Elizabeth subdivision.

The water works report for January shows total pumpage up 8,580,000 gallons. Totals in January 1953 and 1954 were 125,170,000 and 133,750,000 gallons.

Commenting on the three reports, Mr. Powell said that the work of the department could be carried on better with the addition of two trucks to the meter department and one electric line truck.

"At least one PUC truck needs to be put out to pasture," he said.

Offers for tenders will be sent to all Peterborough garagemen and the PUC's plans will also be advertised. For such trucks as these, the PUC buys stripped-down chassis and makes separate agreements for the superstructure.

He told of the fine traditions established in the 27 years the club has operated and said he was glad to see the close fellowship of members was still being maintained.

The initiation team, composed of Bill King, Ron Wallace, Fred Huffman, Bill Prest and Al Northcroft, pointed out that purity of life, purity of motive and sacrificial service are the planks of the Friday Night Club and charged the applicants be worthy.

The new members are Bruce Steenson, Gerald Bennett, Ross Lawrence, Dave Walks and Rene Seeborn.

A communique said Kinberg has been arrested and is being held in Waldheim concentration camp.

Doctors said Sgt. Wain suffered a broken nose and numerous facial cuts and bruises.

According to beach police chief Howard Nickling, the officer had gone to a house to investigate a complaint of family trouble.

Say 30,000,000 Valentines Sold In Canada

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An estimated 30,000,000 Valentine greeting cards have been sold in Canada this year. Also a vast quantity of candy in heart-shaped boxes, flowers, even men's shorts, ties and shirts festooned with bold red hearts.

And a Canadian Press survey shows the Valentine spirit isn't restricted to lovers. Many greeting cards are of the "for mother, brother, sister and aunt" variety.

Ottawa reports the romance angle is on the upswing in greeting cards sold in the capital. Cards which at first glance appear comic, go traditional and contain verses telling of eternal love when the page is turned.

FAST DISAPPEARING

And in Halifax the "sour" type of card—"you're a stinker but I love you"—is fast disappearing.

In Quebec City sales of valentine cards are increasing yearly and retailers expect a record year. The day was not enthusiastically observed until recent years. Cards are of all types—for mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers, friends and sweethearts.

Handbags and handkerchiefs are Valentine Day gifts in Winnipeg and Saint John, N. B., and both cities report a heavy run on humorous cards.

In Montreal sales of Valentine cards are reported increasing annually, with this year's sales upbetween 10 and 20 per cent with prices the same as in previous years.

NATO Forces Short Of Many Supplies

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — NATO forces in Europe are "vitally short of all supplies," including ammunition, and have not the transportation to move what they have quickly to where it would be needed in emergency, Rear Admiral Harry G. Dewolf, Canada's military representative to NATO told the London United Service Defence Institute here Friday night.

Crockinole Party

WARKWORTH (ENS) — The Young People's Group of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church were hosts and hostesses for the Young People's Groups Wednesday evening from St. Paul's United church and Dartford United church.

Young People enjoyed playing progressive crockinole with Mrs. T. E. Kennedy, Mrs. J. Scarrow and Misses Marie Campbell and Joy Mallory assisting in supervising the entertainment.

Later a lunch of hot dogs and coffee was served and a very enjoyable social period followed.

ROYAL BOUQUET—This baby at the Truby King-Harris Hospital in Dunedin, New Zealand, seems more fascinated by Queen Elizabeth's bouquet than by the sovereign who carries it. The Queen visited the hospital on her recent tour of the Commonwealth.

Palace Doubts News Queen Going To U.S.

LONDON (AP) — Buckingham Palace officials today said a New York report that Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh intend to visit the United States in the fall is news to them. They were inclined to doubt it.

The New York Daily News published the report in a London dispatch. It quoted "a person close to the Royal Family" as saying the couple would make the visit as guests of President Eisenhower.

A palace spokesman commented: "It should be borne in mind that a visit of such importance usually is planned as much as a year in advance."

Collision Kills 30

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — A train-bus collision late Friday at Diamantina, in Brazil's Sao Paulo state, killed 30 persons and injured six seriously, the Meridional news agency reported. The dispatch said the gasoline tank of the bus exploded, setting fire to the wreckage, and only 10 of the bus passengers escaped.

Red Blackmail Charged

LONDON (Reuters)—A British government official charged Friday night that Communist guerrillas in Malaya are using blackmail to get new recruits. The terrorists are threatening to report Chinese villagers who have helped them in the past unless the villagers join in jungle fighting, Alec Peterson, director-general of information in Malaya, said.

Charge Realtor Stole $1,900

LINDSAY (ENS) — Judgment was suspended for three weeks by Magistrate R. B. Baxter of Cobourg in police court here Friday when Lloyd Babcock, local realtor, appeared on a charge of theft of $1,900.

Babcock pleaded not guilty. He was defended by H. E. Richardson of Lindsay .

It was charged that Babcock had stolen $1,900 from Malhon Culbert of Lindsay, after Culbert had put the amount on a house as a down payment. After the down payment had been made, the owner of the home, Mrs. Maud Gaynor had asked that the sale be in cash. A delay followed while Culbert tried to raise the balance of the $5,500 sale price.

When the delay continued, Mrs. Gaynor told the court, she considered the sale was off ,and moved back into the vacant home. Culbert continued to try and buy the home, he said, and was finally promised occupancy. When he did not get it, he consulted a solicitor who advised the laying of a charge.

Mr. Richardson moved a nonsuit at the end of the crown's case; but this was dismissed by Magistrate Baxter, who also denied the Crown's recommendation that the trial be sent to a higher court for disposition.

His worship reserved judgment until March 5. At that time another charge of obtaining $1,400 from Mrs. Velma Raffen of Lindsay by fraudulent means will also be heard. The magistrate declined to hear the charge Friday, although both Crown attorney and defence counsel were prepared to go ahead with it.

HEARSE BECOMES A HOME — The James Elmer Craft family look dejected as they peer out the windows of a hearse that has been their home for three weeks at Detroit. The father was laid off from his job as a grinder last year and the family was forced to move into the hearse when they were evicted from their farm at Lake Orion, Mich.

Your courteous carrier boy assumes a financial burden he cannot afford to carry when you ask him to wait for his money. He collects on the same day each week — you know which day — and when he has to "call again" to collect from you, delivery of his whole route is delayed on several days. Russia May Score Success Exposing Split In West's Red China Policy

By RELMAN MORIN

SEOUL (AP)—Informed sources in Korea, who have negotiated with the Communists, today said Russia stands a good chance to achieve one of its major objectives, exposing a split in Western policy towards Red China, if a major-power conference on the Far East is held.

The question of convening a Far Eastern conference is under discussion among the Big Four foreign ministers now meeting in Berlin. The news that Russia's V. M. Molotov will propose an assembly including representatives of Asian nations came as no surprise here.

A top authority, who declined to be identified, said such a move was anticipated when efforts to arrange a political settlement on Korea failed.

"We long ago advised Washington that the Communists have no intention of concluding a political agreement on Korea," he said. "What they really want is a Far Eastern conference in which those countries with ideas of neutralism will be represented."

Both India and Indonesia are considered to be in that category. Burma also would lean toward the "neutral" side.

RUSSIAN OBJECTIVES

Observers see these three main Russian objectives in such a conference:

1. To bring into the open known differences among the Western democracies, especially on a joint policy toward China.

2. To delay restoration of Japan's strength so that it will be a weak point in the pattern of power in the Far East.

3. To revive charges that the western powers maintain their alleged desire to restore the "colonial system" in the Far East.

BEST CHANCE OF SUCCESS

Of the three, the first is believed to hold the best chance of success for the Russians.

The United States does not see eye to eye with Britain or France on policy toward China. Britain originally recognized the Communist government in Peiping.

British official opinion expressed to this correspondent in London recently favored acknowledging "the fact that the present government is in power and is likely to stay in power. Therefore the best thing to do is to admit the fact and deal with it accordingly."

Also, trade considerations interest Britain more than they do the Americans or French.

Problems Increasing

HARROW (CP)—J. R. Cavers of Guelph told Essex county junior farmers research problems of the Ontario Agricultural College are increasing year by year. Mr. Cavers, connected with the department of poultry husbandry at the college, Thursday night addressed the eighth annual meeting of the Essex Junior Farm Club. He said college facilities and the number of persons engaged in research work there are increasing steadily.

NEEDED PATIENCE—There's a sign on the wall of the maternity ward waiting room at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Hutchinson, Kan., guaranteed to take an expectant father's mind off his fretting. Donald Weiss, above, found that out. Due to "false alarms" he spent three different sessions in the waiting room over a period of two months before his son (in inset, with Mrs. Weiss), Fred Edward, was finally born. Each time, Weiss spent hours trying to decipher the sign. The sign reads: "A Llwho Wa Ithe Rere Mem Be Ranti Cipation Is Greatert Han Rea Lization Sor Elex and Bec Alm." He finally discovered that the sign really says: "All Who Wait Here Remember Anticipation Is Greater Than Realization, So Relax and Be Calm."

House Studies Criminal Code Revision

OTTAWA (CP) — Parliament is settling down to its study of a revision of the Criminal Code, the first complete redrafting of Canada's criminal laws in some 60 years.

A special 27-member Commons-Senate committee is expected to start work next week on three contentious questions, hanging, whipping and lotteries.

Another and more technical issue, the plea of insanity as a criminal defence, will be studied by a royal commission which the government plans to establish this session.

Meanwhile, the Commons resumed study Friday of the code revision and worked through 43 of the 753 clauses in which the criminal law has been consolidated. Most of the day was spent discussing laws dealing with sex offences, corruption of morals and disorderly conduct.

AVOID CONTROVERSY

All parties have agreed to postpone consideration of topics likely to provoke prolonged debate until after less contentious subjects are approved. Under that agreement, the House Friday postponed consideration of clauses dealing with indecent assault, incest and the manufacture, distribution and possession of obscene objects and crime comics.

During study of sex offences, F. D. Shaw (SC—Red Deer) proposed an increase to 10 from four years in the maximum sentence for illegal sexual intercourse with feeble-minded or insane women.

He said the crime is not much different from rape, for which hanging is the maximum penalty.

However, his proposed amendment to the code was defeated by a standing vote of 31 to 25. Justice Minister Garson supported the proposal and all parties except the Social Credit group split on the question.

The code revision boosts to five years from four the maximum sentence for the crime. The amendment would have increased the penalty to 10 years.

Mr. Garson said a judge is not required to impose the maximum sentence, but a 10-year maximum would give him an indication of how seriously Parliament views the offence.

INCREASE USELESS

Angus MacInnis (CCF—Vancouver Kingsway) said the increase would do no good in reducing the incidence of such crimes. Offenders were the type who would not consider the penalty before committing the crime.

Referring to the penalty for rape, Rev. E. G. Hansell (SC—Macleod) objected to the proposed removal of the death penalty for rape in the code revision. He said it should be retained in cases of rape of children up to five or six years of age.

Mr. Garson said the death penalty for rape is being removed because it never has been carried out. Rape of children would be a clear indication of mental unbalance in the offender and would be dealt with under a different section of the code.

Under the new code, the maximum penalty for rape would be life imprisonment or whipping or both.

Style Changed In Valentines But Sentiment Remains Same

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Those who like to celebrate St. Valentine's Day with dancing and merry-making have had to move their plans ahead a little this year.

The great day for sentimentalists falls on Sunday, and many of the usual parties are being held Saturday night. If they haven't taken note of the Sunday date a lot of sentimental missives are going to be delivered a day late.

The lads and lassies of all ages who exchange valentines nowadays don't send many of the lush, old-fashioned type. Some of the old-time cards, cherished in families for generations, were massive works of lace and tassels, heavily scented and embossed in gilt.

Typical cards exchanged 100 years ago were ornate affairs of imitation gold and lace trimming with a fancy tassel, a fat cupid with bow and arrow and the words "I love you; think of me." Another showed an angel playing a harp with the words "I fondly, truly love thee."

SENTIMENT REMAINS

But if the style has changed, the sentiment is the same, even if the traditional Valentine cards nowadays are mixed with a host of comic or even cutting verse. The annual observance gives the bashful suitor a chance of putting his message across and if the cards had outlasted their usefulness they would not be sent in such numbers.

St. Valentine himself never wrote any love songs, but Charles Lamb called him "the great immortal go-between," and under his banner sentimental love has blossomed for centuries.

Actually there were several saint called Valentine. The one who is most closely connected with the centuries-old tradition is the saint who was beheaded in Rome Feb. 14, 270 AD. He is traditionally believed to have been a matchmaker who secretly heard the marriage vows of young lovers, thereby incurring the wrath of the emperor who had banned wartime marriage.

The association with St. Valentine was probably purely accidental, but through the years the tradition of St. Valentine's Day developed as a springtime lovers' festival. Ever since, the sending of more or less anonymous love tokens has been an annual event.

Week's Stock Market Trading Resembles 3-Ring Circus

By BOB JOHNSTONE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Watching this week's stock market activity was like trying to see everything in a three-ring circus.

Montreal activity followed a steady pattern as it gained steadily, but Toronto and New York observers had to keep track of several simultaneous performances.

In the Toronto industrial rise, papers, steels and foods led off Monday as they sparked a general drive. Then refining oils took the lead and put the group in its highest position since September, 1952.

Although profit-taking followed, banks were ahead with sufficient strength to carry the group for another advance as it passed the mid-week mark still rising.

Thursday was slower although the banks were slightly ahead and liquors broke a recent quiet spell to bolster the index. Friday's industrial session was slow.

OILS GAIN

Refining oils gained and a few isolated moves produced several good changes but the week's trading showed few features.

Western oils were steadily stronger. Golds and base metals were strong for the first time this year.

Geco and Consolidated Howey surged ahead as speculative interest centred in the new Manitouwadge lake base metal area in northern Ontario. Geco, listed on the Toronto exchange less than a month ago at $6.50, closed Friday at $12.

The Friday - to - Friday Toronto comparisons showed industrials up 1.90 at 327.58, golds up 2.98 at 74.36, base metals up 1.71 at 140.70 and western oils up 1.46 at 95.37.

NEW YORK RISE

New York's activity was on a rising note with aircrafts in demand. A mid-week slump was averted as railroad strengthened slightly. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up 20 cents at $114.90.

Montreal's industrial activity was steady and upward. Steels were strong early, then papers and utilities took the lead and utilities and metals were leading at the close.

The Friday-to-Friday comparison showed banks up .26 at 37.76, utilities up .8 at 97.7, industrials up .6 at 187.3, combined up .6 at 158.4, papers up .680 at 831.79 and golds up 2.32 at 54.31.

"Distinguished Roll"

TORONTO (CP) — Governor-General Massey said Friday night no school in Canada has "a more distinguished roll of old boys to inspire their successors" than has Upper Canada College. He addressed more than 400 of the school's old boys on the 125th celebration of Founder's Day.

Situation Improved

KITCHENER (CP)—Unemployment in the Kitchener - Waterloo area shows signs of slackening off, a report of the unemployment insurance commission disclosed Friday. C. W. Boyer, manager, said there were 1,945 unplaced male workers and 868 unplaced women in January. December figures for a five-week period, were 2,004 unplaced male workers and 1,440 unplaced women.

Carved Stones Found

KINGSTON (CP) — Mysterious carved stones have been discovered five miles east of here. Wallace Havelock Robb, Canadian poet and historical novelist, says that in his wooded retreat known as Abbey Dawn, he has found several stones with carvings similar to those found in Mexico. But no one knows whence they came.

TOMB OF THE UNKNOWN SOLDIER—Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent stands at attention before a flag of the French Republican guard of honor platoon after placing a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at the Arc De Triomphe. With Mr. St. Laurent are Jacques Gavini, France's Undersecretary of State, left, and Lt. Gen. M. Zeller, military governor of Paris.

Woman Stands Trial For Shooting

HULL, Que. (CP)—Mrs. Therese Chalut, 36, Friday was committed for trial at the fall assizes on a charge of attempted murder. Her alleged victim, unable to testify because of a bullet wound in the face, accused her in a written statement given at a court hearing in his hospital room.

Part of the brief preliminary hearing by Judge Rolland Millar was held in the hospital where Leo Regimbald, 33-year-old laborer, has been confined since he was wounded in the mouth and jaw last month.

In written answers to questions, Regimbald said he awakened in a shack six miles north of here, to find Mrs. Chalut standing over him with a rifle. His face was covered with blood from a jaw wound.

RIFLE HELD CLOSE

After Regimbald gave his written estimony, Judge Millar moved court back to the Hull courthouse where Dr. Jean Marie Roussel, Montreal medico-legal expert, testified that the shot was fired from a rifle held about six inches from his face.

Dr. Roussel said he is "almost sure" Regimbald could not have wounded himself.

Have No Law Against Women Raping Men

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada has no law against women raping men because such a thing has never happened, Justice Minister Garson said Friday.

When such crimes occur, he said will be time enough to consider a law against them.

During a study of a revision of the Criminal Code, Harold E. Winch (CCF—Vancouver East) noted that the law on rape refers only to men.

"I am not being facetious," he said. "I am very serious."

He had not heard of any cases in Canada, but in the United States in the last year there had been "case after case" where girls forced men to sexual intercourse by threatening them with a gun.

Mr. Garson agreed it is a serious question.

"However, I must say that I have reached the years of discretion in Canada without ever having heard of such a case as this until this very minute. . ."

BIG 3 WIN VICTORY IN BERLIN - DULLES

Drastic Rail Rate Revision Rejected By Transport Bd.

OTTAWA (CP)—The board of transport commissioners today rejected a railway bid for a drastic revision of Canada's rail rate setup aimed at multi-million dollar increases in the country's annual freight bill. The board threw out almost all of several parts in a railway application, and it added a warning that the series of post-war freight rate hoists has brought the law of diminishing returns into play on rail revenues. Key point of the 40,000-word judgment, one of the most important in Canadian rail history, was the turndown of a proposal sponsored by the Canadian Pacific Railway that it be allowed a specified annual rate of earnings on a "rate base" calculated on its net rail investment.

In line with that decision, the board dismissed an application for an immediate nine-per-cent general increase in freight tolls, amounting to around $38,000,000 a year—based on the proposed new system.

The "rate base-rate of return" method, used by regulatory bodies for some public utilities, would have been a sharp departure from Canada's long-standing system for the establishment of railway charges.

CPR IS YARDSTICK

At present, the board uses the CPR as a "yardstick" for rates but allows rates on the basis of the current financial needs of that company, rather than laying down permissive earnings on its investment in rail property as the application sought.

The one point in the railway application which the board granted partially was that of establishing a net investment figure for that company's rail holdings, but it emphasized that this was not to be used as a rate base.

After its own audit of CPR books, the board set the figure at $1,140,000,000 as at the end of 1951, and as $1,176,000,000 at the end of 1952. The CPR had sought to have $1,146,000,00 named as the investment—and rate base—figure as at the end of 1951.

The board said today it will use its figure as one—and it spelled "ONE" in capital letters—of the final tests in considering the reasonableness of future rate levels.

The CPR had asked that, in addition to setting up the rate base system, the board should declare the company is entitled to a return of at least 6½ per cent on the rail investment. It now earns something under four per cent.

ESTIMATES VARY

Estimates as to the impact of a 6½-per-cent return on freight rates varied during a series of hearings since mid-1952. The highest was 33 per cent, on top of post-war increases that have reached a cumulative 98 per cent on the traffic to which they apply. This traffic

Drew Warns Depression Real Danger

MONTREAL (CP)—Hon. George Drew said today that Canada may be hit by depression if industry does not strive for "utmost efficiency" and research to compete against such rising world trade powers as Japan and Germany.

"We are just entering one of the most highly competitive periods of international trade in the world's history," the Progressive Conservative leader said in a speech prepared for delivery before the opening meeting of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association.

Germany was rebuilding its industrial plants at a "most fantastic pace." So was Japan. But where Japan before the Second World War produced "tawdry" goods at "extremely low prices," she now was a producer of the "very finest quality of products in many lines."

MUST PULL UP SOX

"Surely these are unchallengeable facts," said Mr. Drew. "If they are, then the time has come for every one of us to pull up our socks and get a move on.

"There is no easy course. We are facing competition from nations whose work is dedicated to national survival. There is only one way we can meet it, and we can meet it. That is by industrial, agricultural and other types of research, along with the utmost efficiency, which will give to our people a higher productive capacity per hour than those with whom we are competing."

Mr. Drew said Canada can prevent a repetition of the terrible crash of the 1930s. But current developments presented a challenge to business leaders. Efficiency had to become synonymous with loyalty.

U.S. Reducing Butter Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Ezra Benson announced today the government support price for butter, now about 66 cents a pound, will be reduced about eight cents effective April 1.

He said corresponding reductions will be made at the same time in support prices for cheese and dried skim milk.

At a press conference, Benson announced dairy price supports for the marketing year beginning April 1 will be set at 75 per cent of parity. This is the minimum level permitted by law. The present support rate is 90 per cent of parity.

Parity is a standard for measuring farm prices, declared by law to be fair to farmers in relation to prices they pay.

The eight-cent cut in support prices for butter should, in the normal course of trading, lead to a drop of about the same amount in the retail price of butter.

The government has accumulated more than $350,000,000 worth of surplus butter, cheese and dried milk under price support operations.

New Damage To Guns On Carrier

Lack of Privacy Blamed For Wave Of Navy Discontent

LONDON (AP)— Sabotage to ack-ack guns on Britain's 36,800-ton aircraft carrier Eagle was confirmed by the admiralty today. An admiralty spokesman said the incident presumably is "part of a wave of hooliganism" which has resulted in more than 14 cases of malicious damage aboard British warships in the last year.

He said some crew members may have become "fed up" by the crowding of modern ships with electronic and other push - button equipment and the subsequent reduction in living quarters.

"Lack of privacy may be another cause of discontent," he said. "There is no suggestion of organized sabotage by Communists."

GEAR TOSSED IN SEA

Reports from Gibraltar, where the Eagle arrived Sunday on manoeuvres, said electronic gear controlling anti-aircraft guns had been thrown overboard and that telephones in the bulkheads had been damaged.

The admiralty spokesman said this damage had occurred 10 days ago just before the Eagle sailed from Portland, England. He denied reports suggesting sabotage was responsible for two other recent incidents aboard the Eagle—loss of a jet fighter from a deck in rough weather and flooding from a sprinkler system.

Two saluting guns of the Eagle were "spiked" recently and last month a stoker mechanic was sentenced to 15 months in jail for smashing engine - room gauges. These incidents were reported previously.

A London Daily Mail dispatch from the Eagle said: "All is not well in Britain's mightiest carrier and the reason, says officers and men, is you can't love a ship full of gadgets."

St. Catharines Win Surprise At 'Spiel

TORONTO (CP) — Rinks from Parry Sound, Brockville and Chicago chalked up high winning scores of 14 in the first-round draw for the Royal York Trophy as the 27th annual Ontario bonspiel got under way today.

Biggest surprise of the opening day's play at four local curling rinks here was the 12-2 win of B. Nokes' St. Catharines rink over Andy Grant of Toronto Royal Canadians.

A FLURRY OF EXCITEMENT drew a crowd of spectators back Sunday to the scene of Thursday night's disastrous Loblaw store fire when part of the front wall fell in as some curious people wandered about the ruins. Ice that until Sunday had cemented the bricks firm, melted in the mild weather and set the bricks loose. Firemen with their aerial ladder knocked down the wall before it injured someone who ignored the keep out signs.

Force Reds To Reveal Intentions

Must Keep Military Positions Strong In Europe Still

BERLIN —(AP)— United States officials said today Russia's determination to keep her military positions in Europe means the United States must maintain sizable forces on the continent for a long time.

Smoking out Soviet Military intentions in Germany and Austria, as evidenced by their refusal to roll back power at any point, is regarded by U.S state secretary Dulles as one of the most important achievements of Western diplomacy at the Big Four conference.

The U.S. group here is also convinced that this finding will clear away any confusion and uncertainty in the Pentagon over what America's future military policy should be and will result in planning for maintenance of strong U.S. forces in Europe.

U.S. officials feel this is one of the results of the diplomatic and propaganda battle with Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov here on European issues, which they believe the United States, Britain and France have won.

Today the Western three went into a new secret session with Molotov to press for a showdown on his Korean and Indo-China policies.

MEASURE OF RESULTS

But even if there should be agreement on major conference issues, the real results of the meeting will be measured also in the effect on what the great powers now do about Europe.

One major consequence is the impact on U. S. military policy. Comments today implied that after the Malenkov government took over in Russia and began making friendly gestures, there was pressure in Washington to level off the U.S. military burden because of decreased danger.

Now the conviction of U.S. officials in Berlin is that Russia's decision to hold on in Germany and Austria makes it essential for the United States to maintain a high level of forces here indefinitely—regardless of any superiority at-

12 U.S. Bombers In Non-Combat Indo-China Zone

TOKYO (AP)—At least 12 American B-26 medium bombers and 250 U.S airmen are based at two coastal airfields in Indo - China, Gen. O P Weyland, U. S Far East air forces commander, said today.

Weyland, who returned Thursday from an inspection tour of the war-torn land, emphasized that the Americans are "non-combatants and act solely as technical advisers and expert mechanics" for planes "applied as a part of the regular military assistance program to the French forces."

He said in a written statement to the press that a dozen B-26s were delivered to Indo-China "on the first shipment and more departed Saturday." He did not say how many more.

NOT NEAR COMBAT AREA

The technicians and mechanics "are not in or near a major combat area," Weyland asserted. "They are well housed and provided for. There is little or no risk to them physically."

He added that the men were "assigned to the job in the same manner that any other air force assignment would be made, although some may have requested the assignment."

The general predicted that French-Viet Namese forces battling the Reds will improve their military situation "in the near future."

4 Of 130 Fired As Disloyal

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States treasury department has informed Congress that out of 130 "security" dismissals or force resignations in 1953, four were found to be "disloyal persons" under standards since scrapped. The information was given to the House of Representatives appropriations committee, which published it today, by Elbert P. Tuttle, acting security officer for the department, which has about 77,000 employees.

The committee was considering the department's budget request. A man doesn't have to be disloyal to be classed as a security risk," Tuttle said.

In a separate report on the customs service, whose 8,000 employees supervise imports into the United States, it was disclosed that six persons were dismissed last year as security risks. Customs commissioner David B. Strubinger said all six appeared to have had "contact" with Communists

CONTACT INDICATED

"At least the records indicate there was a contact, or there had been a previous membership to such an extent we felt it was a definite security risk," he said.

Tuttle gave the information about the treasury department security dismissals under repeated demands from Representative J. V. Gary (Dem., Va.).

A number of Democrats in Congress have protested that Republicans have sought to give the impression that most of the 2,200 per-

French Bathyscaphe Goes 13,287 Feet Into Atlantic

DAKAR, French West Africa (Reuters)—A French Navy bathyscaphe today plunged 13,287 feet down into the Atlantic, deeper than man has ever gone before. The balloon-shaped craft was manned by two French naval officers. Its plunge of nearly 2½ miles is more than 3,000 feet deeper than Prof. Auguste Piccard's previous record, set up in the Mediterranean last summer.

The two officers were towed in their experimental craft 160 miles out in the Atlantic from this French West African port. The ocean bed is about 14,700 feet below the surface there.

The bathyscaphe is not attached to an escort ship by cable like a bathysphere. It is completely autonomous.

The French craft—which was also designed by Piccard—has a large gasoline tank with a steel observation cabin seven feet across attached to the bottom.

The sides of this steel sphere are about 3½ inches thick. The whole thing weighs about 10 tons and costs about $25,000.

4 Men Killed, Order Inquest

CALGARY (CP) — An inquest has been ordered into the death of four men killed in a two-car collision Saturday night during a light snowfall.

The city's worst traffic tragedy claimed the lives of three soldiers and one civilian and sent seven persons to hospital. Two are in serious condition and one has been released.

The inquest will likely open today.

The dead: Elmer Ernest, 25, of St. Catharines; Donald E. Kelly, 18, of Annaconda, Mont.; Richard Henderson, 19, of Heffley Creek, B.C.; and Joseph Christenson, 24, of Calgary.

Ernest, Kelly and Henderson were recruits who had been in the army since December. They were stationed in Calgary.

Police said the four soldiers were riding in a 1941-model car driven by Remington on the Banff highway. The car skidded on a curve and slammed broadside into a late-model car driven by Joseph Christenson.

Cars Collide, 2 Dead, 9 Hurt

DASHWOOD (CP)—An automobile loaded with children crashed head-on into another car here Saturday night, killing a man and a woman and injuring nine persons.

Milton Ratz, 60, of RR 2, Dashwood died Sunday. Mrs. Gwen Simpson, 42, of Leaside died shortly after the crash.

Mr. Ratz was driving Mrs Lena Dick, her five children and Eddie Burford, 7, of Toronto, home from a funeral when the crash occurred. Richard Simpson, 48, the dead woman's husband, was driving his wife and three-year-old daughter, Linda, to Grand Bend, where they intended to settle.

The Burford boy and three other Dick children were released from hospital after treatment for cuts and bruises.

Collective Security

TORONTO (CP) — NATO has provided the collective security sought by all peace-loving nations since the early days of the old League of Nations at Geneva, R. A. Farquharson, director of NATO's information division, said today.

"It is the cheapest and most effective insurance policy yet devised against war," the Canadian newspaper man said in an address prepared for delivery to the Canadian Club.

Inspector Sent To Investigate Theft

TORONTO (CP) — Inspector Robert Wannell of the criminal investigation branch of the Ontario provincial police has been sent to investigate the alleged theft of materials from the highways department at Rockland, Ont., near Ottawa, police said today.

Donat Dubeau, a highway department patrolman, was suspended last week after an investigation allegedly showed that provincial highways department materials were used in the building of two houses for Dubeau.

Highways Minister Doucett said between $1,800 and $1,900 worth of logs and other materials were involved.

Police said the results of Inspector Wannell's investigation likely will be turned over to Charles Dubin, special prosecutor appointed to investigate irregularities at the Fort William branch of the highways department.

Freak Heat Wave May Set Record

TORONTO (CP)—A freak, mid-winter "heat wave" sent temperatures rising to record February heights in Ontario today. From the usually-cold north to the usually-chilly south residents doffed winter coats as they saw winter snows melt before their eyes.

Toronto may get its warmest Feb. 15 on record today. The Weather Man says it may go higher than the 50 degrees of Feb. 15, 1882.

Windsor is expected to hit the 55-degree mark also for its warmest Feb. 15 on record. Even White River recorded a fairly comfortable 35 above today.

Quebec was mild too and the weather bureau said the warm wave from the south will move into the Maritime provinces where temperatures have been around the freezing point.

Elsewhere the mercury level is pretty much normal for February.

Former Paratrooper Scheduled To Die

STRATFORD (CP) — Reuben Henry Norman, 27-year-old former Canadian army paratrooper who a year ago shot down 17-year-old Jean Marie Satchell on a downtown Stratford street, is scheduled to die shortly after midnight tonight on a scaffold in the courtyard of the Perth county jail here.

No word has been received from the Justice Department in Ottawa in reply to an appeal for executive clemency, but K. V Stratton, Norman's counsel, said there was still time for the government to act.

Norman was convicted for murder last Nov. 17 Defence counsel had entered a plea of insanity. Norman spent several months in the Ontario hospital for the criminally insane at Penetanguishene last summer. His counsel said during this time he experienced a spiritual conversion.

Lieut. Walter Ernst of the Salvation Army was with Norman until nine o'clock last night.

Alarmed Prairie Farm Unions Demanding Board Investigate Livestock Industry

OTTAWA (CP)—Prairie farm unions, "alarmed" by falling meat prices, called on the government today to set up a board to investigate Canada's livestock industry.

The unions, headed by J. L. Phelps, of Saskatoon, urged also that a probe be made into the reasons for the "fantastic" post-war rise in farm machinery prices.

Fertilizer prices also were too high and the government should ask the main producer, Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co., either to lower prices voluntarily or be subject to a combines investigation.

The Prairie farm group, in a submission to cabinet, said that in connection with meat, there is a "fundamental flaw" in the government's price support program. In most cases it benefitted packers and processors and not producers.

"The grave situation today is that, while the producer of livestock is saddled with an over 50-per-cent loss in income, the packing industry is constantly increasing its profit."

Meanwhile, a board, to be set up by the government, should find out: The [illegible] livestock prices; the measure of "disparity" between the price paid by the consumer and the price received by the producer; existing trade practices in stockyards; possibility of establishing a board of livestock commissioners to regulate the trade.

France will receive $394,000 worth of fragmentation bombs and will share with Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Britain in shipments of $4,471,000 worth of aircraft radio compasses.

Doctors Amazed Baby Survives

HALIFAX (CP)—Doctors at the Children's Hospital here said today they are "amazed" that a one-pound, nine - ounce premature baby they are treating survived for 15 days before being placed in an incubator.

The baby, son of Mr. and Mrs. LEO Beaver, was born Jan. 26 in an isolated home at Indian Harbor without medical attention.

The baby was first wrapped in blankets and kept warm under a feather mattress. During the day he slept near the kitchen stove. During the night, he slept with his mother. He was fed tiny portions of prepared milk, diluted with warm water.

Last Wednesday the baby was taken to a doctor who ordered it to hospital.

The baby's present condition is described as "hopeful."

Theatre Wonder Weds Suzanne Cloutier

LONDON (CP) — Peter Ustinov, known as the boy wonder of the British theatre, was married today to French-Canadian actress Suzanne Cloutier, daughter of Queen's Printer Edmond Cloutier of Ottawa.

The marriage took place quietly at Chelsea registry office with only a few friends in attendance.

Miss Cloutier, 24, recently had a leading role in Ustinov's latest play, "No Sign of the Dove." This had a rude reception from most critics and was withdrawn after 11 performances.

Ustinov, 32, formerly was married to actress Isolde Denham. Their marriage was dissolved in 1950. Miss Cloutier was awarded a divorce a week ago against Dr. Richer la Fleche, a Montreal doctor she married in Ottawa in August, 1946.

Report One Woman Arrested Holds Key To Baby Racket

MONTREAL (CP) — Police, continuing their investigation in what they have described as a $3,000,000 black market in baby adoptions, said today a 40-year-old woman now being held could give them enough information to reach from top to bottom in the racket.

"If she talks we will have enough evidence to reach from top to bottom," an investigator said.

The woman's name was not disclosed. She is one of five arrested for questioning in connection with operations of a ring described by police as one which sold Montreal-born babies to couples in various parts of the United States.

There were reports that police also were looking for a middle-aged Outremont woman who might qualify as the "master-mind" in several phases of the ring's operations.

Two Montreal lawyers, Herman Buller, 38, and Louis Glazer, 51, have pleaded not guilty to charges laid against them and are scheduled to appear for preliminary hearing Feb. 19. Both are free on bail.

Buller was charges with falsifying entries in a birth certificate and of giving advice in connection with an indictable offence. His bail was set at $2,000.

Glazer was charged on two counts on conspiracy in connection with birth registrations, two counts of falsification and forgery and one count of uttering. He was released on bail of $950.

Two of the three women arrested were released following questioning.

The one woman held was described by police as second-in-command among women operatives in the adoption racket.

U.S. "Underground Pentagon" Completed Inside Mountain, A-Bomb Protected

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U. S. defence high command's atom age "underground Pentagon," built inside a mountain 65 miles from the national capital, is ready.

A defence department spokesman said today that the project which started three years ago to provide an alternate command post and communications centre if atomic attack should threaten or destroy the Pentagon headquarters is "100-per-cent completed."

The cost of blasting out the cavern under Rock Raven mountain, in Frederick county, Md., building housing for personnel above ground and installing communications equipment presumably reached the original estimate of $35,000,000.

Available information indicates a maintenance force of military personnel is at what the defence department calls its "joint supplemental communications facility."

Jurisdiction of the facility, which includes the former national guard training site of Ft. Ritchie as well as the man - made cavern five miles from the fort, is under the defence department. Its use in wartime would be by all three services for central direction of defence and counterattack.

JOINT FINANCING

The underground Pentagon was financed through army, navy and air force funds, the spokesman said.

Although the spokesman said that the project now is complete, no details were given to show whether this also included completion of connected projects—such as the construction of a radio transmitter station at Greencastle, Pa., and a receiver station at Sharpsburg, Md., and the laying of underground cables to provide telephone and telegraph connection with trans-continental trunk line cables which cross the Allegheny mountain ridge some miles from the site. Ft. Ritchie is located almost on the Maryland - Pennsylvania border.

The emergency command post is linked to the normal communications facilities of the army, navy and air force by five micro-wave radio stations built in or near Washington.

Queen Opens Australian Parliament

Population Doubles In Canberra For Big Occasion

CANBERRA —(AP)—Queen Elizabeth, wearing her Coronation gown, opened the 3rd session of the 20th Australian parliament today in a 15-minute ceremony rich in tradition and color.

The Queen wore a high tiara diamond necklace, earrings and a bracelet.

She had driven from Government House through thousands of cheering people who flocked from surrounding districts to double for the day the capital's normal 30,000 population.

The opening ceremony took place in the chamber of the Senate. Members of the House of Representatives crowded in when the Queen said:

"Mr. Clerk of the Senate, please command the Usher of the Black Rod to let members of the House of Representatives know that I desire their attendance in the Senate chamber forthwith."

Then the Queen, addressing both houses, opened Parliament, the first time in Australian history that the reigning monarch has done so.

The ceremony was broadcast throughout Australia and during it the Queen remained in the glare of powerful lights for movie, television and newspaper cameramen.

ESCORTED BY DUKE

She entered the Senate chamber escorted by the Duke of Edinburgh in an admiral's tropical white uniform.

She moved across the scarlet-carpeted chamber to a wooden throne from which her late father George VI in 1927, as Duke of York, opened parliament.

In a firm, clear voice the Queen read the speech, in which she resolved that "under God I shall not only rule but serve."

During the six-minute speech she thanked Australians for the warm welcome they have accorded her and her husband.

PRESENTED TO QUEEN

At the end of the speech, the sitting was suspended and members of the Senate and House of Representatives and their wives were presented to the Queen and the duke.

Later the royal couple left to review 6,000 members of the Australian services in parade outside Parliament House.

Rain poured down a few minutes before the parade and stopped two minutes after the parade ended.

Bad weather caused cancellation of an air review.

Sparkman Backs George Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator John Sparkman (Dem. Ala.) came out today for a substitute offered by Senator Walter George (Dem. Ga.) for a proposed constitutional amendment to limit treaty powers.

Sparkman said in an interview he believes George has "put into simple words" what Senator John Bricker (Rep. Ohio) sought to do in an amendment proposal which has been criticized vigorously by President Eisenhower.

"The George amendment will give assurance to those who actually fear that a treaty might infringe upon constitutional rights," Sparkman said.

George planned conferences today with Senator William Knowland of California, the Republican floor leader, and possibly with Bricker on proposed changes in his substitute. The Senate resumes discussion of the constitutional change today, with George predicting that a showdown vote may be reached by Thursday.

RCAF Plane Back At Base

PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, Man. (CP)—An RCAF jet plane has returned here after a training flight which saw it start off for North Bay and land at St. Louis.

The RCAF base said the plane flew back from St. Louis during the week-end after navigation instruments were repaired.

The plane was guided into St. Louis Friday night after reporting itself lost. FO. N. L. Harrison of Toronto, the pilot, said his navigational aids had gone on the blink. The other crew member was FO. G. G. MacLeod of Montreal.

Meanwhile, in Kansas City, Mo., the central air defence command said Sunday the jet "could" have been the plane that set off an alert of U.S. defence command fighters.

A public information officer declined to say whether the Canadian jet was definitely the aircraft intercepted by fighter planes.

Maj. Charles Harris said:

"An unknown aircraft was in the air defence system at the time the Canadian plane was in the central air defence force region. Fighter interceptors were scrambled to intercept the unknown. This is common procedure."

Drastic Rail Rate

is roughly half of the railways' $1,000,000,000-a-year freight business.

However, the company had offered to settle for nine per cent at this time if the rate base principle were adopted.

The government-owned Canadian National Railways took a neutral stand on the question of adopting the rate base theory at hearings before the board. However, it said it would accept any rate increases granted by the board as the result of the application.

The application was made by the Railway Association of Canada, of which all the major lines are members.

CLAIM RATES TOO HIGH

On the opposing side, the application was fought by eight provincial governments, all except Ontario and Quebec. They claimed that rising rates were pricing the railways out of the freight market in the face of competition.

The board's decision was unanimous among members of a three-man panel headed by Mr. Justice J. D. Kearney, chief commissioner.

In a series of "supplementary observations" after its main judgment, the board noted that early in 1953 it expressed concern about the possibility of the railways pricing themselves out of the market and of railway labor pricing itself out of employment.

CITES DECLINING TRAFFIC

Looking at declining rail traffic in 1953, the board said in today's judgment:

"We now are more strongly than ever of the opinion that the long succession of general freight rate increases, mainly due to added cost of labor which is the largest single factor and to increased costs of materials, has brought about a loss of traffic by the railways to competing modes of transport . . .

"Thus the law of diminishing returns is now, in the inexorable economic sense, beginning to assert itself.

"We are convinced therefore that, unless the several underlying conditions adversely affecting the railway industry in general change markedly for the better, means other than general rate increases imposed on the basis of the past will have to be found in the future if the railways of Canada are to be maintained in healthy operating condition."

Child 2, Poses Double Problem For Doctors

TORONTO (CP) — Joanne Simard, 2, posed a double problem to doctors when she was brought to the Hospital for Sick Children here. Not only was she a "blue baby," but her heart was on the wrong side of her body.

Today the little girl from Moonbeam, a tiny community 75 miles northwest of Timmins, is recovering from a successful operation thanks to a technique a team of Toronto doctors helped to develop.

The malformed hearts of "blue babies" cannot pump enough blood to the lungs to pick up the vital oxygen needed by the body. This deficiency results in blue fingernails, purple lips, bluish complexion and sometimes death.

FIND FAULTY VALVE

The problem was to find the obstruction cutting down the flow of blood to Joanne's heart.

Dr. John Keith and Dr. William Mustard head a team of doctors working on blue baby research.

An x-ray machine that takes pictures from two angles was used to trace the action of the heart. A solution containing a minute amount of iodine was injected into Joanne's blood stream.

Doctors found that one of the calves of her heart was not opening properly to let the blood flow in. The operation to facilitate the flow was performed Feb. 3.

Temperance Conclave Urged For Sarnia

SARNIA (CP) — An Ontario Temperance Federation spokesman today suggestive that the Sarnia Ministerial Association might adopt a "temperance conclave" as a method of combatting the forthcoming vote to allow a cocktail lounge in nearby Point Edward.

Dr. Albert Johnson, general secretary of the federation, warned Sarnia ministers that the move to introduce cocktail bars in the village was a part of a strategy which would eventually bring them to Sarnia.

Dr. Johnson said the alcohol problem could not be beaten by individual action. A united effort must be made, he declared and warned that "the penalty of our failure to secure adequate united temperance action will be paid by future generations."

omic fire power may give the Americans.

Neither side was optimistic that a decision would be taken at this conference on steps to end fighting in the Far East.

The conference agreed Sunday to adjourn Thursday. State Secretary Dulles of the U.S. demanded that Soviet foreign minister Molotov sign an Austrian treaty of independence by then or admit further talk was useless.

Molotov again insisted that any Austrian treaty permit Big Four occupation troops to remain in Austria until a German peace treaty is concluded, something obviously years away, and that Austria be banned forever from an alliance with the West.

The West again flatly refused these Soviet terms and Molotov, as the day's chairman, announced the parley will end Thursday.

ATOMIC SPADEWORK

The ministers then will have met for 23 days during which solutions of the German and Austrian problems have been brought no nearer, the possibility has been raised of negotiations with Communist China toward peace in Korea and Indo-China, and Dulles and Molotov have done some spadework toward negotiations on President Eisenhower's proposed atomic pool for peaceful purposes.

The Western foreign ministers have asked Molotov to meet them again in Geneva April 15 to take up the Korean question. The Russian has been considering this, but still with one major objective in view:

If Russia goes to such a conference, it was indicated, Red China first must be called to a seat.

The United States, with support from France and Britain, refuses to give China big-time status. Hope of agreement appeared to lie in finding some middle way by which the Big Four could talk about Korea and Indo-China with Peiping's Chou En-lai but without admitting him to a discussion of general world tensions.

France's Georges Bidault, pressed at home for some early settlement of the wasting Indo-Chinese war, would very much like to see an opening develop here.

WANT CONFERENCE

The Western trio want the Big Four at Geneva to organize a Korean peace conference. If that parley succeeded, it could take up Indo-China.

There was one strange development in the discussions Sunday. Since the conference began, the Western delegations have claimed that Molotov's proposals, particularly his plan for an all-European security pact, clearly are aimed at destroying the yet unborn European army as well as the steadily growing North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Molotov singled out Eden in the closing moments Sunday night, saying the Briton "reads too many English newspapers which are of the opinion that the Soviet Union insists on the dissolution of the North Atlantic Treaty.

"We ask you not to believe this," Molotov declared. Later a Soviet press spokesman added: "The Soviet delegation has not proposed this."

In the West, nobody knew what either Russian meant.

Lumber Industry Said Losing Out

MONTREAL (CP)—K. O Roos of Tee Lake, Que., president of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, said today that despite 12 of the most prosperous years Canada has known, the lumber industry has been sharing less and less in an expanding market.

Addressing the association's 46th annual convention, Mr. Roos said there was a record production last year of lumber. But because of falling overseas markets and less demand for defence construction, stockpiling had left the industry "in a somewhat vulnerable position."

W. J. LeClair, secretary-manager, told the convention that any further increases in freight rates will result in a rash of financial failures in the lumber trade.

In his report he said freight rates already are at a "crippling level."

Father Suffers Severe Burns

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — William R. Walker, 27, was critically burned Sunday when he fought his way through the flaming kitchen of his home to rescue his two children.

Hospital authorities said 50 per cent of his skin was burned.

Nine-month-old Thomas Wayne Walker suffered burns to his arms, neck and face and is in serious condition. Edward Graham Walker 2, escaped with only a minor burn.

Mrs. Betty Walker, 19, an expectant mother, said they were awakened by screams of the baby whose crib was in the kitchen where the fire started. Mr. Walker told her to go outside and then ran to the kitchen.

He rescued the baby, handed it to his 15-year-old sister-in-law, Marion Charlton, and went back barefoot and in his night attire for Edward. Marion and another girl staying with her broke a window and escaped.

Black was charged following a collision February 5 on Lindsay St. S. with a car driven by Vincent Duke, Lindsay.

Sgt. Gordon Eberts testified that Black had difficulty standing and appeared at that time to be asleep on his feet. Chief John Hunter also said Black was drunk.

His car was impounded and his license suspended for three months.

Slessor Urges U.S.-Britain Declaration On Atomic War

LONDON —(Reuters)— Marshal of the RAF Sir John Slessor, former British air chief of staff, suggests that to end aggression in Europe the United States and Britain should undertake to use atom and hydrogen bombs on any aggressor. "No one will force a major war if he knows that to do so will bring the annihilating force of atomic air power on his head," he said Sunday night in a broadcast speech.

Considering the problem of divided Germany, Slessor said there is not the smallest chance of reaching agreement with the Communists by international negotiations.

"We should take the initiative and borrow something of their own technique of the fait accompli," he said.

Among the proposals he put forward was the withdrawal of British and U.S. troops from Europe, except Berlin, after West Germany had been rearmed and the Anglo-American declaration on atomic war had been signed.

EXTEND TREATY

Slessor suggested the 1948 Brussels treaty, between Britain, Holland, France, Belgium and Luxembourg, should be extended to include the United States, Canada and West Germany.

Britain and the United States should attach a protocol to their signatures containing a solemn undertaking that, in the event of aggression, the aggressor would be subjected to the full weight of Anglo-American air power, he said.

"Then as soon as this new extended Brussels treaty is signed we should formally invite Russia, Poland and Czechoslovakia to adhere to it.

"If they refuse—as they inevitably would in the first instance—we should say: All right, then you remain subject to its sanctions, but you do not get the advantage of its safeguards."

Will Receive St. Laurent On Famous Hill

By WILLIAM STEWART

ROME (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent will be received today at the Campidoglio, Rome's ancient city hall on Capitoline hill where legend has it that the wolf suckled Romulus and Remus, founders of Rome.

The Canadian leader, here on a six-weeks world tour, will be presented with a tiny statuette of the Roman wolf.

Sunday night he was host at a dinner at the Canadian embassy for Italian premier Mario Scelba and members of his new government. The dinner came at the end of a day in which the Canadian leader heard mass at a church near his hotel and spend several hours touring Vatican City.

POPE TOO ILL

The Pope still was too ill to receive the prime minister, who called at the pontiff's special quarters with his son, Jean-Paul, and daughter, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, and Canadian ambassador Pierre Dupuy.

Pro-secretaries of state at the Vatican gave the Canadian party the latest information on the state of the Pope's health.

The prime minister began the day with mass at the church of Santa Maria Degli Angeli. Afterward he drove across the vast cobbled square of St. Peter's and was admitted to the Vatican.

There he toured the many rooms, halls and galleries and saw the art treasures of the Vatican, shown to him by the director and assistant director of the Vatican Museums.

As the Canadian leader left St. Peter's crowds of tourists gathered on the steps applauded him.

HELPS PHOTOGRAPHER

He intervened when an Italian photographer tried but failed to take his picture. Plainclothes police bustled the photographer away but the prime minister went into the crowd after him and was photographed several times.

Earlier in the afternoon the prime minister visited former prime minister Alcide de Gasperi, government leader eight times after the Second World War and a visitor to Canada in 1951.

At a state dinner in honor of the Canadian leader Saturday night Premier Scelba said that Canada and Italy will work toward closer co-operation in economic and social fields.

In reply, the prime ministers expressed deep pleasure at being "in a capital city which has contributed so much to the progress of humanity and Christian civilization."

sons the administration says were dropped from the federal payroll last year under its security program were subversives. Democrats claim a big majority of the 2,200 resigned or were fired for reasons other than loyalty and that many of them simply transferred to other government agencies.

Gary said he objected to lumping all "security risks" together and including Communists, alcoholics and persons with other objectionable traits in the same category.

"There is a difference between a man being an alcoholic, which is a disease, and being a Communist, which is a traitor," he said.

He said he believes the people are entitled to know how many of the 2,200 "security" cases involved Communists. Instead, he added, the public has been given the impression that all 2,200 were disloyal, which "is not true."

NO COMPARISON

Tuttle said there was no way of comparing security dismissals under the Eisenhower administration with those under the Truman administration because "the whole basis of approach is different."

Under the Truman loyalty standards, he explained, disloyalty to the United States was the only grounds for dismissal.

The four "disloyal persons" he mentioned, he said, were found to be disloyal under the standards of the Truman program. The Eisenhower program did not take effect until last September.

The new procedure, he said, provides that "if a person is deemed to suffer from disability or frailty so that it is not clear that it is to the best interests of the United States to retain him because those frailities may cause him to be a risk in the future, he is subject to dismissal."

Dr. N. R. Chenoweth

Among First Women Become Doctors

One of the first women to practice medicine in Canada, and for a few of her later years associated with her only son, Dr. Rodger S. Chenoweth, 500 Homewood Ave., Dr. Nancy Rodger-Chenoweth died at Civic Hospital this morning.

Dr. Chenoweth was born near Belwood in Wellington county, 81 years ago, daughter of Alexander and Ann Rodger. She was graduated from the medical school of Trinity College which was afterwards merged in the University of Toronto. She was 21 years old at her graduation and was one of four or five young women who took the medical course.

After five years of practice of her profession at Menominee, Mich., Dr. Rodger-Chenoweth married the late Rev. George T. Chenoweth, who was engaged in missionary work of the Methodist Church. They chose for their field in Canada, what was then part of the Northwest Territory and now the province of Alberta, at Red Deer and Medicine Hat. After five years of devoted association in religion and medicine their partnership ended with the death of Mr. Chenoweth.

Dr. Chenoweth returned to Michigan and practiced for many years at Escanada, and finally joined her son here in 1947.

She carried on her medical practice for a time with her son, Dr. Roger S. Chenoweth, one of the rare engagements of mother and son together in medicine.

Announcement of the funeral wil be published later. Dr. Rodger Chenoweth is the only member of the family surviving.

Car Won't Go Has It A Driver?

LINDSAY (ENS)—Magistrate R. I. Moore today decided to take time to consider whether a driver can be convicted of being in care and control of his car while intoxicated if the car will not run.

The problem arose during the trial of Clarence Thornberry of Woodville in magistrate's court.

Constable Ralph Fountain told the court he had come upon Thornberry stalled in the centre of William St. Thornberry was behind the wheel and two passengers were attempting unsuccessfully to push it.

A. T. Lacey, counsel for Thornberry and Crown Attorney Lorne Jordan both cited cases to support their stands.

Cashed Cheque Put On Probation

LINDSAY (ENS) — Pleading guilty to uttering a cheque for $151, Harold Potts, 16, of Fox's corners, near Downeyville, was placed on suspended sentence for two years in court today.

According to the evidence, Potts picked up the cheque while driving with a United Livestock sales agent. He went to Lindsay and cashed it at a tobacco store. With the money he bought a car and a watch.

His counsel, H. E. Richardson, offered to make restitution to the store owner. On that condition and considering that it was the youth's first offence, Magistrate R. I. Moore granted the suspended sentence.

GREAT RIVER

The River Plate in South America, flowing 2,300 miles, was discovered by Dias de Solis in 1515.

NEARLY—The driver of this truck spent a few anxious seconds on Saturday when his truck skidded out of control on the icy roadway and headed for a creek. After tearing out a few feet of iron railing, the truck came to rest with one front wheel dangling in mid-air, about ten feet above the waters of the creek. Russell Emby, 36, of Campbellford, stepped out unhurt, and somewhat relieved. Damage to the truck was negligible. The accident occurred on Simpson St. in Campbellford. Chief Constable Charles Lockwood watches as a wrecker winches the truck back on the roadway.

Fifteen Million and Five Thousand . . .

. . . was Canada's official population on December 1, 1953. On December 1st, 1889 . . . the day Mr. A. E. Ames started in business . . . Canada's population was about four and a half million. Much has happened since then. Canada has grown and continues to grow.

It shows up in every part of the economy . . . our population is nearly three and a half times what it was in 1889 . . . Canada now is one of the world's important industrial nations and ranks fourth in world trade. Financial resources have increased tremendously . . . over five billion dollars are on deposit in savings accounts alone compared with only a few million sixty-five years ago.

This development requires energetic people to work in the woods . . . in mining . . . on farms . . . in industry . . . It requires initiative, courage and capital.

One of the important things about this growth is that Canadians, new and old, are beginning to realize just how rich this country is. And more and more Canadians who want to participate financially in its growth are doing so . . . by going into business for themselves . . . by lending their savings to industry or to public bodies through the purchase of bonds . . . by "buying into" well managed Canadian companies through the purchase of their shares.

When it comes to participating through the purchase of bonds and shares, we can do a good deal to help. We can help you "investigate before you invest" . . . If you like, we can help plan a programme to guide your future investment steps . . . we can help check the soundness of what you now have . . . and, of course, we can help with the actual purchase of securities. It's all part of our business.

Experienced, helpful people are available in any of our offices. You will be welcome whether you call in person or by mail.

By the way, we still have a few copies of a new, interesting booklet, "To Help You Share In Canada's Growth." If you would like one, just let us know.

Truck Escapes Ducking; Fender Damaged

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS) — Two minor accidents were reported in Campbellford over the weekend.

On Saturday afternoon, a truck travelling south on Simpson St. and driven by Russell Emby, 36, of Richard St. went into a skid and tore out a section of iron railing over a small bridge. The front wheels dropped over the edge of the bridge, about 10 feet above a small creek. The truck suffered only minor damage to the left front fender.

The truck stopped with the front wheels dangling in mid-air and Emby stepped out unhurt. Had the vehicle continued on, wrecking crews would have experienced some difficulty removing it from the creek bed, because there are sheer walls of cement along the bank.

About 7:10 p.m. Sunday, two cars collided on Queen St. James Jacobs was travelling north on Queen St. and Fred McArthur was travelling south, when the two vehicles met in a sideswipe.

The left rear of Jacobs' vehicle and the left front fender and door of McArthur's car were damaged. Police estimated the total damage at about $100.

Chief Constable Charles M. Lockwood investigated both mishaps.

Firemen Save House; Water Damage Heavy

COBOURG — (ENS) — Firemen saved the home of Keith Gardiner, near Grafton, from destruction by fire, early Sunday.

Sparks from an incinerator south of the house ignited the roof.

Damage from fire was slight, but a stuborn blaze in the attic required a large quantity of water to extinguish, with consequent water damage to the walls and ceiling of the main floor.

All furniture was removed and stored in the barn.

Decline In Aid and Trade Threatens Israel Economy

By FRANCIS OFNER

JERUSALEM — When Moshe Sharrett recently became Prime Minister of Israel, another leader of Mapai, the ruling Labor Party, who had previously been mentioned as a likely successor to the former premier, David Ben Gurion, was reported to have said jokingly: "I prefer that Ben Gurion, on his probable return, should 'save' the country from Sharrett rather than from myself."

Apocryphal as this story may be, it characterized the mood of some political circles here during the two months of party bargaining which preceded the establishment of the new government of Israel in the last week of January.

FULL REVERSAL

Today, however, popular evaluation of Mr. Sharrett's prospects has undergone an almost complete reversal. Not only has the Knesset (Parliament) given him an unprecedented degree of support (75 votes to 23), but the population at large has come to appreciate that he cares about the good will of all the communities of Israel and to respect his capacity for hard work, and, above all, for measured judgment.

The abolition of the military aides and escorts which had surrounded Mr. Ben Gurion (who also held the Defence portfolio) and Mr. Sharrett's surprise appearances at a number of popular conventions, including a reunion of immigrants from the backward Kingdom of Yemen, have contributed to the people's increased respect for the new prime minister.

UPHILL STRUGGLE

Despite popular support, Mr. Sharrett's government has before it a hard uphill struggle. Although Israel's imports last year were down to five times the value of its exports — compared with a ratio of eight to one in the preceding year — the country's adverse trade balance remains the principal obstacle to normal economic conditions. The decline in United States government aid and the imminent maturing of short-tern loans totalling over 100 million dollars, make this problem more acute than ever.

The internal economic hardships caused by these difficulties are liable to underline the conflicting interests of the two main partners in the government coalition—Mapai, representing labour, and the General Zionists, defending the middle class. Although the two parties are still in the midst of their second political alliance (they also formed the basis of the previous coalition cabinet under Mr. Ben Gurion), minor skirmishes between them have already taken place.

MORE TAXES

Akiva Govrin, Mapai's parliamentary whip, has called for a policy of heavier taxation at almost the same time as a businessmen's association backed by the General Zionists in Ramat Gan, on the outskirts of Tel Aviv, declared a twenty-four hour strike in protest against what they termed the excessive burden of existing taxation.

Differences on economic issues are, however, expected to be oversadowed by the wide measure of agreement existing between the two chief parties on matters of foreign policy. They both favour increased diplomatic activity against Egyptian attempts to close Israel's sea lanes to the East—via the Suez Canal and through the Red Sea and Gulf of Aqaba. Both Mapai and the General Zionists advocate the early resumption of work on the Jordan river project, opposed by Syria and suspended pending a United Nations decision, as well as stringent action to curb armed infiltration from neighbouring Jordan.

On the whole, Mr. Sharett continues the policy of Mr. Ben Gurion's government and, barring unforeseen complications, is likely to do so until considerations of the next general elections, due in the summer of 1955, induce one of the two chief partners to break up the present coalition.

Management, Labour and Newspapers

Canada's outstanding leaders in management and labour are today beginning to realize that a change in their relations with the newspapers of this country is necessary. This realization has been gradual; it has only emerged since the Second World War, for it was largely as a result of that war that Canada became the great industrial nation she is today. This was the premise of the labour-management-press relation discussion held during the recent Canadian Managing Editors Conference in Windsor.

* * *

Labour was ably represented in the discussion by Walter Reuther, the 46-year-old president of the C.I.O. Mr. Reuther charged that Canadian newspapers misrepresent stories of labour by slanting them from the managerial point of view. But in his criticism of the press of Canada, he admitted he knew very little about Canadian newspapers, and his remarks were largely based on his experience with the press of the United States.

* * *

To ask the newspapers of Canada to be objective in their treatment of labour's side of the news is a fair and proper demand. It is also a popular gambit with union leaders who may deliberately ignore the just distinction between editorial comment and news reporting. But for objective reporting it is first necessary to make it possible for the reporter to get the news, and to be able to study what is behind it. This, we believe, is what labour and management are beginning to realize. It is an old and revered principle of good newspapers that the free press has a basic, moral and social responsibility to report facts without bias. Mr. Reuther's criticism throws into relief the responsibility to report the facts of collective bargaining without prejudice. In order that the press can do this, management and labour must show respect for facts and not impede newspapers from getting at them.

* * *

There was a time in Canada, and it even occurs today, when labour and management tried to distort the facts during bargaining. A reporter has to be a superman to discover what is fact, and what is distortion by omission or exaggeration. He must work through a hopeless tangle, brought about by weeks of negotiation. Unravelling this tangle for objective reporting is practically impossible for the reporter alone. He must have the co-operation and guidance of the experts.

It has always been a problem for reporters to get big business to talk freely, and many businessmen show a lack of knowledge as to what is news. Labour has always been willing to talk more freely, but often has sought to lead the reported up an alley, where objective reporting goes into a dust bin.

* * *

Realizing the complex problems and responsibilities, newspapers today are placing their best reporters on labour-management news. They are aware that in many Canadian cities labour and management news is vitally important news to a preponderant majority of their readers. The livelihood of whole communities is affected by the relations between its managers and employees.

* * *

Labour leaders admit, and Mr. Reuther is one of them, that labour can be wrong and that there are gangsters in labour's ranks. They want the press to say when they believe this to be so. But labour also wants the newspapers to say when management is wrong. Nothing could be fairer. To enable the newspapers to do this, the reporters must be fully aware of everything that has happened through negotiations. This is the only way we can have an informed press.

* * *

Management and labour may differ as to the method; they may dispute the course; but between enlightened leaders of labour and responsible leaders of management there can never be any real and fundamental quarrel regarding the ultimate goal. So why not make the way clear for objective reporting?

* * *

We strongly disagree with Mr. Reuther when he says Canadian newspapers misrepresent stories of labour disputes. Newspaper reporters are not biased. Their job is to report the news as objectively as possible. But in order to achieve this, the broad and responsible conceptions of leaders of both management and labour must be carried down the line to the leaders at the local level. This is where, too often, the trouble arises. The high and fair-minded approach of a chief leader like Mr. Reuther to the problem of objective newspaper reporting can, at the local management and union level, peter out in a jangle of accusations and a jungle of misrepresentations, through which no reporter can find his way.

The Kilt In Question

A Scotsman named MacIntosh figures in the news because he has described the kilt as 'an outmoded relic fit only for the museum'. He has been rebuked by several of his fellow Scots, and we feel that the time has come for a non-Scottish, unimpassioned examination of his case.

The kilt is a picturesque garment, and we are always glad to see one on the street, or at those evening-dress parties where Scots occasionally turn up, dressed in velvet, lace and other rich accoutrements. Not only is the costume pleasing in itself, but it marks the wearer unmistakeably as a Scot; therefore, in conversation, one may avoid references to porridge, bagpipes, parsimony, John Knox, the Queen's title and other topics which might give him pain. The kilt also gives warning of the essential conservatism of the Scot; a nation which makes so few concessions to the advance of time demands, and deserves, special consideration.

The Scot asks nothing better than to be known as a Scot. He does not aspire to any internationalism of feeling; nothing will diminish his intransigent chauvinism. The loss which this emotional patriotism brings with it is balanced, in part, by the special strength of character which marks the Scottish people. They do not wish to change; their hearts are in the eighteenth century; they have the vigour which such powerful feeling engenders.

Other nations are more accomodating and, in this respect, weaker. The Welshman does not go to a dance in his steeplecrown hat and his shepherd's smock; the Englishman does not proclaim himself a Saxon by wearing a helmet with horns on it, or by attaching scythes to the wheels of his automobile; the Canadian of French descent does not wear a costume which ante-dates the Fall of Quebec. They are restrained by a sense of unity with their fellows; the Scot wishes it to be known, as vehemently as possible, that he is a man apart.

Mr. MacIntosh has obviously been infected with the internationalism of the twentieth century. Whether he can carry his fellow-countrymen with him remains to be seen, but one confident prediction may be made: he will not do so quickly.

Quaint Suggestion

Mr. Rodney Adamson, the Progressive Conservative MP for York West, thinks that if a man who is elected to Parliaments receives less votes than the number of votes unused in his constituency, he should be barred from the House, and his constituency unrepresented. That is to say, if a man received 10,000 votes and headed the poll, he would not be allowed to take his seat if there happened to be more than 10,000 voters in his constituency who did not go to the poll at all. Mr. Adamson's point is clear; he wants to stir Canadian voters out of their apathy. Nevertheless, we think that it is better that apathetic people should remain at home than that they should cast votes under compulsion.

Democracy is the most difficult of all political ideals to maintain, because it depends upon the free and intelligent participation of as many people as possible in the democratic states. But we must recognize that there are a lot of people in any state who are not intelligent, who care nothing about public affairs, and who can only be made to vote under compulsion. But are their votes of any use? Are their opinions dictated by thought, or even by family tradition? Ought we not to be grateful that they stay at home and do not confuse the real opinion of the interested majority? After all, approximately two-thirds of the people of Canada cast their votes. We may take pride in the fact that two people of every three in Canada give some thought to public affairs.

Of course it would be better if everybody valued the vote and used it, but we shall not see that state of affairs for a long time, if ever. Meanwhile, let us not begin forcing people to vote, for such action cheapens every man's vote.

NOTES AND COMMENT

When a nation rattled the sabre it just rattled the sabre. But when it rattles the hydrogen bomb there is nasty likelihood that it might go off.

A shortage of 50-cent pieces is reported, and as this is by far our handsomest coin, we suggest that it being hoarded by collectors.

'Don't try to escape from reality', says a psychiatrist, and the Kingston Whig sardonically adds—'That's right; stay in the frying pan'.

The Brantford Expositor publishes a recipe which it describes as "a wine pinch for 100 persons". The pinch, we presume, comes when it has been consumed by a mere 25 guests.

Ex-Terrorists Fight In Jungle

By RAWLE KNOX

THE SQUAD of Chinese on parade was fresh from the jungle, where it had been sent as live bait.

The men were an odd assortment of shapes and sizes in floppy green uniforms, but in the polyglot army which is trying to stamp armed Communism out of Malaya they had one rare distinction — every one had previously fought in the jungle on the Communist side.

✧ ✧ ✧

TO THE NORTH of this little riverside town a wide area of jungle and rubber is vicdimised by the "Ninth Independent Platoon" of the "Malayan Races Liberation Army." Most of the men on parade had once served with the Ninth Platoon, or else with its neighbour, the sixth. The Communists still in the jungle had let it be known that they would "get" their erstwhile comrades, even if it meant accepting heavy casualties.

And so, together with contrived leaks of information in neighbouring villages, the Kota Tinggi squad of the "Special Operations Volunteer Force" was posted in the jungle like a tied goat to catch a tiger. The men appeared to enjoy the idea immensely. But the Ninth Platoon never kept the appointment.

"This way," said a local police officer, "we can't lose. If the terrorists had come, we'd have caught them in a trap. But they didn't, and now all our SOVFs are going round town telling people that the enemy is afraid of them."

✧ ✧ ✧

THERE ARE fifteen squads (each of fifteen men) operating in the SOVF, which was first formed in July last year. Apart from the European police lieutenant who commands each squad, every man is a surrendered terrorist. The men are picked after careful observation and screening by the police, but they are strictly volunteers; so much so that police headquarters in Kuala Lumpur could field another ten squads tomorrow if the Government would sanction the money.

About 1,500 terrorists have surrendered since the Communists took to Malaya's jungles to fight in mid-1948. Most of them work with Police Intelligence after surrendering, and are paid (like the private in the SOVF) about £3 a week, with food and quarters found. But when their immediate value is exhausted it is not always easy, even if they are permitted, for them to return to civil life.

✧ ✧ ✧

OF the dozen men on parade at Koto Tinggi, eight had once been rubber tappers, and rubber tappers are the most exposed Malayans of all to Communist attacks from the jungle fringes. Recently a surrendered terrorist who was still working with the police went on short leave to his home village, Loyang Loyang, not far from here. The morning after his arrival he was found dead with a knife in his back.

If a man rises to sergeant with the SOVF (each squad has a sergeant and two corporals) he gets £5 a week, probably twice as much as he would earn as a rubber worker at present. In addition he is working for the elimination of his one-time comrades, without which there can be no guarantee of a peaceful future for him.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT IS NOT ONLY the two brutal truths of pay and revenge which bring volunteers to the SOVF. Many of these men know little else but how to fight in the jungle. Three of the Kota Tinggi squad were with the Malayan People's Anti-Japanese Army, the Communist-led, British-supplied, guerillas that harassed the Japanese during their occupation of Malaya. One of the three was only fourteen when he first went into the jungle.

The SOVF is most unlikely to be used in large military formations. Quite apart from the men's tendency to be truculent with the local population — a jungle trait they find it hard to unlearn — their main value is in small units, used in areas familiar to them. They know the personality of the enemy commander, the way he fights, the tracks he may use. Of the greatest value, they know the local villagers who have helped the Communists.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE EX-TERRORISTS expect good leadership, and the police see that they get it. At Kota Tinggi, one would not at first suspect that the soft-spoken Police Lieutenant Charlton, SOVF squad commander, was anyone out of the ordinary. But he won the D.C.M. (Distinguished Conduct Medal) in World War II, and the George Medal (one of the highest British decorations) for bravery in the post-war Malayan jungle.

Some SOVF commanders have found that their men react successfully only to the brutal kind of discipline they learned with the Communists. But Charlton's men get the same treatment as the regular police. "They're an ordinary decent lot of chaps," he says, "Only a darned sight better shot than most."

✧ ✧ ✧

THE ex-terrorists do not seem to mind reversals of rank when they join the forces of law and order. Tan Ah Too, the square, rubbery sergeant of the Kota Tinggi squad, had among his men Khor Ah Tan, who, as commander of the Communists' Sixth Platoon, was quite a personality in the jungle.

Khor Ah Tan answered most questions happily but tactfully could not remember how many of the security forces his platoon had killed in action. He also, like the rest of the squad, found it hard to decide whether he would continue soldiering when his eighteen months service was up and he would be offered the option of another six months.

Like most other people in Malaya, the ex-terrorists were probably wondering how long the lingering war would drag on.

Dissipated By Psycho-Economics

By PAUL JENNINGS

NOT the least of the inventions of this scientific age is other sciences. Cybernetics, semantics, speech therapy and many more have started up in our time. And now I think I have stumbled on a new science. It is called Psycho-Economics.

For some time now it has been evident that ordinary Economics deals in abstractions rather than people. It always talks about the "flow" of money as though it were a sort of tide, with people carried helplessly on it like chicken-coops or dead trees. But even in ordinary Economics we tend to move away from this "dead" conception. Gresham's Law for instance, says that bad money drives out good; and somehow one imagines the bad money smiling evily to itself, looking rather like cartoon drawings of pound notes with legs, driving the good money into bank vaults and under peasants' beds, while the banks and the peasants themselves look on helplessly.

✧ ✧ ✧

NOW, the point about Psycho-Economics is that it recognises the human element. It restores the relationship between man and money, in which both are living. It takes its rise from a new fact in our civilisation, the fact that nowadays our sense of wonder, our numinous relationship with the world, is no longer derived from Nature, from strange voices heard in the wind, the rustling spirits of trees, the brooding presences of the fields:

Where is the Naiad 'mid her sworded sedge?
The Nymph wan-glimmering by her wan fount's verge?

Today the inexplicable wonder has left the boring country, a lunar landscape with garages, and it has transferred to the city, to the shops, to the vast workings of commerce. To-day no one is in a trance in the country, but in Oxford-street you may see hundreds of people with trance-like, dazed expressions; they are inarticulately aware that no man could completely comprehend the essence and contents of a big department store, any more than any ancient priest, although he might foretell eclipses, could catalogue the mysterious rhythms of Nature.

Faun's flesh is not for us,
Nor the saint's vision.
We have the Press for wafer;
Franchise for circumcision.

Our version of the rushing, Pentecostal wind of life is the rushing, magical, endless motion of wrapped goods over counters. Both we and the goods are seized up into this living force, this elan vital. As Lewis Mumford remarks, with the baroque period "buying and selling became not merely an incidental traffic in the conveyance of goods from producer to consumer: it became one of the principal occupations of all classes."

✧ ✧ ✧

PSYCHO-ECONOMICS is still in its infancy, but I think I have discovered one of its basic laws — the Law of Dissipation. The richer the economy, the larger the town, in which any specific article is sought, the harder it is to find it. Some mysterious balance is maintained, by which almost everything you see in a shop is not quite what you want. Otherwise we should all become buying lunatics, drunk with the Spirit of Commerce.

The Law of Dissipation functions for both large and small purchases. Thus, I always use a certain kind of shaving cream. It comes in a tube, because I hate those sticks, that get soggy and come out of their plastic base. But the only stuff the man in the shop has in tubes is for brushless shaving. My soap is for use with a brush. I have tried, but cannot succeed, with the kind that you "rub lightly on with your fingers, and you will get a feather-smooth shave." When I try this it's like being flayed. The man in the shop implies that this is the modern way to shave, that's the way I must shave if I want a tube, not a stick. Yet I know that somewhere else, there are shops bulging with my kind of soap, for use with brush, and actually made by the same people as this brushless stuff. But not here. It has been Dissipated.

✧ ✧ ✧

OR take something larger. I want a brass fender 48 inches long. Previously every antique shop I passed contained families of brass fenders. But now all I can find is a steel one that must have been used in the ox-roasting kitchen of some medieval castle, or an extraordinary brass one with no sides. 48-inch brass fenders have been Dissipated.

Even so common an article as a vacuum cleaner, impressed on one by much advertising as being perfectly obtainable, is Dissipated. My wife and I go into the electrical department of a huge shop. It is full of bulging refrigerators, and with those things that whizz round to mix puddings (but who ever has that much pudding?). There are also a lot of what I call vertical vacuum cleaners, but only a few of the kind we want, the horizontal kind that lies on the floor and has pipes and wonderful gadgets "for those odd corners." And not one of these is for our voltage.

Psycho-Economics is the study of the unseen forces passing between customer and shop, that produce this universal Dissipation, this magical balance of commercial force. It is quite a field.

Unconsidered Trifles

"Fat men are usually very trustworthy."
"Why is that?"
"Oh, they find it difficult to stoop to anything low!"

The queue in the post office was getting longer and longer. At its head—before the grille with the "Pensions" label — an old woman was taking her time. She fumbled in her handbag; brought out first one and then another article and laid them on the counter. They made an imposing collection.

The pension book still hadn't come to light, but a little old man with a soldierly look about him could stand it no longer. "Hurry up, Ma," he called out. "This is a pay parade, not a kit inspection."

The raw recruits were more raw than ever that morning—and so was the sergeant-major. He decided to make an example of Private Brown.

"Brown!" he bawled. "Take two paces to the rear!"

Two men stepped out of the ranks. The sergeant-major glowered at the second man. "Hey! You!" he shouted. "Is you name Brown, too."

"No, Green, sir."

"Then are you deaf, daft, or what?"

"No, colour blind, sir!"

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose. For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be confirmed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethern . . .

What shall we say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? . . . Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword? . . . Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us. For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. (Rom. 8:28, 29, 31, 35, 37-39.)

Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also: and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father. (John 14:12.)

Letter To The Editor

ABOUT SHEEP

Sir: Looking around to try and find out something about them this is what I discovered.

That if a sheep is too near a wall and is rolled over on its back it can't get up without help, and will not last very long if left alone. Sometimes they have been known to die within ten minutes, which is, of course, rather soon but anywhere from ten minutes to an hour is dangerous to leave them to struggle alone.

They must have exercise each day if possible, weather permitting, meaning of course that nearly every day, but the sultry sleet which freezes on their wool they go and find some shelter if caught out doors.

They need water, grain and bran, also hay about ¾ of a lb. each of oats is a feed for each sheep, also a salt lick which can be bought in a block and is placed on the cement floor of the barn or outside in the summer time.

Before lambing time they must have a space clear for they might need help and not much grain is fed before the lambs are expected, it is better to separate the ram from the sheep about a month or two before, so as not to run into any difficulties with him.

The wool is not sheared until later except around the teats and under the tail to make it easier for the lambs to be born and to nurse. They are timid creatures but if not bothered by dogs will graze and forage for themselves in many months of the year, providing there is plenty of acreage and good fences as they can get through anywhere a dog can.

A Word to Victoria

(Vancouver Sun)

The shennanigans over Communist literature infesting Victoria's public library leave us a little sad. We must face the fact that Victoria is slipping.

We've always admired her as a basically sensible person with charming little eccentricities like a sea serpent in the fish-pond and flowerpots hanging on lampposts, who boasts of maintaining the world's greatest bird sanctuary, seagull division.

It was right in character for Victoria to take to her bosom a mayor who fancies himself in a cloak. But it was horribly crude of her to conjure up a little Kremlin among the well-thumbed volumes of Dickens, Thackeray and Carlyle on the public shelves.

Victoria shouldn't be wasting her time on this nonsense. She should be looking to the daffodil crop.

Seek To Save London Caves For A-Shelters

LONDON (CP)— British underground explorers are fighting a proposal to destroy what they claim could be a perfect atom bomb shelter.

Experts of the British Speleological Society say that vast chalk galleries in the southeast London dock area of Plumstead could shelter 40,000 persons in the event of an air attack.

Local authorities propose filling in the huge caves to prevent crumbling in the quarries which lie close to both the Royal Arsenal and the Royal Artillery barracks at Woolwich.

USED AS SHELTERS

Charles Quarrell, society secretary, said that during the Second World War large chalk caves at nearby Chislehurst were used as shelters. These were only one-quarter the size of the Plumstead caves.

Said Quarrell:

"Sweden and the United States have definite schemes for utilizing all existing underground quarries and they are going ahead with schemes for the construction of great underground shelters.

"Why cannot we in Britain follow suit and at least conserve what we already have, even if funds preclude further construction at present?"

Boring Into Ocean Floor To Build Island

SEAL BEACH, Calif. (AP)—An oil company expects to start boring into the ocean floor a mile and a half out from this Southern California community in about seven weeks.

Monterey Oil Co. will be drilling from a $1,500,000 steel, gravel and concrete island it is building for the purpose. The man-made island is the first like it on the Pacific coast.

A steel drum 75 feet in diameter and 70 feet tall has been set up on the ocean floor. The ocean is 45 feet deep at this point, so the drum extends 25 feet above the surface. It was laid down in interlocking sections.

The drum, its steel skin more than an inch thick, has been filled with gravel to within five feet of the top. On top of this gravel, concrete is being poured to provide a platform flush with the top of the drum.

BOULDER BREAKWATER

The outside of the drum is banked with breakwater-type boulders to steady it from the ocean's sway.

After the concreting job is done, a wharf and dock will be built alongside the drum on pilings.

"Then we start moving our equipment to the island," said E. E. Pyles, Monterey vice-president. "Our guess is that we'll start drilling some time the early part of April."

Running down through the gravel to the ocean floor are three so-called conductor pipes through which the drill pipes will be lowered.

"We'll build three wells, if the first one is any good," Pyles explained.

Four billion barrels of oil—more than 1-10th of estimated United States reserves—are estimated to be under California's tidal waters.

Titanic Financial Railroad War Starts

By ED MORSE

NEW YORK (AP) — A titanic financial war for mastery of $3,000,000,000 of railroad properties is under way.

The stakes are the New York Central Railroad, worth $2,500,000,000 and the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, a $500,000,000 enterprise.

The struggle is reminiscent of giant combats waged in the 19th and early 20th centuries by such legendary railroad magnates as Jay Gould, Jim Fisk, E. H. Harriman and James J. Hill.

The ghost of "Commodore" Cornelius Vanderbilt, who founded the Central system nearly 100 years ago, must be cocking a canny eye at the present fracas. For blood kin of the old commodore still sit on the embattled Central board, his descendants Harold S. Vanderbilt and William H. Vanderbilt.

TRADITIONAL SWAY

The Vanderbilt - Morgan banking interests, the financial liege lords of the East, have traditionally held sway over the Central which sprawls its 10,417 miles over an empire roughly bounded by New York, Boston, Montreal, Chicago and St. Louis.

In business volume it ranks second only to the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Now the rulers of the Central are challenged by a firebrand out of the West, Robert R. Young, the Texas-born financier who has been dubbed "the stormy petrel of the rails."

Young, with his western banking allies, once before challenged what he calls the "Morgan bankers" on another matter—and the Young crowd won.

ULTIMATUM

This time, with unparalleled audacity, Young issued an ultimatum which virtually amounted to:

"Make me boss or I'll throw you all out!"

The Central board of directors, after 5½ hours of soul-searching on Wednesday, issued its reply. Behind the polite verbiage it summed up to one word:

"No!"

Then the shouts of defiance began to ring out, from Young on the one hand, and from his sturdy opponent, William White, New York Central president, on the other.

Young said he would launch his proxy fight culminating in the Central's annual stockholders' meeting May 26 at Albany, N.Y. White retorted that he and the Central board would fight back.

WAR UNDER WAY

On the New York stock exchange the next morning, trading in Central stock opened with a huge block of 30,000 shares at $23 a share, up $1.37 from the day before, and the stock started soaring. Who was buying — Young or Central? It could be either or both. The war was on.

This war would be fought with money and with words—money to buy as many of the 6,447,410 shares of outstanding common as each of the foes could prudently afford—words to propagandize as many of the 44,461 shareholders as possible to enlist in the opposing battle lines.

The votes will be in the form of proxies representing shares of stock. They will be cast for two slates of directors, one representing Young, the other representing the present Central management.

ATTACKS BOARD

When Young was refused the chairmanship of the Central last week he immediately attacked the "Morgan non - ownership board" which rebuffed him. He argued that the 15 central directors own hardly any stock in the railroad and are more partial to their banking interests than to the interests of the stockholders.

The scrappy mid - Westerner claimed that he and his associate, Allan P. Kirby, represented "substantial" stock holdings. This amount, as yet undisclosed, has been reported as 300,000 shares or more.

The proxy fight for control of the New York, New Haven and Hartford is overshadowed by the gigantic struggle for the Central, but is of great moment to millions of people on the eastern seaboard.

The New Haven operates 1,792 miles of railroad interlacing the heavily - populated manufacturing areas of southern New England in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The main line is from New York, through New Haven and Providence to Boston.

Here again, the struggle is focussed on two men. One is Frederic C. (Buck) Dumaine, president of the New Haven. His foe is Patrick B. McGinnis, New York stock broker.

OLD CONTEST

This, too, is a renewal of an old contest between two rival groups.

The bugles sounded when the New Haven announced Feb. 3 it was dropping seven of its present 21-man board of directors. Among them were four named to the board a year ago in a compromise to avert a proxy fight for control of the road.

The four dropped were members of the McGinnis group. Earlier in February, Dumaine said that two strong groups, one from Canada and one from New York City, identified as the McGinnis interests, sought further representation on the board.

Representative Donald Nicholson (Rep. Mass.) denounced this group on the floors of Congress last week, saying it would be "a disastrous day" in New England when the New Haven is operated by "absentee investors" in Hamilton, Ont.

McGinnis could not be reached for comment and his office declined to elaborate on representative Nicholson's reference to Hamilton.

Inquiry Will Determine Excuse For POW Confessions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States marine corps will try this week to determine whether Communist cruelty is sufficient cause to excuse an American prisoner of war for making false confessions of germ warfare.

The question will be reviewed by a court of inquiry composed of four marine generals and one navy medical admiral. They have been ordered to look into the case of Col. Frank H. Schwable, the highest ranking marine to fall into enemy hands during the war in Korea.

Schwable was one of two marine officers and 33 air force officers and enlisted men who were forced by their captors to concoct stories about the United States using bacteriological warfare.

The air force is handling its confession cases differently. An air force board has been set up to evaluate the facts already gathered in private investigations and no action or decision will be taken until the investigating board, meeting in secret, completes its studies.

INQUIRY OPENS TUESDAY

The inquiry court will open at marine corps headquarters here Tuesday morning.

A court of inquiry operates in a manner similar to a formal court martial. Sworn testimony is taken and witnesses can be examined and cross-examined. But this court will reach no verdict and Col. Schwable will be present as a "party to the inquiry," not a defendant, because no charges have been lodged against him.

Schwable was chief of staff of the first marine air wing in Korea. His plane crashed behind enemy lines and he was held a prisoner for 14 months. Nothing was heard about him until broadcasts of his "confession" were picked up.

In a statement made after his release, Schwable said he had been degraded, humiliated and exhausted physically and mentally by the Communists, who he said followed a "definite pre-planned pattern to break me down and condition me for this farce." By farce, he said he meant the confession he eventually signed.

Blue Cross Offers National Hospital Plan

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian Council of Blue Cross Plans Saturday announced it is offering a national uniform Blue Cross contract for prepaid hospital care. Up to now, five separate plans have been operating in eight provinces.

J. R. H. Robertson of Montreal, council president, said in a statement:

"This national uniform Blue Cross contract means that employers with branch offices throughout Canada can enrol all their branch office employees in a Canadian Blue Cross hospital care plan at the same rate. In other words, an employee residing in the Maritimes whose head office is in Montreal can have the same benefits as a fellow employee living in Manitoba."

GRANT'S SPORT CORNER

By DON GRANT

That the parks department may discontinue supervising the city outdoor rinks came as no surprise to u huddled in this tight corner beside the pot-bellied stove.

Just in case you didn't catch city hall reporter, Phil Calder's story on the possible change, it's briefly this.

The department has recommended that the recreation commission assume the responsibility of supervising the rinks next season with a view to forming neighbourhood groups to look after the supervising.

Early this year we spoke to Armar Butcher, parks superintendent, about boards at more of the rinks. This query was made after our phone nearly rang off the wall one weekend when neighbors complained there were no rink boards at the Inverlea rink for the first time in 20 years.

Friend Butch was happy to explain the lack of boards. It seems that sometime during the summer youngsters had a glorious time making rafts from the old boards. The expense to replace boards for all rinks was just too much.

This wasn't the first time that kids had played havoc with the parks department. They had broken nearly 100 panes of glass at Riverside, started a fire in waste paper under Hunter St. bridge, and broken into numerous parks' buildings.

Now there has been so much rowdyism around the city rinks that a new means of supervision must be provided.

Too Much To Watch

Butch has pointed out that under the present system the parks department provided supervisor cannot be inside the changing rooms and outside as well to curb rowdyism.

The neighborhood group idea isn't new as city clerk, E. A. Outram, pointed out. In Brantford neighbors have taken the lead in conducting the activities once they had been given a start by the commission.

But we don't have to look that far away for neighborhood groups conducting activities for children.

Since the city was already paying some $20,000 for outdoor rinks, it turned down a request from people in the annexed portion of Smith for a city-operated rink. The people around Wolsely-Bennett Sts. went ahead on their own.

This rink could be a example for next year.

These former township people, sparked by Tony Buhlman and others, donated $2 from each family, bought lumber for boards from the old Stewart farm, had lighting installed over the 40 by 80-foot rink, and even set up a public address system for music.

The neighborhood has planned the ice time for hockey and skating, and has arranged special events such as a costume party with prizes.

The city isn't asking the neighbors to take over to such a full extent as at Wolsely-Bennett Sts. They'll still be setting up the rinks and keeping the ice in shape. They're asking them to keep the children's busy little minds and hands occupied at interesting activities.

The neighborhood plan is sound. It has many possibilities such as inter-rink activities in hockey, skating parties, skating competitions (both figure and speed), and would develop community spirits, something which this city sadly lacks.

If the winter scheme were successful, that is, the parents take a little more interest in their children's activities, the neighborhood supervision could be made a year-round effort.

Coaches Ready-Made

The neighborhood program could solve the problem of coaches and managers for minor league teams. This has particularly plagued baseball teams for the past five years, resulting in a gradual decline in minor league baseball. Perhaps hidden talent would be discovered.

It could also lead to a larger sports program for girls and young women. At present there's nothing for the girls apart from a little softball in the public schools.

The neighborhood scheme has many other great possibilities, but parent participation is a must. They've sat back for a long time letting someone else plan their children's activities. Let's hope it hasn't been too long.

Lyndhursts Down Germans In 4-1 Win Before 12,000 Fans

MANNHEIM, Germany (CP)—Many Canadians from nearby RCAF bases turned out Sunday night to cheer Toronto Lyndhursts to a 4-1 victory over the German national hockey team before 12,000 fans.

The Lyndhursts, who will represent Canada in the world hockey championships in Stockholm Feb. 26-March 7, scored three goals in the second period and added the fourth in the finale for their eighth straight victory.

The Lyndhursts piled up the streak after losing their opening exhibition game to a team of Canadians from the English leagues 11-2 in Paris Feb. 1. A number of the Lyndhurst victories have been close in contrast to some of the big scores piled up by previous Canadian entries.

George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced in Toronto Sunday night that four players will leave Feb. 20 for Europe to reinforce the Lyndhursts.

STRONGER ON ICE

Against the Germans, the Lyndhursts were stronger on the ice and showed better stickhandling.

The Germans opened with fast attacks in the first period but the Canadian defence held the opposition scoreless.

Left-winger John Petro scored the first Lyndhurst goal after 10 minutes of the second period on a pass from Ben Chapman. Petro got another goal five minutes later with a 10-footer. In the final minute of the session centre George Sayliss made it 3-0.

Centre Bob Kennedy scored the fourth Canadian goal during the ninth minute of the third period.

The Lyndhursts' next game will be Tuesday at Krefeld.

The Tribe's front office said the first baseman telephoned general manager Hank Greenberg and indicated he was sending in his signed contract for the 1954 season.

Chances are that Easter, who now is 32 years old, took a salary cut. The Tribe, however, did not make public the pay terms.

This week at our curling rink, and program is just a little out of the ordinary. Besides the regular schedule game was have two open bonspiels coming up and just in passing, what would we do if we didn't have artificial ice?

On Wednesday and Thursday the ladies are holding their annual bonspiel for the Warne Trophy and then on Saturday we have the men's all day bonspiel so it does look like a busy week.

Garth Bround and D. M. McCartney are skipping the rinks in the Ontario open bonspiel. Play began this morning, in all Toronto rinks and will continue all week.

There will be no further play in The Neill Trophy bonspiel until Wednesday, Feb. 24th.

The winning skips Saturday afternoon were: W. Switzer, R. Lye, B. Harrison, H. Williamson and L. Symonds. In the evening at the mixed rink 'spiel Fred Stenson and George Gable were the winners.

Today's thought: "Always rise from the table with an appetite, and you will never sit down without one."

PVCS, Kenner Take Wins From Hamilton Delta

Hamilton's Delta Collegiate basketball teams invaded Peterborough high schools Saturday, but in five attacks were repulsed four times. The PCVS teams won three, the seniors winning 64-35, the juniors 51-45 and the bantams 40-33 over Delta midgets. In the afternoon Jack Cullis Delta juniors won their first game of the season over Kenner Collegiate 42-34 but the Kenner bantam Rams gained revenge with a 38-24 victory over Delta's midgets.

After Delta's fairly strong showing in the afternoon against the YMCA Regents, the Garnet and Grey seniors were a little worried. But after a 15-7 first quarter, they gained confidence to always keep command for a 38-16 half-time score and a 56-29 three-quarter score. They coasted to the victory in the fourth.

Once again the Garnet and Grey passed well and this resulted in more and better distributed scoring. Just the same Terry Roberts led the scoring with 13 points, Neil Courneya with 11 and Bob McKinney with 10.

Jack Cullis' Delta juniors caught Art Currier's PCVS juniors off-guard in the first quarter and took a lengthy 17-8 lead. But led by Brian Bell the collegians rallied to tie the score 22-all at the half. Then with Paul Davis, Jim Bellany and Bell leading the attack the Garnet and Grey gradually pulled away for a 37-33 third quarter score and to outscore Delta 14-12 in the final.

Delta's Strub led the scoring with 17 points. The Collegiate's high scorers were Bell with 12, Davis and Balleny each with 10.

A large third quarter gave Bev Goulding's strong bantams their victory over Delta midgets. Delta had taken 10-5 first quarter and 17-12 half time scores before the Garnet and Greys swept to 20 points in the third to lead 32-22 at three-quarters. Delta rallied in the fourth but the collegians held to their slim margin.

McArthur again led the bantams' scoring with 11 points as the points for both quintets were distributed well throughout the players.

Cullis, a former Kenner Collegiate teacher and coach, upset the highly-favored Kenner Juniors with his team's first victory. Kenner went ahead 10-6 in the first quarter but fell behind 21-15 in the second and stayed behind as Delta was ahead 31-26 at the third quarter and then outscored Kenner 11-8 in the final.

Jerry Montgomery led the Rams' scoring with 13 points while Delta's Welland took the game scoring with 15.

In gaining revenge for their juniors' loss, the bantam Rams made it decisive. They coasted ahead 9-0 in the first quarter over Delta midgets, stayed ahead 17-8 at the half and went further in front 28-15 by three-quarters, scoring most of the fourth quarter points on fouls as the game became rough.

Bill Hendry, the Rams' scoring star, again topped the scoring with 14 points.

Re-elect Arnold OFA President

TORONTO (CP)—Arthur Arnold was re-elected president of the Ontario Football Association at the association's annual meeting Saturday.

Harry Brockbank and Bert Lipsham, both of Toronto, and Bill Lomas of Windsor were elected councillors. Billy Simpson was re-elected secretary - treasurer and Dick Sleeman was again chosen vice-president.

A $250 fine levied by the OFA on the National League over a dispute between the National League and the Toronto and district association was paid.

DELEGATES ATTENDING

Delegates representing 11 district associations and three leagues between Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., to Windsor were present at the meeting.

The association said that it had $2,706.58 in the bank at the end of 1953. It had $5,182.63 at the same time the previous year. A motion by the Sudbury association which would have prohibited a player transferring from one team to another in the same league was defeated.

Find Patterson 4-1 Favorite

NEW YORK (AP) — Undefeated Floyd Patterson is a 4-to-1 favorite to rack up his 10th straight victory tonight when he faces Yvon Durelle of Montreal, former Canadian light heavyweight champion, at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway Arena.

This is the first outing for the Olympic champion since he was chosen as boxing's "rookie of the year" by the Boxing Writers Association last month. The award temporarily jinxed two previous winners, Rocky Castellani and Vince Martinez.

The 19-year-old Brooklyn Negro shouldn't have too much trouble, however, with the Canadian invader. Floyd has fought better opponents, despite his youth. He stopped Dick Wagner in his last start, Dec. 14. Durelle, making his New York debut, has won 59 of 65 fights.

Regents Rally In Fourth Defeat Delta Seniors 98-55

High school classes ended Friday at 4 at Hamilton's Delta Collegiate. But Delta's senior basketball team had an extra lesson thrown in last week. They were taught never to step out of their class. They did Saturday and the OABA intermediate Regents promptly taught them how to break quickly, to pass and to shoot while winning 98-55.

The Regents, the teachers, gave their lesson in a disastrous fourth quarter as both quintets gradually lost players through the five-personal-route in the rough play. Just the same the well-balanced Regents broke quickly through the Delta quintet to outscore them 35-4 for the large margin win.

The Regents started school in the first quarter. Scoring masters, Dan Griffin, Bob Smith and Don Ash took charge after guard masters, Gord Burns and Joe Stewart, gave a lesson in rebounding. Before Delta could catch their breath, the Regents were ahead 29-16.

GOOD STUDENTS

But the Delta boys were good students as well as good high school basketball players. They took their lesson seriously and the teachers were put on the defensive for two quarters.

John Ogrodnic, working from the pivot, was set up time after time by Delta, for points in the second and third quarters. Meanwhile Fisher, with the school's latest fad, a little goatee, took long shots and Kemp, a lanky guard, drove in for layups.

This Delta attack nearly wiped out the Regents' lead several times but the Doug MacPherson-coached Regents kept control of the class, still leading 47-38 at the half and 63-51 at three-quarters.

Then the pupils faded and the masters became masters of the game, running the score close to the 100-mark.

Former collegiate stars, Griffin and Ash led the Regents' scoring each with 16 points while the whole quintet took part in the scoring, Smith having 14, Dave Langhorne 11, Ab Stewart and Bill Edger 10 each, Ed Nicholls nine, Joe Stewart 6 and Gord Burns four.

Ogrodnic led the Delta scoring with 12 points, followed by Hyhrsci with 11, Kemp with 11 and Cessna nine.

Toronto Clubs Sweep Badminton Titles

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto clubs swept all six events in the Ontario badminton championships and all five of the consolation events held here Saturday and Sunday.

Audrey Rhodes of Stratford and Audrey Hepworth of Woodstock were eliminated in the semi-finals of the ladies' singles and the finals of the doubles.

Bun Brewster of Woodstock and George Thorpe of Hamilton lost out in the finals of the men's doubles.

Mary Cunningham of Kitchener and George Thorpe of Hamilton were defeated in the finals of the mixed doubles.

Tarlton Rink Gives Hamilton Second Title

ORILLIA (CP)—Ross Tarlton's Hamilton Thistles rink has given its home club the second Ontario single rink curling championship in 13 years and won the right to represent Ontario in the Canadian championships starting March 1 at Edmonton.

The Tarlton four beat Stan Sarjeant's Orillia rink 10-6 in the final Saturday after a seven-game round robin ended in a tie.

The Hamilton victory made amends for the 12-10 defeat Sarjeant handed Tarlton in the first round of the round robin last Wednesday.

DESERVED SUCCESS

The Thistles deserved their success. They out-curled the Orillians all the way, were much steadier throughout and missed less often.

Tarlton picked up a 4-0 lead on the first three ends, helped considerably by opponents' misses. After Orillia counted a pair on the fourth, Hamilton added a single and a double on the next two ends to lead 6-2 at the halfway mark.

Sarjeant got singles on the seventh and eighth but Tarlton bagged a pair on the ninth to lead 9-4. Each of the last three ends produced a single, with Sarjeant getting two of them. The game ended when Bob Cross, with the last stone sent a fourth Orillia rock back of the house.

The northern championship winner, forming the second Ontario team in the Canadian championship will be decided in a 'spiel starting at Kirkland Lake today.

Leafs, Rangers Tied 3-3; Red Wings Triumph

By JIM BASTABLE, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Injured defencemen may help give Terry Sawchuk hockey's most prized goaltending award. Sawchuk, a stocky fellow with fast reflexes and strong hands, is back in a tie with Toronto Maple Leafs' Harry Lumley for the Vezina trophy, top award for goalkeepers in the National Hockey League. Ever since injuries struck the Leaf defence, Lumley's goal average has been going up. Sawchuk picked up ground during the weekend as his Detroit Red Wings scored five goals in the last period and walloped the last-place Chicago Black Hawks 5-0. It gave Terry his 10th shutout of the 1953-54 campaign and wiped out the Hawks' mathematical chances to make the Stanley Cup playoffs.

LEAD WIPED OUT

Lumley had his lead wiped out when the Leafs were held to a 2-2 tie by Montreal Canadiens Saturday and a 3-3 deadlock by New York Rangers Sunday.

That left Lumley with a goal average of 1.72 a game in 54 starts. Sawchuk is right with him.

There were two other games during the week-end. Saturday the Rangers were blanked 1-0 by the fourth-place Bruins in Boston. The Bruins came back Sunday with a 4-1 victory over the Canadiens.

Sawchuk, winner of the Vezina for the last two seasons, made 38 stops for his shutout. The victory also gave the Red Wings a nine-point lead over the Leafs, who moved into second place with their tie against the Rangers before 12,370 fans.

Gordie Howe scored two goals to lead the Wings. Marcel Pronovost, Glen Skov and Johnny Wilson tallied the other Detroit goals.

Max Bentley's goal at 17:58 of the third period gave the New Yorkers their tie.

The Leafs had to battle from behind early in the game. The Rangers went in front 2-0 on Max's first goal in the first period and another by Nick Mickoski in the second. Morrison and Sid Smith evened it up by beating goaltender Johnny Bower in the second period and Tod Sloan put the Leafs up 3-2 in the third.

The Leafs were enjoying a 2-0 edge in Toronto Saturday when Canadiens rallied to tie the score. A sellout crowd of 14,581, the biggest of the season at Maple Leaf Gardens, saw rookie Jean Beliveau and veteran Elmer Lach tie it up for the Montrealers. Eric Nesterenko and defenceman Tim Horton fired the Toronto goals.

The Canadiens were feeling the loss of goaltender Gerry McNeil, forward Bernie Geoffrion and defenceman Dollard St. Laurent. All three are out with injuries and the Montrealers brought up Jacques Plante to fill in for McNeil. He made 21 stops and had no chance on the two goals that beat him.

Canadiens were in the same fix Sunday as a crowd of 9,493 fans saw the Bruins score three times in the third period to take the game.

Doug Mohns, Joe Klukay and Fleming Mackell tallied for Boston in the third period. Centre Cal Gardner sent Boston into a 1-0 lead in the first frame. Bert Olmstead tied it up on a play with Maurice Richard and Bud Macpherson in the second.

Netminder Sugar Jim Henry turned aside 32 Montreal drives. Plante handled 21 from the Bruins.

At Boston, Leo Labine scored while the Rangers were a man short to give Bruins their victory Saturday. It was Henry's fifth shutout.

A double penalty to Dean Prentice of the Rangers in the second period gave Boston the advantage. Labine took a pass from Dave Creighton and beat Bower with a 35-footer.

One game is scheduled for tonight. The Hawks, who have won only 10 games in 56 starts, travel to Detroit.

Kitchener Sends Protest To CAHA Heads

QUEBEC (CP)—Manager Curly Davis of Kitchener Greenshirts said Sunday a letter of protest has been sent to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in connection with a disputed, interlocking-schedule game Friday night with Jonquiere Marquis of the Quebec Junior Hockey League.

The letter was addressed to CAHA president W. B. George of Kemptville. Its contents were not immediately known, but the Ontario junior league team is understood to be disputing a decision by referee Ken Mullins not to replace a goal judge.

Jonquiere was awarded Friday's game at Jonquiere, when coach Stan Long of the Greenshirts called his team off the ice in the 17th minute of the second period and refused to complete the game when a Kitchener goal was disallowed. Kitchener was leading 4-2 at the time.

WOULDN'T REPLACE JUDGE

Kitchener dented the Marquis net at about the same time as an official blew his whistle. Long asked Mullins to replace the judge behind the Jonquiere net, but the referee refused saying he believed the official competent.

Long, who faces a possible one-year suspension under CAHA rules for calling his team off, was coaching the Greenshirts Sunday when they lost 7-2 to Quebec Frontenacs.

Tuberculosis Patients Kept On Jobs In South Africa

CAPETOWN (OFNS) — Tuberculosis experts throughout South Africa, where the incidence of this disease is nearly the highest in the world, have been for the past year watching with interest a revolutionary experiment in tuberculosis control, in which the Union Health Department and selected industries in Durban, Natal have collaborated.

The experiment cuts across the old principle of prolonged and complete physical rest as an essential part of TB treatment.

Four hundred African factory workers suffering from active, but non-infectious, tuberculosis have been kept working at their normal jobs instead of undergoing hospitalisation. They are given regular daily tests and treatment with modern drugs at factory clinics.

ALL SHOW PROGRESS

All the patients are showing progress, and not one has failed to respond satisfactorily.

The advantages of the scheme are that the patients can continue to support himself and his family instead of throwing them on their own resources. This is psychologically beneficial to the patient, as is the fact that he is up and about and doing an active job instead of lying in bed.

The cost to the state and local authorities is reduced from £450 a year for a bed patient, to about £8 for outside treatment.

TB experts who have studied the scheme have expressed the opinion that it is "a bold and brilliant move that might completely alter the concept of medical thinking anywhere in the world."

Mobile X-ray units are busy in many industrial areas of the Union in the first stage of South Africa's big battle against TB — uncovering active cases among workers of all races.

There is an alarmingly high proportion of TB among urbanised African workers, and a great shortage of hospital beds. It is estimated that at least 11,000 TB beds are urgently needed.

It was this great shortage of beds which precipitated research into ways and means of getting the patients on to his feet and back to work again in the shortest possible time.

Dr. B. A. Dormer, chief of the Union Department of Health's anti-tuberculosis section, revealing details of the experiment, said that as many infectious patients as possible are hospitalised, but it was the aim to get them out on their feet as soon as possible.

"With modern drug treatments — and no expense is spared — patients today soon lose their temperature, become sputum negative and are much sooner up and about," he said.

"The majority are non-infectious within a few months of entering hospital and we then send them home and back to work, which enables us to use our present number of beds three or four times as often as before."

Art Critics Defend $20,000 Collection On Tour But Some Disparage Paintings Of Canadian Cities

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Art critics across the country have come to the defence of a collection of contemporary Canadian art that most of them have never seen. But a few lined up behind the detractors of the $20,000 group of paintings.

The collection, scenes of 22 cities from St. John's to Victoria, goes on display today in Amsterdam. The reception has been good in most Latin American and European capitals where the paintings have been shown but they were banned in Stockholm and belittled by a critic at home.

The paintings were collected by the House of Seagram, a Montreal liquor firm, and sent on a 30,000-mile tour. Canadians had a glimpse of the paintings at a brief pre-tour display in Ottawa last spring but most will not see them until later this year when they will be shown in the cities the pictures portray.

POSTCARD ART

The Swedes last month called the paintings "brightly colored post cards" and labelled the collection a "whisky monument."

Henri Masson, a Belgian-born Ottawa painter who considers himself "a near-modernist impressionist" called the collection "a major publicity stunt" and "a farce." The 47-year-old artist, whose own paintings have been shown in Canada, used the word "dirt" and called the collection "calendar pictures" in an address before Ottawa's Richelieu Club Wednesday.

The reply from Canadian artists and critics led by Robert Pilot of Montreal, president of the Royal Canadian Academy, was that the collection is a fine idea and the paintings are good. Some, however qualified their praise and others considered the paintings "commercial" and not representative of Canadian art.

Mr. Pilot, whose society co-operated with Seagram in assembling the collection, said the artists chosen for the collection are among the most eminent in Canada.

"Therefore, when an individual in Ottawa in an address to the Richelieu Club uses such phrases as 'scandal,' 'a farce,' and this address is publicized throughout the country, it is a great disservice to the whole profession of painting in Canada," he said.

HAS TWO PAINTINGS

Mr. Pilot has two paintings in the collection, Sherbrooke and Kingston. The only other artist with two is Franklin Arbuckle of Montreal, known for his Canadian illustrations, who painted Ottawa's Parliament Hill and the Vancouver waterfront scene.

It took more than 18 months to organize and produce the collection. The average artist's fee was $1,000.

The House of Seagram remained out of the controversy but a spokesman said the firm has been interested for years in development of Canadian culture.

"It's most certainly worth any amount of money put into it," he said.

Samuel Bronfman of Montreal, Seagram president, wrote a foreword for the booklet that accompanies the collection. He said the object of the tour was to carry abroad some glimpses of Canadian landscape and skyline and to promote understanding of Canada.

ESTABLISH RAPPORT

The foreword does not discuss the quality of the art but expresses the hope that the paintings will "establish abroad a familiarity with our urban life, and thus evoke a closer rapport between ourselves and the peoples of the world."

A. Y. Jackson of Toronto, whose painting of St. John's is part of the collection, said the idea behind it "was fine, inspiring, a generous thing in every way."

Outside the circle of contributors, Miss Norah McCullough of Regina, executive secretary of the Saskatchewan division of the Federation of Canadian Artists, said she had not seen the collection but thought the idea behind it was good.

"We have no wealthy art patrons today and subsidies from big firms are welcome," she said.

SOME COMMERCIAL ART

In Halifax, Cmdr. C. A. (Tony) Law, president of the Nova Scotia Art Association, said "there were some paintings on the commercial side but these were offset by the work of other Canadian painters."

Jerrold Morris, curator of the Vancouver art gallery, said if the collection were sent to Vancouver he would display it.

"If any firm has taken the trouble to become a patron of artists, it is a good thing," he said.

John Steegman, director of Montreal's museum of fine arts, said he had not seen the collection but "the artists were carefully chosen and Seagram's collection represents Royal Canadian Academy art by established painters."

Calgary, which Mr. Masson will visit when he teaches art at the Banff school of fine arts next July produced a little debate of its own on the merits of the collection.

Ron Spickett, a member of the Alberta Society of Art whose work was recently shown in the national gallery's "Canadian painting, 1953" said Mr. Masson "is absolutely right."

"COMMERCIAL ASSIGNMENT"

Illingsworth Kerr, president of the Alberta society, and vice-president Maxwell Bates, agreed that the collection is "a commercial assignment" and that it was "wrong indeed to send it to Europe to represent Canadian art."

Wes Irwin, president of Calgary's Allied Arts centre, said many of the paintings are "undistinguished, commercial and mediocre."

Mrs. Marion Nicoll, art teacher at the Alberta institute of technology and art, said there was "no reason why conventional works of art should not tour as representative of Canadian art." J. D. Turner owner of Calgary's Canadian art gallery, thought Mr. Masson's remarks in bad taste.

Another Calgarian, A. F. Key, director of the Allied Arts Centre, said "the collection is a success provided it represents just scenes of Canadian cities. But should it represent mid-20th-century Canadian art; it is a failure."

When Mr. Masson, in an interview, amplified his remarks, he singled out three painters, Mr. Jackson, Jacques de Tonnancour of Montreal and Goodridge Roberts of Digby, N.S. He distinguished them from the rest whom he termed "mostly commercial artists and second-rate painters."

OTHER CONTRIBUTORS

Other contributors and the cities they painted:

Frederick B. Taylor (Windsor), Albert Cloutier (Montreal), Frances-Anne Johnston, wife of Mr. Arbuckle (Charlottetown), Harold Beament (Hull), Lorne Bouchard (Quebec), all of Montreal; A. J. Casson (Hamilton, William Winter (Winnipeg), R. York Wilson (Regina), Charles Comfort (Edmonton), all of Toronto; Clare Bice (London), London; Walter J. Phillips, (Victoria), Winnipeg; Evan MacDonald (Saint John), Guelph; A. C. Leighton (Calgary), Calgary.

J. S. Hallam of Toronto, who painted the scene of his own city, died last year.

STIRS UP FUSS—Henri Masson, Belgian-born artist, of Ottawa (left), whose work has been exhibited in several major exhibitions in Canada, has stirred up a fuss among Canadian artists by his decription of the $20,000 Seagram collection of Canadian paintings as "calendar pictures." Mr. Masson is shown here with one of his paintings, "St. Joseph's Street," an Ottawa scene. Franklin Arbuckle, Montreal artist who painted this scene, "Parliament Hill, Ottawa" (right), is one of a group of Canadian artists who fell under Masson's criticism. Mr. Arbuckle had two paintings in the collection which presents 22 urban profiles of Canada.

2,000 Living Underground In Halifax Basements

HALIFAX (CP) — Halifax, the city with a major mystery population, has about 2,000 persons living in underground apartments, most of them small, dark, damp, poorly ventilated and expensive.

George Ferguson, chairman of the city's rental authority, and building inspector Charles Day estimate about 500 families live in basement or sub-basement apartments which "would not be condoned if it were not for the city's disgraceful housing shortage."

A boom city during the war when the population almost doubled the peacetime 60,000 - mark, Halifax now has about 100,000 persons. But there is also a "mystery population" which gives the city a far greater turnover than at any time in history with the exception of the war years.

COMING AND GOING

These people—coming and going—provide a steady clamor for accommodation and send prices far above normal. Why these people come to the city, what they do and where they go, city officials don't know.

The basement apartment is the by-product of this demand for quarters.

"That's why people are asking and getting as high as $80 and $90 a month for sleazy accommodation in made-over cellars and basements," Mr. Ferguson said in an interview.

Mr. Ferguson said the problem is known but "will continue, and indeed grow worse, until such time as a solution is found to present high costs of construction.

The city needs about 5,000 dwelling units to cope with the underground housing situation. How many more are needed to replace other sub-standard housing isn't known, except that it is in the thousands.

Cardinal Mindszenty Stands As Symbol

WELLAND (CP)—James Cardinal McGuigan, Roman Catholic archbishop of Toronto, said Sunday night the imprisoned Cardinal Mindszenty of Hungary stands as a symbol of christianity and of the liberty that will be restored to nations where freedom has been suppressed.

He addressed a mass meeting in a theatre during ceremonies marking the fifth anniversary of the trial by the Communists of the Hungarian cardinal.

Artists Paint By Holding Brush In Teeth

HALIFAX (CP) — An old-timer and two newcomers shared a showing of their oil paintings at a recent sale here.

The veteran is Earl Bailly of Lunenburg, N.S. The newcomers are Muriel McAlpine of Hassett, N.S., and Margaret Thompson of Scotsburn, N.S.

They have one thing in common: All victims of polio, they have lost the use of their hands. They paint by holding the brush in their teeth.

Bailly is known throughout Canada, not only for his method of handling a paint-brush but for the artistic quality of his paintings.

His example started Miss McAlpine and Miss Thompson on the same vocation while they were in the polio clinic here. They say it's more than a relief from boredom; it is a rewarding experience in creative work.

Royal Navy Will Attempt Salvage Of U.K. Jetliner

PORTO AZZURO, Elba (Reuters)—In two days the Royal Navy will begin attempts to raise the twisted wreckage of a British Comet jetliner lying 400 feet under the Mediterranean sea off this Italian island.

British aviation experts hope the wreckage may yield a clue to why the airliner exploded in mid-air 35 days ago, shortly after leaving Rome airport, and plunged into the sea, killing all 35 persons aboard.

The salvage operations beginning Tuesday will be complex. First the navy vessel Barhill will lay moorings in the centre of a small triangle where during the last week eight major pieces of the jetliner's wreckage have been sighted. The area is about five miles south of Elba's calamity point.

ANCHOR ABOVE COMET

Then the salvage vessel Sea Salvor will anchor directly above the main section of the Comet and try to hoist it up with mechanical grab equipment. If this fails, a tug will comb the sea bottom with huge steel nets 296 feet long and 30 feet wide.

If necessary the naval engineers will drag the battered hulk into Stella bay, where the depth is only about 50 feet. In shallower waters divers can actively join in the delicate work of raising the wreckage.

British aviation leaders hope to get the wreckage to the surface as intact as possible, since this will increase the chances of solving the mystery of the third fatal Comet crash in aviation history.

Investigate High Coffee Price In U.S.

By STEVEN V. DAVID

NEW YORK (AP)—Consumers grumble, the government investigates and Latin Americans explain—and still the price of coffee in the United States remains sky-high.

What goes on? There have been explanations and statements from growers, importers, roasters and interested bystanders. The important facts are these:

Coffee consumption is high—it has held steady in the United States and has been increasing in Europe. At the same time, producing countries say the crop that will be harvested in July will be below normal because of frosts in Brazil and too much rain in Colombia and Venezuela.

Officials of the New York coffee exchange, testifying before a Senate subcommittee investigating soaring prices, gave these statistics:

BIG REDUCTION

Brazil's 1953-54 coffee crop was estimated last July 1 at 16,900,000 bags of 132 pounds each. Since the frost, the estimate has been trimmed to 14,000,000 bags.

For the 1954-55 crop, the long-range estimate was 17,900,000 bags. This has been cut to 12,700,000.

Green coffee prices started to climb shortly after the frost reports came in. Roasters, faced with the prospect of replacing their current stocks with green coffee bought at much higher prices, began raising their wholesale price tags. By and large, they averaged the cost of stocks on hand with the cost of coffee being bought at high prices for delivery in the future.

As a result, coffee is selling in most U. S. stores at above $1 a pound. In some places it's up to $1.09 or so.

SPECULATION CHARGES

Congressmen, sharing the feeling of many that somebody's making a lot of money out of the rise in coffee, are investigating the situation. Charges by some congressmen that speculation in coffee futures is to blame have led to Senate passage of a bill to bring coffee trading under federal supervision.

There is evidence that the consumer is doing something about the problem, too—by buying less coffee.

Dun and Bradstreet's survey of retail trade notes that in the week ended Feb. 3 "coffee sales dipped again as growing price resistance was noted. Sales of tea were substantially higher than in 1953 and above the preceding week."

Joseph G. Vaskas, chief tea buyer for the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Co., predicts that U. S. consumption of tea may double or triple in the next 10 years. Vaskas observes that while the price of coffee in the home now is about three cents a cup, the average price of tea is less than a penny a cup.

3½ CENTS A CUP

Several makers of instant coffee report that consumers are drinking more and more of their product, which they say is economical because there's no waste.

In many cities, restaurants have raised their prices for a cup of coffee to 15 cents. On the other hand, a leading food company contends a restaurant can serve a cup of coffee at a cost of 3½ cents, including ingredients and overhead.

The Union News Co., which operates several hundred restaurants, put up signs recently urging its patrons to drink tea. Since then, officials say, coffee sales have declined und there has been a compensating increase in orders for tea, milk and hot chocolate.

Sees Civic Problems Doubled By 1975

OTTAWA (CP)—A geography expert predicts that the populations of Canadian cities will double by 1975 and that civic problems will, too.

Dr. E. G. Pleva, head of the geography department of the University of Western Ontario, told the national council of the YMCA Saturday that the population of Canada will reach the 25,000,000 mark by 1975 and that most of the "new" population will settle in central Canada, resulting in a "thickening of already well-populated areas."

He foresaw no increase in farm population because of the development of scientific farming equipment.

Doctor Dies

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Dr. George Harrison Seaman, 49, a general practitioner at nearby Lobo village, died Saturday. He was born in Listowel and was graduated from University of Western Ontario Medical school in 1927. He is survived by his widow and two daughters.

India Produces Newsprint

NAGPUR, India (Reuters) — India will produce newsprint for the first time by the end of this year.

Mills now being built at Nepanagar in Madhya Pradesh, central India, are designed to produce annually 30,000 tons of newsprint. This will meet about one-third of the country's requirements.

At present, India imports her newsprint from abroad, mainly from Scandinavia.

The project is a pioneering effort in the manufacture of newsprint from a species of wood (Salai) which has hitherto not been used for the purpose anywhere. The process is based on the utilization of chemical pulp from bamboo and mechanical pulp from salai. Both bamboo and salai are obtained from government forests.

The cost of production is estimated at 610 rupees ($132) a ton.

Jail Prisoners Scarce

KIRKWALL, Orkney Islands (Reuters) — The most northerly jail in Britain, the seven-cell prison on this north Scottish island, will close March 1 because it does not get enough prisoners. It is uneconomic to run, say the authorities. It will become a police station.

Chief Crowfoot Rules Blackfeet

GLEICHEN, Alta. (CP) — Chief Crowfoot rules again on the Blackfoot Indian reservation here.

Joseph Crowfoot, who recently took his place as head chief at the first council meeting since the December elections, is a great-grandson of the chief Crowfoot who negotiated the 1877 treaty which gave the tribe its lands.

Development of the area, 40 miles east of Calgary, has made the Blackfoot one of the wealthiest Indian bands in Canada.

In his younger days, Joseph Crowfoot was a skilful rider and roper, being chosen by the Rodeo Association to represent Canada at the 1938 cowboy contests in Australia.

Six Small Children Die In Fires During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Despite efforts of a 14-year-old sister left as a baby-sitter, three young children died amid flames that licked through their wooden home at Normandin, 40 miles north of Roberval in Quebec's rugged Lake St. John region, while both parents were away.

They were among six small children to die as a result of three separate week-end fires in eastern Canada.

A Canadian Press compilation today listed 21 violent or accidental deaths during the week-end—12 in traffic mishaps, seven in fires, one from freezing, and one in a power saw accident. Ontario had 13 fatalities, Quebec four, Nova Scotia three and New Brunswick one.

Killed in the Normandin, Que., fire were Claude Mathieu, 6, his sister, Claudine, 4, and three-year-old brother, Camille.

Aurel Garbeau, 2, died seven hours after his mother carried him out of a burning house near North Bay. Rosalie Fraser, 4, and her sister, Evangeline, 2, were tapped and perished in a burning house at Preston, near Halifax.

Mrs. Ernest Penny of Ottawa, a semi-invalid, died of burns suffered when her nightgown was set on fire by an electric heater.

Killed in Ontario traffic accidents were John Chorneyko, 51, and his wife Gertrude, 38, in a collision at Toronto; Dorothea Hill, 17, in a collision at Toronto; Harold Mumford, 38, when his car smashed into a bridge south of Brampton; Milton Ratz, 60, and Mrs. Gwen Simpson, 42, in a collision near Dashwood, 35 miles northeast of London; Carmelo Masseo, city workman, struck by car while sanding an icy road at London; Robert Downey, 81, struck by a truck at Kingston; Royal Boudria, 28, after his car skidded into a ditch at Sarsfield; and Edward Tatarnic, 38, whose car smashed into a tree near Thorold.

Rennie Locke, commercial fisherman, died of injuries suffered in a power saw accident at Fort Frances.

At Trois Pistoles, Que., Georges-Henri Lavoie, 26, of Rimouski, was killed when struck by a car.

Priscilla Melanson was killed by a skidding car near Lakeburn, N. B.

In Nova Scotia, Mrs. Bert MacDonald, 72, was found frozen to death in woods near her Dufferin, N.S., home near Pictou.

Order Full Penalty For Teams Leaving Ice

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Club executives who order their teams to withdraw from the ice in the middle of games are going to get the full length of the axe, hockey officials announced Sunday night.

The "get-tough" announcement followed the second incident in three days when an Ontario Hockey Association Junior A team quit in the middle of the game.

On Friday, Kitchener - Waterloo Greenshirts skated off the ice during an interlocking game with Jonquiere Marquis of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association in Jonquiere.

Sunday Guelph Biltmores, on the short end of the 8-0 score, called it quits with two minutes and 20 seconds of their game with Toronto Marlboros remaining.

All disputes in interlocking games are handled by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. All-Ontario games fall under the rule of the OHA.

AGREE ON PENALTY

Both the CAHA and the OHA are agreed on the penalty. Only the report and evidence is necessary.

CAHA regulations say: "If a team is withdrawn from the ice, fails to go on the ice and start play—within two minutes when ordered to do so by the referee in charge—the game or series shall be forfeited to the opposing team. The manager, coach or official of the club which is responsible for any of these actions shall be automatically suspended for one year from the date of the infraction without the right of appeal."

The game between Marlboros and the Biltmores ended just after a brawl between Marlboro right-winger Gerry James and Guelph's Bill Graham. James received a minor penalty for cross checking and a five-minute major for fighting. Graham received a fighting major.

WITHDRAWS TEAM

Alf Pike, apparently unhappy with the referee's decision, withdrew his team to the dressing room. Referee Jack Hogan pulled the watch and at the end of two minutes awarded the game to Marlboros.

Tory Gregg, president of the OHA, said from his home in Wingham Sunday night that Pike is certain to get a year's suspension if the referee's report indicates that he refused to allow his team to continue the game.

W. B. George, president of the CAHA, expressed the same sentiments about Friday's game between Kitchener and Jonquiere.

"The suspension is automatic of course. Whoever pulled the Kitchener team off the ice will be suspended."

The abbreviated Guelph - Marlboro contest Sunday was followed by an interlocking game which saw Toronto St. Michael's College Majors wallop Trois-Rivieres Reds 7-1.

The only other Sunday game had Quebec Frontenacs whipping Kitchener 7-2 in an interlocking game at Quebec City.

Saturday Hamilton Cubs took a 5-1 home-ice victory from Trois-Rivieres and the league-leading OHA St. Catharines TeePees trimmed Galt Black Hawks 10-2 in Galt.

LITTLE TROUBLE

In Toronto Sunday, Tom McCarthy and defenceman Dave Sanderson sparked the Marlboros, each with two goals. Mike Nykoluk, Bob Pulford, Dave Reid and Wally Maxwell scored the others.

St. Michael's had little trouble with the Reds as Paul Knox and Brian Anderson fired two each for the Collegians. Others went to Jack Caffery, Ken Linseman and Ken Gribbons. Jean Cossette scored the only goal for Trois-Rivieres.

About 5,000 fans saw the Frontenacs drop the Greenshirts during the other Sunday game. Guy Rousseau and Stan Parker each tallied twice for Quebec. Gilles Thibault, Jean Guy Huneault and Ray Cyr counted the others. Fred Glover notched both for Kitchener.

INCREASE LEAD

St. Catharines' victory over Galt Saturday increased their hold on first place to six points over the Marlboros.

Don McLean, Hank Ciesla and Wimpy Roberts each scored twice for St. Catharines. Brian Cullen, Nels Bulloch, Cec Hoekstra and Hugh Barlow rounded out the total. Pete Kowalchuk and Ed Switzer were the Galt marksmen.

Hamilton's victory moved the Cubs into a fifth-place tie with the idle Barrie Flyers. Joe Zorica, Ted Reid, Bob Robinson, Brian Kilrea and Marlin McAlendin shared the scoring for the Cubs. Andre Soucy tallied the only goal for the Reds.

Galt is at Hamilton for tonight's only game.

Two Canadians finished in the money. Rudy Horvath of Windsor Ont., added a 73 to his Saturday score of 71 for a total of 144 and $100 in prize money. Bill Ezinicki of Winnipeg, now a golf pro at Lynnfield, Mass., also won $100 with a 70-73—143.

Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener finished with a total of 148—73 Saturday and 75 Sunday.

Stratford Indians Crush Niagara In 15-6 Defeat

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

George Dudley, secretary-manager of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association Sunday announced the names of four players who will leave Feb. 20 to join Toronto Lyndhursts, Canada's representatives at the World Hockey championships, in Europe.

Don Lockhart, netminder for Niagara Falls Cataracts of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series, is one of the four.

Lockhart, who can stand up against the best of the goaltenders in the loop, has had a rough time with the cellar-dwelling Cataracts this season. And yet, his goals-against average isn't too far behind those of the other netminders.

He had his darkest moment in Stratford Saturday night when the Indians beat Cataracts, 15-6.

In the other Saturday league game Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen and Chatham Maroons fought to a 3-3 overtime draw in Kitchener.

Sunday Owen Sound Mercurys defeated Windsor Bulldogs 5-3 in Windsor to regain sole possession of first place in the standings, one point ahead of Kitchener.

George Aitken fired four goals for the Indians Mickey Roth followed with three, Dinny Flanagan, Mike Delich and Ron Ingram, two each, and Billy Flick and Herve Dejordy notched singles.

Ted Fauteux bagged three for the Cataracts and Danny Nixon, Bill Young and Ed Plata scored one each.

In Kitchener, Jerry Theberge counted two goals for the Dutchmen with the other going to Don Rope. Ernie Dick, Joe Carveth and John McKennel shared the Chatham total.

Owen Sound was never headed in Windsor. Centre Tommy Burlington paced the Mercurys with two goals to bring his total to 106 points—six short of the league record set by Mickey Roth of Stratford.

Herb Carnegie, Buck Forslund and Jerry Reid counted the other Owen Sound goals.

Jack Power, Frank Bathgate and Lyle Wiseman were the Windsor snipers.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group Saturday North Bay Trappers took a 9-3 home-ice victory over Sudbury Wolves and Sault Ste. Marie Ont. Greyhounds tightened their grip on first place by defeating Pembroke Lumber Kings 8-3 in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

Sunday Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Indians tied Pembroke Lumber Kings 3-3 in overtime at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

Don Hogan, Ivan Chasle and George Gosselin each with two goals, sparked North Bay's victory over the Wolves Saturday. Stan Maxwell, Durno Rondina and Bo Elik scored singles for North Bay. Bob Dawes, Tatter McClellan and Yacker Flynn scored for the Wolves.

Johnny Ubriaco and Jim McBurney notched two each for the Greyhounds against Pembroke. Ron Lay, Jimmy Johnston, Terry Biocchi and Ed Mulligan scored singles. Rheal Savard with two and Gravelle with one were the Pembroke marksmen.

Bill McCracken's overtime goal gave the Indians their tie with Pembroke Sunday. It was his second goal of the game. Ron Rubic got the other one for the Indians. Rheal Savard, Jack Douglas and Ron Rowe were the Pembroke scorers.

Niagara Falls is at Hamilton for tonight's only game in the OHA. Greyhounds are at North Bay in the NOHA.

This mine is air-conditioned

To provide fresh, clean air and good working conditions for the miners, Inco engineers devised an unusual air conditioning system for the "Caving" project of the Creighton mine. They drove a special ventilating shaft from down in the mine up to the surface. At the top of this shaft is a 20-ton fan standing 42 feet high.

This fan sucks out the stale dust-laden air and causes clean, fresh air to flow down into the mine at the rate of 300,000 cubic feet per minute.

The fan's twelve nickel bearing stainless steel blades can be adjusted in pitch to increase the flow of air as the mining operation is expanded in the future.

"The Romance of Nickel", a 72-page book, fully illustrated, will be sent free on request to anyone interested.

Dutch Watching Seawalls

By HARRY UYTENHAAK

AMSTERDAM (AP) — Behind its freshly patched seawall, Holland waits.

Every day anxious eyes scan the skies and watch the seas. This is the time of year when the storm-lashed North Sea strikes its heaviest blows. When will the next one come?

Will the dikes hold this time? Or will they yield again as they did a year ago, when hurricane-whipped seas crashed the barriers along the southwestern coast, inundated 400,000 acres, damaged or destroyed 1,500 people, wrought damage of about $300,000,000.

Holland worked feverishly to plug up the 67 major breaches and 460 smaller gaps torn out of its dikes.

When the job was finally completed, people sank to their knees in thankful prayer. Sirens wailed, church bells rang and flags were unfurled as the happy news sped through the country: "De dyk ist dicht" (The dike is closed).

But most people realized that their feeling of security was only temporary. Complete safety against the ancient enemy of this sub-sea-level land lies in long-range, expensive plans.

Among these, the experts say, is the need for raising Holland's 2,000 miles of dikes another two or three feet. That would cost about $300,000,000 or more than one-fifth of the country's annual national income.

VARYING DEPTHS

Another plan being worked out by engineers provides for the building of 15 miles of huge dikes or dams which would close up three of the four big estuaries of the Holland delta. This would cost about $260,000,000 and involve complicated engineering problems since the mouths of the estauries vary in depth from 60 to 120 feet and the tides have a rise and fall of 11 to 15 feet.

Special squads keep a 24 - hour watch over the new and repaired dikes, which still have to settle. A communications system has been arranged whereby these patrols, should they spot an emergency anywhere, can flash the word immediately to dike, civil and military authorities. Depots of shovels and sandbags have been set up throughout the southwestern area.

Meanwhile, the country has slowly returned to an almost normal appearance. Of the 85,000 people who were evacuated last February, all but about 11,000 have returned to their homes.

GIGANTIC TASK

Most of the 400,000 acres which were flooded have been pumped dry but some areas still remain covered by a sheet of water. As the last break in the dike on the island of Schouwen-Duiveland was closed in November, an official said: "All we have to do is pump about 80 billion gallons of North Sea and we have our land back again."

Much of this has been done, but more important the dikes along the 300-mile area which suffered the worst damage last year have been repaired. This, by itself, was a gigantic task.

Some of the breaks in the seawall were 1,500 feet wide — wide enough to float 10 ships the size of the Queen Mary through.

BOOKED IN BODENHEIM KILLINGS—Harold Weinberg (centre), flanked by detectives, is booked at a New York City police station following his arrest in connection with the killing of poet Max Bodenheim and his wife. Police say Weinberg admitted shooting Bodenheim after the writer objected to his attentions to his wife. Then he said he stabbed Bodenheim's wife when she turned on him.

Houston Growing Very Fast

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Houston is the fastest growing big city in the United States. From 1930 to 1950, Los Angeles population more than tripled but Houston's more than quadrupled.

Today, Houston has 665,000 people. It has, somebody said, about 1,000 millionaires. It is a town with about 4,000 air-conditioned cadillacs.

The city rises abruptly out of the Texas flats about 50 miles from the Gulf of Mexico. Galveston, right on the gulf, had a better natural port. But one day in 1915, while Galveston's back was turned, Houston completed a 50-mile deep-water channel to the gulf.

Today, the port of Houston handles shipping tonnage second only in volume to New York. It is said to be the world's greatest oil port and one of the greatest for cotton.

Within a 200-mile radius of the city, say the experts, more wealth is taken from the ground than in any other area of equal size in the world. Some 270 oil fields gush more than 200,000,000 barrels of oil a year. Other fields produce millions of cubic feet of natural gas. Houston also has a huge refining and petro-chemical industry.

One of the city's millionaires, Jim West, oil and cattle man, is said to own 30 cars, including 11 cadillacs; four planes, and two ranches—one of 60,000 acres and one of 160,000.

In his dress, Jim favors a 10-gallon hat, a diamond - studded Texas Ranger's badge and a huge gold buckle for the belt that holds his two guns. He likes to play cop at night, cruising around town with city police. He also is fond of tossing around silver dollars in public and watching people scramble for them.

Physically, Houston is difficult to describe. There are trees dripping Spanish moss to suggest the old south and royal palm trees to suggest the tropics. There is busy main street with its smart, modern shops.

There are the Negro and Mexican slums and the exclusive River Oaks section, where most of the millionaires live and where the country club costs $10,000 to join.

Because the town has grown so fast, the crime rate is high but not as bad as the loosely-applied tag, "murder capital of the country," might imply. Houston's brothels were closed three or four years ago, including one with an attached 12-car garage.

Any report on the city must also include the fact that a survey by the Houston Post found that a "miasmic fear of communism . . . has permeated the city."

On one occasion, the American Friends Service Committee had some difficulty arranging a meeting here because someone said the Quaker organization was harboring Communists. Others cried that visiting Rhodes scholars must be carefully watched because, it was alleged, they advocated union with England.

Scrap Steel Price Drop Aids Industry

CLEVELAND (AP)—The sharp drop in scrap steel prices during the last seven months is helping the steel industry offset some of the price concessions and freight absorption that have resulted from slack demand, Steel magazine says Sunday.

Standard base prices of steel remain intact, the weekly metal-working journal reports, and quoted its price composite of finished steel unchanged last week at $113.91 a net ton.

But, Steel adds:

"More and more price extras are being reduced or waived, freight absorption by mills is increasing, premium base prices are continuing to fade, and steel jobbers are making price concessions and offering free services to attract customers."

$4-TON CUT

U. S. Steel Corp. announced a $4-a-ton cut in quality extra of rimmed steel, and a number of other producers will follow suit, Steel says. Several eastern rollers of narrow, cold-rolled carbon steel strip cut their premium base prices $2 to $4 a ton.

Steel production last week held unchanged at 74 per cent of capacity, yielding 1,764,000 net tons.

Fears Another Depression Near

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—H. A. Chappell of Ottawa, national president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees and other Transport Workers (CIO-CCL) said Sunday there are more than 500,000 persons unemployed in Canada a situation that has all the earmarks of leading to another depression.

"I'm not saying it's going to happen," he told some 50 Niagara district CBRE members gathered for a week-end school. "However, the preliminaries are just the same as in 1929."

He said Production Minister Howe and Finance Minister Abbott "both admitted there's a bit of a problem, but it's not big enough for the government to take any strong action."

"These autocratic and bureaucratic individuals tell us there's nothing to worry about and 1954 is going to have a nice year. I just wish I had the confidence in the immediate future they have."

Bathurst To Honor Sir James Dunn

BATHURST, N.B. (CP)—A former Bathurst boy who became a leading figure in Canadian industry and finance will be honored in the near future by the university that grew up next door to his old family home.

The council of Sacred Heart University has informed Sir James Dunn of its unanimous wish to confer on him an honorary doctorate in social sciences, as "the most illustrious and successful son of Bathurst" and in recognition of his achievements for the country as a whole.

Sir James, who is chairman and president of the Algoma Steel Corp., Ltd., has always retained a keen interest in Bathurst and his home province. He is a resident of St. Andrew, N.B. Sir James has accepted the university's offer.

Seeks Nomination

ST. THOMAS—The Rev. H. S. Rodney, 38, pastor of Knox Presbyterian church here, said Sunday night he will seek nomination as Liberal candidate in the federal by-election in Elgin riding in March. He said this will be his first attempt at public office and that the church board of sessions has approved his action. The by-election will be held to fill the seat vacated by the death of C. D. Coyle, Progressive Conservative.

Look For Signs Of Arson In Loblaw Fire

PETERBOROUGH EXAMINER

VOL. CVII. No. 38 MONDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1954 PRICE FIVE CENTS

Main Street Topics

GUEST SPEAKER

Mayor Norman Graham was guest speaker today at the regular noon luncheon meeting of the Campbellford Rotary Club.

BOY IMPROVING

Ronald White, six-year-old boy who was severely injured when struck by a transport on Lansdowne St. Thursday, was reported today to be making steady improvement in Civic hospital.

CHILD BREAKS LEG

A nine-year-old girl, Anne Dainard, who lives with her parents at 492 Bolivar St., fractured her leg when she fell Sunday afternoon. She was allowed to go home after a plaster cast had been fitted at Civic Hospital.

NEW ORGANIST

Aubrey Bland, newly-appointed organist and choirmaster of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, is presently serving in that capacity at St. Paul's United church, New Liskeard, and not at Sault Ste. Marie as reported in Saturday's issue. He will commence duties in Peterborough on April 1.

Propane Co. Lost All Stock In Fire

Their stock in the north store of the Loblaw block on George St. a complete loss in Thursday night's fire, Superior Propane Ltd. are temporarily located at the Sanitary Ice Co. building, Water St. north.

"We salvaged only our records from the fire," Harry Tilley, speaking for the company, said today.

"Our deliveries of propane were not interrupted on Friday and Saturday. As is probably known, we obtain our propane supply from the Peterborough Utilities Commission. We have no information yet where we stand in regard to our lease with Loblaw's. We had part of the building that was destroyed by the fire."

Mr. Tilley said Superior Propane wished to get re-established as soon as possible in permanent quarters.

"Our business out of Peterborough covers a wide area from Bowmanville east to Grafton and all the way north. Peterborough is a convenient centre of that territory, and the volume of the business we have developed warrants us returning to permanent office and display rooms as soon as possible."

In the meantime the question of lease and other details is being handled in Toronto.

R. W. Salmon of Western Tire and Auto Supply, the third of the stores in the devastated building said: "We definitely want to get back in that location because we had got established there. For the immediate present we have to wait until we hear from Loblaw's just what they intend to do.

"We have taken space in the Faux realty offices until we can arrange for a temporary place of business.

"Our hopes are that Loblaw's will rebuild soon and that we will be back as one of their tenants."

Western Tire occupied the middle store of the building, No. 221 and Superior Propane was No. 223 George street.

Store Sales Up, Down? Undecided

Retailers Not Sure Effect Of Monday Closing

Most Peterborough retailers were checking their sales with extra care today to detect the influence, if any, of the fact that butcher shops and grocery and fruit stores were closed all day Monday for the first time.

The result of a quick survey by The Examiner early this afternoon indicated that most store managers were not prepared to say that they had noticed any appreciable difference in their volume of sales.

For many, it was too early to tell. Some felt that it would take a few weeks of study before it could be determined if the new closing bylaw had caused any change in the shopping habits of their customers.

BUSINESS DOWN

On the other hand, a few managers stated flatly that business had dropped off, although one or two thought they had detected a slight increase.

One shoe store manager, for example, said the sudden thaw and gloomy weather had brought an increase in the sale of rubber footwear to take the place of overshoes. A variety store manager, however, thought the overcast sky might have kept some shoppers at home.

While at least one proprietor was obviously hoping that the initiative taken by the butcher shops and grocery and fruit stores might lead to a general change in the hours of retail businesses throughout the city (business was "very quiet" at his store this morning), another remained convinced that Monday was too good a shopping day to be discarded.

"People like to come downtown to shop after a weekend holiday," he said.

SCORE SHEET

Here's a score sheet of the replies from a number of stores picked at random to The Examiner's question as to the effect of closing on other stores:

Variety store: "Not much difference but it's hard to tell just yet."

Variety store: "Sales better than on the same Monday last year but not enough to be significant. Maybe people forgot the grocery stores were closed and came downtown thinking they were opened."

Men's wear: "We've been about as busy as usual, Monday is always a good day for us."

Ladies' Wear: "Very quiet."

China store: "Not very busy. Monday is usually a good day for us."

Department store: "About the same as any other week." (Ditto for other department stores.)

Shoe store: "Business has been good, mostly in rubber footwear."

Jewellery store: "Usual Monday morning business."

Furniture store: "Business has certainly been slack this morning."

Summing up, it seems too soon to tell just what the result will be. As one merchant remarked, "I thought business would be slack this morning; but there seem to be a lot of people on George St."

As another retailer said, "This afternoon may tell the tale."

House Broken Into Pickings Only $5.00

A thief who broke into a city home during the weekend did not find rich pickings. All he got was $5 from a plastic bank which he broke open. Nevertheless, he is a thief in the eyes of the law and city detectives are investigating.

The theft was discovered Sunday night by Harold Simmons who lives at 182 Dumble Ave. Evidently the thief forced a cellar window to gain access to the house. A chest of drawers had also been ransacked, but it appeared nothing had been taken.

Mr. Simmons had been away from home since 4 p.m. Saturday.

Careless Thieves

COBOURG—(ENS)—Thieves who broke into Bill Jaynes' service station here over the weekend stole $15. from a desk but omitted going to the cash register where $30 was in the drawer. Entry was gained by breaking a window in the door leading to the grease pits. The robbery was discovered by Mr. Jaynes when he opened up on Sunday morning.

THIRTEEN CRIPPLED CHILDREN OF THE YWCA Senior Swim Club were taken for an old-fashioned sleigh ride on Saturday afternoon and, though it was thin sleighing for the horses, the kiddies and adult attendants enjoyed an exhilarating outing. Canada Moving Into Cities Y Delegates Told Canada will be 70 per cent urbanized by 1975, Dr. E. G. Pleva, professor of geography at the University of Western Ontario told the National Council of YMCA's in Ottawa Saturday night. In addition 15 per cent will live in suburban localities and only 15 per cent will be living in rural communities.

Forecasting population trends as far ahead as 1975, Dr. Pleva saw the day when what he called the cradle and rocking chair age groups will outnumber those in between, the industrial groups. He attributed this to man's ever-lengthening life and the increasing birth-rate. In 1937 there were 22 births to 1,000 population, a figure which has now risen to 28.

Stanley High, roving editor of the Readers Digest and a member of the international council of the YMCA, told the meeting that YMCAs in the Middle East are setting an example to the world, in combatting racial antagonisms.

ENCOURAGING MIXING

One of the main objectives of the YMCA in Africa, said Mr. High, is to encourage intermingling of races. One Egyptian Y is believed to be the only centre where Arabs and Jews can mingle freely.

A third speaker at the meeting, attended by Peterborough delegates Stanley G. Payne and Kenneth N. Kingston, was Dr. Owen Pence. Dr. Pence is secretary for International Affairs of the World Alliance of the YMCA and Y representative to the United Nations.

The meeting of the National Council was held in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Canadian General Secretary's Association. On hand from Peterborough was James C. McClenaghan.

Mrs. Anne Rowell of Peterborough attended the council meeting as a fraternal delegate from the National Council of the YWCA.

Clerk's Error

SWALE, England (CP)—A clerical error made 25 years ago by a water company resulted in this present community being charged for supplies to the neighboring villages of Selling and Sheldwich. The company has sent a cheque for £317 to Swale with "profound apologies."

Imports Worry Makers Of Electrical Apparatus

An appeal has been made to employees of the CGE to consider the increasingly serious factor of foreign competition in the selling of electrical apparatus. The miracle of the resurgence of German production was the heading of an article in a recent issue of a periodical. It was one of a series reflecting since the war the rapid recovery of industry in the country that came out of it defeated and stricken by loss of factories.

AIDED BY ALLIES

The allied nations undertook to help the Germans back onto their feet, and looking at the subsequent stage the CGE Works News says:

"In the last six months, more than half of the heavy equipment quoted on big curcuit breakers power transformers and large rotating equipment has gone to European manufacturers."

That is quoted from a statement by A. M. Doyle, president and general manager of the apparatus division of G.E.

Just before Christmas, J. H. Vernor, retiring as head of Western Clock Co., spoke of "cheap foreign competition" as the main obstacle in the expansion of employment at that factory. Since then that effect has extented to maintenance of employment.

The News says: "Since it affects all employees directly, an appeal is being issued to each person involved to take an interest in helping to reduce costs. Our jobs depend upon our ingenuity and resourcefulness in today's battle of wits with our competitors at home and abroad."

PROMOTE FREE TRADE

Both in the United States and Canada, as the people of this continent are generally aware, sentiment has been leaning far in the direction of free trade as a means of promoting business and understanding among the countries outside the several "curtains."

The general result may not yet be a dilemma of two horns, but the are indications that it could develop to that embarassing extent. Back of the News proposals is the whole sweep of two wars and all the wealth that has been sunk and destroyed in them, including Britain's investments abroad. What the News implies is that workmen in other countries are competing with their counterparts in Canada and in Peterborough and that attitudes toward the getting of business reach all the way down through manufacture from the designer in the plant to the shipper, and including office staff.

ISSUE A JOINT STATEMENT

"To help emphasize the gravity of the situation, the three apparatus department managers of Peterborough Works"— J. E. Girven, J. O. Shields and J. D. Willis — have issued the joint statement.

It briefly proposes the ways in which employees can do their part: the suggestion system, that is practical ideas which may be put into effect for the reduction of costs, careful workmanship, the elimination of avoidable waste, care in the handling of materials.

"Foreign competition is causing concern not only within our own company. Other manufacturers of electrical apparatus are having the same difficulties."

Pilot Brings Help To Patient

STURGEON FALLS (CP) — A pilot out on a short Sunday afternoon flight became the means whereby a sick man on an isolated island in Lake Nipissing will get treatment.

Roy Martin, prospector-pilot for Noranda Mines, was flying to visit the Nipigon Mines property near this community 20 miles west of North Bay when he saw a woman waving at the plane from the ice of Lake Nipissing below.

He landed and the woman, Mrs. Arling Clark, said she was walking to Sturgeon Falls 10 miles away to get help for her husband, who had had three heart attacks in two days.

Mrs. Clark was flown back to Sandy island to care for her husband at their tourist camp. Mr. Clark was to be flown to Sturgeon Falls today for treatment.

Farewell, Welcome Combined In Party

A party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnston, 650 Armour Road, on Saturday evening had a four-fold purpose.

First of all it was a farewell party for their sons Kenneth and Clifford Johnson, who will leave shortly for army service in Korea. It was Clifford's birthday on Saturday and it was also the first wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Johnson. Fourth reason for the party was to welcome Douglas Johnson home from service in Korea. Another brother, Frederick Johnson, is also in the army and stationed in Vancouver at present.

The celebration was saddened somewhat when word came that an older brother, Mr. Victor J Johnson and his family, who were on their way to the party from Toronto, had an accident and had to return home by taxi. However, none of those in the car, which struck a tree, were badly injured.

Hit Iron Ore At Bethlehem Work Progresses

The mammoth open pit operation of uncovering the low-grade iron ore deposit by Bethlehem Steel Corporation at Marmora is going ahead satisfactorily and according to schedule, general manager H. O. Olsen told the Examiner today.

Two small sections of iron ore have been uncovered from the 120-foot limestone cap that is being blasted and moved away at the rate of three-quarters of a million tons a month, Mr. Olsen said. Two-thirds of this work has been completed and company officials expect that all the stripping will be completed by November of this year.

By that time the mill at the property will be ready to receive the raw ore and process it for shipment to American mills. Concrete mill building foundations are still being poured and engineers expect steel work will be started about the end of February.

Work at the company's storage pit and loading docks at Picton will step up in warmer weather, about April, officials think. At the present time dredging for the ore boats docking facilities has been completed. The 70-foot deep ore storage pit is completed and trestle work for ore trains will be started in about six weeks as will concrete and steel work on the loading docks.

Hundreds of Gallons of Oil Untouched In Room With Furnace
Fire Marshal Arrives To Aid Investigation

The possibility of arson at the $500,000 Loblaw block fire Thursday night is being investigated by the Ontario Fire Marshal, Chief William D. Sorrie said today. The fire definitely did not start in the oil furnace said Chief Sorrie. Thursday night it was thought that an oil furnace explosion might have fed the blaze to other parts of the building, but this theory has been discounted. The oil furnace is located in a sealed-off room in the northwest corner of the Loblaw basement. It is separated from the rest of the building by a self-closing fire door. Several hundred gallons of oil in the furnace room were untouched by the blaze.

Focal point of the blaze was in the southwest corner of the building by the loading platform and unloading chute. The blaze got under way in this corner and may have been fed to other corners of the building by inflammable material stored near the loading platform.

SAW SMOKE

Some credence was lent to the arson theory by Ralph Salmon, co-proprietor of Western Tire and Auto. Mr. Salmon was one of the first to notice smoke seeping from Loblaw's basement when he was across the street visiting at the H. Cardwell company. He immediately rushed over to his own store and found that the power was off. Mr. Salmon made this check at 6.30 p.m.

Carl P. Greensides Loblaw manager made a check of the Loblaw building including the furnace at 6.25. By 6.32 when the fire department arrived the fire was well under way.

One reason for the rapid spread of the fire, said Chief Sorrie, was in the nature of the building itself. The fire was more or less in hand as long as there was oxygen in the sealed off basement. As long as there was oxygen the various foods and other inflammable materials below could burn, but after the oxygen supply was exhausted there was no room for the hot gasses in the basement.

The Loblaw store measures 120 feet from front to back. Actually the fire never really was under control, even in the early stages when it seemed relatively innocent. It was spreading from section to section in the basement, until there was nothing more to burn below. Then it became a spectacle as it licked up the northwest retaining wall between Loblaws and Western Tire and as the main floor collapsed into the basement.

PRODUCED EXPLOSION

It was probably shortly after 8:00 that expanding gases in the basement sought an outlet for their energy. The first signs of flames wer noticed at 8:16. After that the intense heat lead to an inevitable explosion. The back wall blew out at 9:50.

The fire damage might have been less, said Chief Sorrie, if the Loblaw building had been constructed differently. He said that firemen were unable to tell exactly where the fire was burning in the basement and so had to sometimes hack through in the wrong places.

Many supermarkets in the United States, said Chief Sorrie, are required by law to have eight-inch squares of quartz in the floor spaced regularly along the main floor corridors. Thus, in case of fire in the basement, firemen can look down through the translucent panes, see where the fire is worst, break the quartz and feed in a heavy cellar hose to the affected areas.

NO SPRINKLER

The Loblaw store had no sprinkler system. This might have been alright, said the chief, if there had been what he called a "perforated pipe" system. This system requires a series of perforated pipes crisscrossing the basement ceiling with outlets to the outside. Firemen can attach their hoses to these outlets and so ensure an even flow of water all over the basement. The perforated pipe scheme is cheaper than the sprinkler system.

Firemen are now draining off the last of the sludge from the Loblaw basement and Sunday two safes from Loblaws were dug up. These have been shipped to the Loblaw head office in Toronto. Total money involved is not known, but has been estimated in the neighborhood of $14,000.

Sunday, too, the front portion of Western Tiré and Auto collapsed, as a number of people, ignoring signs to keep clear, wandered about the ruins. Ice which had acted as a sort of solder for the brickwork melted in the mild temperature and the bricks came tumbling down, scattering the too-curious onlookers. Later the fire department came along with an aerial ladder and knocked over the rest of the front, while some 200 people stood around to watch.

Grim Struggle Against Religion Continues In Soviet Russia

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

LONDON—The crudities of the "League of the Godless" and the "anti-God" museums have long vanished from the Soviet scene. The Orthodox church, headed by the Moscow Patriarchy, has recovered some of its ancient pomp, and from time to time its bishops express solidarity with the regime. But the struggle against religion continues grimly; and anyone who thought that the death of Stalin might mark the end of this struggle will be interested by the news that the Leningrad Museum of the history of religion has just been reopened "after reorganisation."

The struggle is more subtle than it used to be—and more effective. In the old days the Bolsheviks made a direct frontal attack on Christianity as such, persecuting its upholders .Today they talk much less about Christianity, which is presented simply as a single religion among a hotch-potch of outmoded religions and superstitions. The idea, plainly, is to detract from from the significance of Christianity by writing it down to the level of astrology and fortune-telling.

WEAPON FOR WAR

One could spend some time in the Leningrad museum without realising that it is a weapon in the war against religion. In some of its sections it could be taken for a straightforward and instructive exhibition of comparative religions. There are valuable collections of Grecian, Egyptian and Indian sculpture and cavings; and the museum is particularly proud of its collection of Chinese religious images and Russian ikons. But the detached presentation of the glories of religious history soon gives way to propaganda.

For example, an mportant section is devoted to the history of the Papacy and the Inquisition: "The role of Catholicism in the service of the feudal lords and the bourgeoise; the cruel essence of the Inquisition . . . the persecution of science . . . demonstrations of the masses against the Papacy,"—and, to bring the whole thing up to date, "an exposure of the present-d. y Vatican and its subversive activity in the countries of the People's Democracies."

Even so, there is a marked change of approach. Instead of the old stridency of hatred there is at times a certain false benevolence of attitude, so that religion generally, and Christianity in particular, is presented not as the active enemy but as the relic of an outworn form which no longer really matters. Many of the prints now being made could, indeed, be endorsed by many broad-minded Christians in the West.

REAL ATTITUDE

But this is not the real attitude of the Communist Party. Side by side with the much-vaunted toleration of the Church there goes a steady persistent drive to root out religion from the minds of all Soviet citizens, and particularly the younger generations. The Kremlin is still pledged to exterminate religion. It is paying particular attention nowadays to the Comsomol, the Young Communist League, with its membership of sixteen million, and to the peasants on the collective farms. Special travelling exhibitions, complete with lecturers, move from village to village.

Stalin made his arrangement with the Orthodox Church for cogent reasons of State. The Church agreed to accept an extremely equivocal position in the belief that ultimately, if it could get an official foothold, it would win. But the resources of the State are all against it. And the new propaganda is cleverer than the old.

There has been no change fundamentally, since Lenin made his absolute rejection of religion. "In what sense do we deny morality and ethics? In the sense in which the bourgeoise preached it, deriving their ethics from the Commandments of God. To this, of course, we say that we do not believe in God, and we are very well aware that in the name of God it was the clergy, the landowners, the bourgeoise who were speaking, in order to promote their selfish interests. . . .

DECEPTION, TRICKERY

"We deny all such morality, derived from a supernatural, supra-class conception. We say that this is deception, trickery and corruption of the minds of the Workers and the peasants in the interests of the landowners and the capitalists . . . we say: morality is that which serves the destruction of the old exploiting society and the union of all the workers round the proletariat, which is building a new society of Communists."

We read this teaching brought up to date in a pamphlet widely circulated among the Communist youth leaders of today—"the preaching of faith in life beyond the grave and the summons to take thought only for 'the saving of one's soul' are radically hostile to Soviet-Communist ideology and moral concepts. Faith in life beyond the grave exhausts the believer ideologically, develops in him the feeling of extreme individualism and paralyses his will in the matter of the struggle for Communism. . . . It is necessary to carry out an irreconciliable ideological struggle against religion."

Miners Reject Offer To Settle Strike

TIMMINS (CP) — Preston East Dome Gold miners Saturday rejected a company offer to settle the seven-month strike of the mine's 400 workers.

The offer provided for a five-cent hourly wage increase but a withdrawal of the checkoff of union dues. The checkoff was in effect at the mine before the strike was called last July 12.

The settlement offer was submitted by the company earlier this week in a meeting with Labor Minister Daley and union officials in Toronto. The union officials rejected the offer but agreed to submit it to the union membership without recommendation.

It was reported almost the entire membership of the local union at Preston East Dome turned out for Saturday's meeting and only 10 voted to accept the terms.

Abbott Gives Tip To Country No Deficit Financing In '54

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Finance Minister Abbott has tipped the country: No deliberate deficit financing in 1954-55.

That tip was imbedded in his statement in Parliament Friday when he said the cabinet does not believe present conditions warrant adoption of "drastic or large-scale anti-deflationary measures."

For some time the government's "back room" advisers had been debating whether the government should try to meet the possibility of a recession by increasing the money flow through big tax cuts and balancing the 1954-55 budget through heavy borrowing.

This deficit financing in government operations is sometimes used as a weapon to fight deflation. The advisers concluded that this is not the time for such a move, that the recession is not so bad as it has been painted, and apparently the government has accepted their verdict.

NO BIG TAX CUTS

That means Mr. Abbott has decided to squeeze another year out of the "pay-as-you-go" policy. And no big cuts for the taxpayer.

The country's money supply is tightening. Mr. Abbott was reported to have told tobacco growers that when they asked for tax cuts on cigarets last week.

But the country's general economy is still humming along at a fast pace, notwithstanding a few misfires. A forecast of capital investment for the year, one oft he key economic indicators, likely will be made public in a few weeks.

The trade department has tightened its commodities division under the directorship of Denis Harvey, veteran trade expert and wartime naval commander, who has handled the division since 1950.

Reds Strong Challenge In India Vote

By IAN FAWCETT

NEW DELHI (Reuters) — The Congress party which governs India faces its strongest challenge yet from the Communists today when 4,000,000 citizens of the southern state of Travancore-Cochin go to the polls to elect a new state assembly.

It will be the most important election since Britain granted India independence in 1947. The state balloting shows for the first time a line-up of Communists and other left-wingers united in a concerted bid to oust the Congress party, headed by Prime Minister Nehru.

Nehru is confident of the election's outcome and has predicted that his party will win "by a thundering majority."

If Congress does win that kind of majority, it will deal a staggering blow to the Communist set-up in India.

But anything short of that, even a weakened majority, will mean a set-back for Congress. Such a set-back may drive thousands more Indians into the Communist fold and will certainly give the Communist party an incentive for fighting other state elections which are coming up soon.

ELECTORAL PLOT

The threat to Congress is made all the stronger in this election by an electoral pact which the Communists and Socialists have hatched. They have agreed to set aside their political differences and to fight the election together with the sole purpose of ousting Nehru's party.

The contesting parties for the 117 seats in the state assembly are Congress, the united left-wing front (Communists, Revolutionary Communists, and Kerala Socialists) and the Praja Socialists.

Congress is contesting all but one seat, the United Front 35, the Praja Socialists 37.

There are also 47 Independents running.

The political alliance between the Praja Socialists and the Communists is being used by Congress as the strongest plank in its political platform.

Congress speakers have argued in this month's vigorous campaigning that such a loose marriage can only result in an unstable government. The Communists and the Socialists, who have not been particularly leftist in the past, will be unable to agree on a common policy, they assert.

The Communists are basing their appeal on solving the unemployment problem, reducing land taxes and providing wider education. The Praja Socialists are following much the same line.

Says Packers Trying Wreck Hog Agency

WOODSTOCK (CP)—C. D. Black says Ontario meat-packing plants are making a determined effort to weaken United Livestock Sales Limited, central marketing agency for the Ontario Hog Producers Association.

Mr. Black, general manager of United Livestock, told the Oxford county branch of the association Saturday that packers pay truckers to deliver hogs directly to them instead of taking them to the Ontario stockyards at Toronto for sale.

He said truckers offer many excuses "in order that they may add to their income at your expense" by delivering hogs directly to the packers.

CLEANS CREVICES

Cotton-tipped sticks have found their way from the nursery to the dressing table. They also deserve a place among one's cleaning equipment. They are wonderful for getting at crevices in carved wood.

SAVES MONEY

You probably will lower your food bills a great deal if you avoid serving too-generous portions. It's best to serve moderate portions and invite second helpings.

If you had done like I said and bought one of those cars in the Examiner used car ads, you wouldn't have had to leave your arm for security.

Worry of FALSE TEETH
Slipping or Irritating?

Don't be embarrassed by loose false teeth slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, talk or laugh. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This pleasant powder gives a remarkable sense of added comfort and security by holding plates more firmly. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. It's alkaline (non-acid). Get FASTEETH at any drug counter.

Sturdy Males Serve Tea For Mr. And Mrs. Club Event

The pleasure of having afternoon tea poured and served to one by sturdy males wearing boutonniers on their business suits is still so infrequent as to be a novel experience.

Mr. and Mrs. Club of George St. United church again brought the men into service at the Valentine Tea, held in the Sunday school hall Saturday afternoon. There appeared to be no reluctance or hesitation on the part of the men, who were most gracious hosts in every way.

Mr. Archie Townsend and Mr. John Boswell did yeomen service at the tea table, handling sugar tongs dexterously, as well as the cream pitchers and teapots, and leaving Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Boswell to follow suit as well as they could.

On the table was a bouquet of beautiful red carnations, flanked with red tapers in silver candelabrae, and handsome silver trays and tea services were at either end. The handsome cutwork cloth was scattered with red arrows and pretty little heart baskets.

Red cupid cutouts and white lace-edged hearts made color highlights throughout the tea room, and on the stage, set on an artist's easel, was a large replica of the decorative old-fashioned Valentine card in which was inserted "Mr. and Mrs. Club."

Quartette tables for the guests were set with gay Valentine serviettes and centred with large hearts trimmed with flowers. Each server and tea assistant wore a bouttoniere or a cosage.

Presidents Mr. and Mrs. Willis Cleveland received at the door, assisted by the Rev. and Mrs. Arnold Mathews, and Mr. and Mrs. James Weaver and Mr. and Mrs. Garnet Howden ushered the visitors to tables.

Serving were Messrs Ivan Ellicott, Larry Seill, Stewart Thompson, Joe Weir, Art Long, Ivan Loveless, Al McDougall, Ev. Rosborough, Harry Gray, R. S. Hutton, George Siddal, Harry Cunningham, Harold Barnard, Stuart Bowman, Don Hamblin, Stan Colborn, Wendel Camm, Allan Milburn, Stuart Frey, Jim Henderson, Ken Best, B. Pammett, Clarence Anderson, and Bob Healey.

Some of the wives also served, and these included Mrs. George Bricklebank, Mrs. Harry Cunningham, Mrs. Clayton Bullock, Mrs. Harry Mather, Mrs. Joe Weir, Mrs. Stuart Frey, Mrs. B. Pammett, Mrs. John Brown, Mrs. Clarence Anderson, Mrs. San Colborne, Mrs. Jack Millar and Mrs. Fred Grant.

Replenishing the tables was looked after by Mrs. F. A. Hucks, Mrs. C. E. Allen and Mrs. R. S. Hutton. The kitchen was in charge of Mrs. Arthur Long, assisted by Mrs. Gordon Mullen, Mrs. Allan McDougall and Mrs. Russ Foster, and listed among the helpers during the afternoon were several men.

At the home baking and candy table there were men helping too, and they were kept extremely busy. Mrs. Stewart Thompson was the convener and assistants were Mrs. R. Healey, Mrs. R. Hancock, Mrs. Don Gillespie, Mr. R. Frestri, and Mr. F. A. Hucks.

Members and guests' children were accommodated in an adjoining room where Mr. Clayton Bullock entertained them with movies. Mrs. Rae Kelcey was in charge of the nursery.

Only in the field of the background music for the tea hours were the men excluded. Mrs. Harry Race, Mrs. Ivan Ellicott and Mrs. Allan Milburn took turns at the piano.

New Nylon Bed Cap Is Said To Hug Head Through Night

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Whether or not you set your hear nightly, you will find it more manageable in the morning if you wear a night cap.

Pin curls will stay pinned or curlers will remain in the comfortable position you arranged them. If you don't set your hair, your tresses will take any amount of tossing and turning without tangling.

Devotees of night caps have had one problem: To find a cap that was both pretty and practical.

There have been many gay wisps around that could be worn quite becomingly and that would do a good job of hiding unsightly curlers, but only for a time. By morning these caps would have worked their way completely off the head.

Some women have remained faithful to heavy net night caps that could be pinned to stay on indefinitely. Though they weren't the most attractive things one could wear, they certainly did the job of holding the hair in place.

To expect both practicality and prettiness, some said, was asking too much, but others held out hope.

Now the maker of famed feminine accessories says that it can reward the hopeful. The company has introduced a night cap made of nylon tulle trimmed with non-tarnishable gold thread and topped by three tulle bows for a beguiling effect.

On the side of practicality, the cap is puckered with several rows of elastic so that, the firm claims, it will stay in place through endless tossing and turning. For extra security, one might catch the cap with a few rubber-tipped bobby pins.

Girl (above) is donning a pretty elasticized nylon net cap that is said to stay on the head of the most restless sleeper.

Girls' Work Board Tea Held As Valentine Event

Changing the date of their annual tea may have brought luck to the Peterborough Girls' Work Board. The event has formerly been held late in the spring and on the last several occasions ran into rainy weather as well as house-cleaning time in many homes of the affected.

Held on the Saturday afternoon before Valentine's Day, and just a week after the National CGIT Week observance, it was found that interest was high and the attendance decidedly pleasing. About 250 gathered, which was thought to be a much larger crowd than last last year.

Members of the Work Board took charge of the tea arrangements and were assisted by members of the Leaders' Council and of the CGIT groups of the city. Proceeds will mostly go to the CGIT summer camp which is financed and managed entirely by the Board, with some government assistance.

Decorations in the YWCA Green Room were in the Valentine theme, of course, and gave evidence of ingenuity and craftsmanship developed in CGIT work. For instance, the very dainty and attractive hearts of pink net and red ribbon were fashioned by bending wire coat hangers to the shape, and covering them.

The tea table was laid with a handsome cloth with allover lace insets and the centrepiece was in the style of an epergne with the top bowl filled with big red carnations and the base bowl with cedar.

Tea pourers were mothers and daughters, Mrs. W. J. Armstrong and Eileen, who is president of the Girls' Cabinet, and Mrs. Milton Clysdale and Arlene, vice-president of the Cabinet.

Servers were CGIT members, Gerry Vinette, Velma Hendren, Barbara Bonney, Carol Douglas, Norma Crowe, Gail Butler, Margaret Hawthorne, Shirley Whitnell, Beverley Rome, Dorothy Wells, Donna Mason, Donna Leonard, Norma Simpson, Ellen Brown, Francis Dunk and Lorraine Rowe.

A feature of this tea is the musical entertainment which is provided by the young pianists of the various CGIT groups. Those who played on Saturday were Carol McGinness, Carol Orves, Arlene Clysdale, Nancy Wood, Nancy Ball, Beverley Weatherstone, Anita Horton, Iris Sisson, Joan Rowe, Nancy Girven and Lynda Payne.

Work Board chairman Mrs. A. E. Denure received the guests, assisted by Mrs. A. C. Ferguson, president of the Leaders' Council.

Mrs. C. H. Crowe was general convener of the tea and board members assisting were Miss Jean Smith, in charge of serving, Mrs. E. A. Outram, Mrs. B. L. Hooey, Mrs. D. L. Gilmour, Miss Joan Fletcher, Mrs. Max Spears and Mrs. Tom Cook who was in charge of the decorating.

Mrs. M. J. Curtis took charge of the home baking table and Mrs. W. Prest, Mrs. W. Borland and Mrs. A. Smedmor assisted there. Mrs. Aletha Mansell took tickets at the door.

A candy table was operated by the girls, with Joan Krogh as convener and Molly Brown and Ellen Marie Buckland assisting with sales.

A display of the girls' craft work was in charge of Carol Noyes.

Mrs. Matthews was in charge of the program.

DOROTHY DIX

Woman Bored With Her Own Company

DEAR MISS DIX: I am so confused I don't know where to begin. Seven years ago I lost my parents and, being the only girl at home, I undertook the responsibility of the house. I don't go out much because my friends are all married. I don't even have a neighbor, as the people around me are of different nationalities and I don't understand them. I don't like to go places alone, and am tired of sitting home night after night with no place to go. I'm in my late 30's. When my church gives a dance, I don't go because I never learned to dance. How can I make my life more pleasants?

JOYCE C.

ANSWER: You may be sure, Joyce, that unless you do get out, no one will ever come knocking at your door with an offer of friendship. You lament all the things you never had a chance to do; well, now is the time to do them! You can't dance; take dancing lessons. You don't understand the people around you; get out among them and make an effort to be friendly. No matter what their nationality, they, like you, all have troubles and will probably welcome a person to talk to. This may not seem like the ideal solution to your problem now, but the important point for you to absorb is that you must make a beginning! Life most certainly isn't over in the late 30's and you must learn to make the best of the years ahead, instead of lamenting the past. Since you have a family, but no sisters, you must have brothers! Don't they have friends they can bring home? These visitors would help you to get used to people.

Begin by taking courses in some subject that will help you in a job or in something that's just fun. Go to a dancing studio and learn a few steps so that you can participate in the parish activities. Join the women's group of your church, and work. Don't just sit around waiting for people to bounce up and give you a big welcome. Volunteer to help at the next bazaar, card party or church supper. Then, you'll get a rousing welcome by any church group. Get that far, Joyce, then if you don't see your way clear to a happier, more useful life, write again.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 17 years old and have been going steady with Dan for several months. He's at sea now and will be away indefinitely. Recently I began dating Ed, a former sweetheart. I like Dan better, but would like to keep Ed's friendship, too. Is that possible?

Flossie

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: What you want is the social security of a beau at hand, which certainly is a natural wish at 17. There's no reason why you should have to be pledged to either Don or Ed, unless one of them makes an issue of the matter. Try to make both boys realize that you are very young, and that in another year or two you will be more able to make a choice.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Last summer I met a wonderful girl, but her mother has never approved of me. I'm 38, she's 24 and we are of different faiths. When I met this girl, friends warned me to be careful since she had just broken off with a man she had dated for three years, and that I had caught her on the rebound. There are signs now that the girl and her former beau are going to patch things up.

Tom R.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: It seems fairly obvious that the friends were right. You were a convenient date to tide the girl over a bad period, and she probably never realized how serious you were getting. Why don't you try to find a lady in your own age group and of your own religion? There are many of them around.

Here's Hint For Housewife Planning Return To Career

By ALICIA HART,
NEA Beauty Editor

Are you one of the many housewives who will turn to a career now that your youngsters are no longer children? If you are planning to make the change shortly, you should take an entirely different view of yourself.

Combining home management and a job, even a part-time one, may prove too taxing unless you set up a good plan for living.

You'll want to be sure there will be time for everything. When you can see how a task fits into your schedule, you won't waste time (and energy) worrying about getting things done.

As a career woman, your approach to grooming will be different, too. Things that seemed luxurious before will now be essential to maintaining your stepped-up pace. Restful baths scented with oils, pedicures and manicures, reclining frequently in the beauty-rest position (with feet higher than head), all these will be of great help to you in adjusting to your new mode of living.

Selection of new clothes will require considerable thought. We assume you can't afford to buy an entirely new wardrobe. Yet, many of your afternoon dresses and hats will not be appropriate for business wear.

Your best bet, then is to invest in one good tailored suit and a carefully-made basic dress. One or two simple hat-bar hats and a couple of pairs of plain, dark pumps will be good choices.

With these garments as the foundation of your business wardrobe, you ought to manage quite well. As you go along, you can buy accessories to change their moods. In the meantime, you are likely to have blouses, scarves, gloves and jewelry in your present wardrobe that will serve the purpose well.

Doll-Size Pins Are Beauty Aid

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Glamor is where you find it and one very well-groomed woman we know found hers at a toy counter.

This woman, like so many of us, finds that she frequently has to catch a wisp of hair here and there with a bobby pin.

But bobby pins, everyone will agree, should not show for daytime wear. In some instances, barrettes might solve the problem, provided one like barrettes.

With the advent of dolls with curable hair, our friend realized her problem was solved. We think her solution should work for a lot of you who have hair that needs bobby pins to keep it in place.

She uses dolls' bobby pins.

These little pins work as well as the regular size and they do their job behind the scenes, leaving the line of your hairdo undisturbed. No one can notice that your hair is pinned in place.

So, next time your little girl does her shopping, you might inquire about the doll-size pins. You'll probably find that they are just the thing you've been looking for at cosmetic counters.

Mother's little helpers (the new mechanical kind) promise to be versatile, dependable and ingenious — everything a little helper ought to be.

On parade at the recent National Housewares Show, new gadgets and gimmicks and good sturdy old-timers in bright new clothes stuffed Chicago's Navy pier.

Roaming the aisles, I noted several I'd like to invite to help out with the housework. All of these are either in stores now or will be soon.

A new rubber sink rack, for example, is so simple it's a wonder we haven't seen it before. Sized to fit the bottom of either a double or single sink, the rack helps to protect glasses and china from chipping.

It also guards the sink from unsightly scratches from pots and pans. Looks to me like it would be useful for washing and draining large leafy vegetables too.

Ingenious, space-saving utensil is a three-quart aluminum sauce pan packaged with five different inserts. Included are a corn-popper lid, french-fry basket, custard cups and steamer plate, a utility pan-double boiler top and a safety drain pan cover that permits you to pour off boiling water without scalding hands.

Another multipurpose space-saver is an egg beater with interchangeable double beaters, a special single beater and a flat perforated cream-whipping disc that works as well on a little cream as it does on a lot. Coral is a new color in this old-time line.

Speaking of colors, porcelain enameled ware blossoms out in all shapes and sizes in rainbow lemon, lime, tangerine mint green and a baby pink and blue for the nursery.

Along with pretty new colors comes a new idea in cooking that I'm curious to try. Aluminum heat rods, 10 inches long with tapered tips and a ridged head, are designed to be stuck into fowl, roasts or potatoes. These rods cut cooking time and reduce shrinkage. Makers say that they conduct heat to the interior of food, slicing 25 per cent from cooking time and 35 per cent from shrinkage.

If you've ever been vexed by a too-short ironing cord, you'll be interested in a new electric iron outlet (approved by Underwriters Laboratory) built into a standard-sized ironing board.

The outlet's six-foot cord plugs into a wall socket and the iron plugs into the outlet giving you use of the full length of the iron cord.

Worth mentioning, too, especially if you have trouble stringing clotheslines, is a disappearing clothes dryer from which lines unroll like a window shade. This boasts five parallel plastic-coated wire lines (150 feet of hanging space) attached to a steel spreader bar.

When not in use, the bar nests into a weatherproof aluminum housing which is mounted with two bolts onto a wall, post or fence. When needed, you pull out the bar, the lines unreel — and the bar locks in a bracket mounted up to 30 feet away.

A locking lever governs tension. Thanks to simple keyhole slots for the bolts, the whole contraption can be slipped off and quickly mounted indoors or out to suit the weather or your needs. Just have two or three sets of bolts placed wherever you think you'll want to hang the clothes.

Mary Moore Answers Her Readers

QUESTION: I am asking you to tell me what is wrong with the following recipe for Mock Angel Food . . . also my recipe for cream puffs which do not seem to puff out and are not hollow—Joyce M. F.

ANSWER: I did not reprint the recipes you outlined, nor do I want to criticize them for they may be recipes from food editors that know. Consequently I will give you my tested recipes for both the products you mention.

MOCK ANGEL FOOD

(Only egg whites are used in this cake—not whole eggs as you mentioned in your recipe.) Sift cake flour and lightly measure 1½ cups and sift it 4 times with 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt. Slowly and thoroughly stir into them 2/3 cup hot (not boiling) milk—this takes about 2 minutes. Add 1 teaspoon almond flavoring or vanilla. Beat 2 egg whites until stiff and fold into the batter until just mixed—as you describe in your recipe. Bake in greased or ungreased tube pan at 375 deg. Fahr. for about 20 or 25 minutes. This cake is like angel food cake but not as tender and must be used up quickly as soon as it is cold, for it toughens on standing. If it does not rise evenly try raising the temperature to 385 deg.—for your oven may be registering a little low.

CREAM PUFFS

One-half cup butter, 1 cup boiling water, 4 medium-sized eggs, 1 cup stirred but not sifted flour. Heat together the water and butter to boiling point, and add flour all at once, remove from heat and stir until smooth and mixture leaves sides of pan. Add unbeaten eggs, one at a time, stirring vigorously until smooth between each addition. Drop by dessertspoonfuls on buttered baking sheet, 1½ inches apart, making them circular and slightly piled. Bake at 475 deg. Fahr. for first 12 minutes, then reduce heat to 400 deg. They require about 30 minutes. To test, take one from oven. If it does not collapse all are baked. When cold slit at sides to admit whipped cream or cream filling.

LETTER: I read with interest your answer to a correspondent concerning her proposed visit to England. I have lived in Canada for 6 years now and was home in England for 7 months in 1951, and believe me there has never been any shortage of herbs and spices. Fresh "pot-herbs" may be bought at most greengrocers all through the year, or canned ones such as we use here, purchased at any time. Canned salmon is exceedingly short supply—only two allocations per year to the grocer and of course, established customers come first. Canned butter, shortening, salmon and chicken and also tongue would be the best things to take, as there is a plentiful supply of dried fruit now. Cake mixes, jello powders, all these are plentiful and the candy in England is of far higher quality now than any I have tasted here, particularly the distinct specialties such as Windermere toffee, Kendal mint cakes, Doncaster butter drops, to speak of only a few . . . by the way do urge your correspondent to wait to buy shoes in England, they are so much better and cheaper than here, also sweaters and other garments of wool, particularly children's clothes, but to buy her lingerie, nylons etc over here, also any dresses etc. of the new fibres, as they are not as well known in Britain.—Marjorie H.

ANSWER: Thank you Marjorie. I know this will be helpful to many more travellers than Mrs. Tinning. It was most enlightening to desk-bound me.

QUESTION: Thank you so much for the nice personal note . . . I do love those children of yours and enjoy their activities and yours as much as the recipes . . . the problem that at present is bothering me is this—my husband and I are invited to a pot luck supper at the church. We are new members and I hated to confess to anybody I had never attended one of these affairs before . . . I was told to bring anything . . . what can I take that will be extra nice. —Helen P.

ANSWER: I have omitted some of your letter but your candour is so refreshing Helen . . . Once I took to a pot luck supper my biggest casserole full of hot scalloped potatoes on top of which I had baked overlapping slices of smoked back bacon ¼-inch thick. I managed to get a whole pound on. I did this because the slices were small, everybody who wanted to taste could have one and sample the potatoes underneath too. Everybody wants to sample everybody else's contribution. A meat loaf is a good thing too—but be sure it is a beauty—for your reputation stands or falls on this kind of a do. Take what you make the very best and looks attractive.

Warn Rail Workers To Curb Demands

OTTAWA (CP) — Railway labor got an admonition from the board of transport commissioners today.

The board dealt with the issue in a judgment handed down at a time when the major railways and the largest group of their employees are deadlocked in negotiations over employee benefits estimated by company spokesmen as costing possibly $60,000,000 a year.

The commissioners suggested that disputants take a "realistic" view of the affect of incrasing labor costs on railway business.

The transport board, saying that increasing labor costs have been the biggest single factor in boosting railway expenses and freight rates, expressed fears that the railways are being priced out of some business and the employees out of jobs to some extent.

Sudbury's Fire Loss Lowest In History

SUDBURY (CP) — Sudbury's 1953 per capita fire loss was the lowest in the city's history, it was shown in figures released today by fire chief W. L. Andrews.

The net per capita loss was 14 cents. The record high was 1951 with a per capita loss of $1.75.

Property damage in 1953 was $49,415, of which $43,150 was covered by insurance, leaving a net loss of $6,265.

New Cold Wave Headed For Europe

LONDON (Reuters) — A new cold wave moved in on Europe today and gave Scandinavian nations their iciest spell of the winter.

It is expected to move south in the next few days and hit countries now enjoying a thaw from the arctic blasts of last month. British weather forecasters said the cold snap may miss Britain this time—fog is forecast instead.

Pontiff's Voice Weak On Radio

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Vatican radio rebroadcast today a four-minute message by the Pope. The pontiff's voice, weak and hesitant after his recent illness, had been recorded at his bedside over a period of two days.

The Vatican announced today that the 77-year-old pontiff's recovery is continuing, "although slowly." The announcement said the Pope's diet "continues to be more satisfactory daily, and it is expected that soon indirect means of feeding can be discontinued."

For the first time since his confinement three weeks ago, he was able to leave his room Sunday to hear mass next door in the private chapel of his Vatican apartment.

His address marked a day of prayer for the ailing in connection with the church's commemoration of the Marian Year—the centenary of the Catholic dogma of the Virgin Mary's immaculate conception. Translations in various languages went out over Vatican Radio today.

Fathers And Sons Banquet Together

The Christian Business Men's committee held its annual father and son banquet, with 125 men and boys present, at Murray St. Baptist church. After a home-cooked meal and presentation of prizes, an evening of music followed.

The Rose Musical party, led by Dave Walker, provided enjoyment and Christian blessing with their numbers. Wilfred Rose gave a vibraharp solo of "Now I Belong To Jesus," and the ensemble closed with "In Loving Kindness Jesus Came."

Art Rose, of Toronto, said, "the need today is a action, not words, for which we must be in one accord, working together."

Father Of Six Alarmed For Future

KITCHENER (CP)—Seven years ago Mrs. William Ferguson gave birth to a son, Joseph.

Three years ago she gave birth to twins, Gail and Garry.

Saturday in St. Mary's Hospital here Mrs. Ferguson gave birth to triplets—two girls and a boy.

Mr. Ferguson is viewing the future with apprehension.

The Fergusons live in a three-room apartment.

The Fergusons moved here from Port Arthur in 1949.

Russia Splits Top Honors With Finland

FALUN, Sweden (AP)—Russia and Finland split top honors in the opening events of the world skiing championships Sunday and left no doubt they're the ones to beatt in other competition this week.

Finland's jumping ace, Matti Pietikaeinen, carried off the world title in the jumping competition. And Russia's Vladimir Kusin won the 30-kilometre cross-country race.

The best American skiers could do was a tie for 13th place in the jumping by Keith Wegeman of Camp Hale, Colo., and Art Devlin of Lake Placid, N. Y.

2 CANADIANS ENTERED

Two Canadians were entered in the ski jumping and one in the cross country.

Jacques Charland, 23, of Trois Rivieres, Que., 1953 Canadian jumping champion, finished 22nd with leaps of 70 and 71½ metres for 104½ points.

Ted Hunt, 20, of Vancouver, considered western Canada's most promising jumper, finished out of the top 25 with jumps of 56½ and 76 metres for 151 points.

Clarence Servold, 25, of Camrose, Alta., North American champion in 1952, finished 45th among the 56 contestants in the cross country with a time of 2:07:77.0 for the 30 kilometres.

Mr. Bryden will mention the new soil conditioners such as Krilium with a film from Monsanto Chemical Co. explaining its properties in loosening soil and generally building it.

Rushing to the garage, Mrs. Keele pulled her husband outdoors. He was unconscious five hours in hospital before medical treatment brought him round. He is recovering.

Canada Buys Meat From N.Z.

BY J. C. GRAHAM

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — The largest shipment of New Zealand meat sent to Canada in some years leaves Auckland next Saturday aboard the steamer Paparoa. The shipment consists of selected cuts of high-grade lamb prepared especially for the Canadian market.

Last year the New Zealand meat producers board sent 800 tons of lamb to test the Canadian market. It sold well and Canadian merchants were enthusiastic about its quality.

This year's shipment consists of small parcels sent on a trader-to-trader basis from New Zealand exporters to Canadian importers. The meat producers board hopes to develop a specialized trade in selected cuts.

Increased New Zealand dollar earnings would allow greater purchases by New Zealand of essential supplies in Canada.

The tri-weekly Soviet Sport said in its Thursday issue the players incorporated greetings to both countries' chess players in their cables.

In Toronto, the Canadian-Soviet Friendship League of which Dyson Carter is president said this is Canadian-Soviet friendship month and observances including concerts and other entertainments are being carried on across Canada.

300 Extremists Stalk Out

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Three hundred Communist and Hindu extremist deputies walked out of the Indian parliament today, charging Prime Minister Nehru's government with a "callous attitude" toward the fatal stampede of Hindu pilgrims at Allahabad Feb. 3.

Communist deputy R. Chakravarty charged the "diversion of police" to attend Nehru and other officials attending the Kumbha Mela bathing festival at which the stampede occurred "had a direct part in this disaster."

He added that "the whole country was shocked" when Nehru and President Rajendra Prasad attended a tea party at the Allahabad governor's house the afternoon following the stampede.

Choked with anger, Nehru told the chamber that he saw the tragic happening from a high rampart of a nearby fort and "this occurrence came as a deep sorrow."

Reservations Still Held On Diesel Power

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian railways' program of shifting from steam to diesel power is viewed with some reservatons by the board of transport commissioners.

In a judgment dismissing a railway application for a basic change in Canada's freight rate system, the board suggests the Canadian carriers should not expect diesels to increase efficiency to the same extent as in the United States.

One of the reasons advanced for the proposed rate change was that the CPR wanted to be in better position to finance capital expenditures that include a large-scale diesel program. The company told the board it is buying no more steam engines.

NOT MUCH SAVING

The board said it has been trying to find out why the CPR's investment in diesels to date "does not on the face of it reflect greater savings and consequent additional earnings." It was satisfied that there had been "some over-all net returns" from the investment.

Increased costs for labor and materials, "has tended in considerable part to consume the benefits" from dieselization, the board said.

The board suggested Canadian railways should not go in for diesels as fast as lines have done in the U. S, where they can cash in on thicker traffic density.

Throw Back Rebel Attack

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP) — The French high command announced today that troops defending Luangprabang have thrown back a Communist-led Vietminh attack by advance rebel units who crossed the Mekong river about eight miles north of the Laotian royal capital.

The communique said the Vietminh forces, estimated at battalion strength, were repulsed after fierce fighting in which both sides suffered losses.

French defenders also tangled with rebel troops in the Suong river valley, about eight miles northeast of Luangprabang, putting them to flight.

A French spokesman said about 1,500 Vietminh guerrilla troops around Luangprabang's defence lines have been reinforced by an undetermined number of regular rebel units.

But the bulk of the Vietminh forces were reported still about 45 to 50 miles north of the capital city.

Russians Use Ships In Port In Italy As Listening Posts

By JOHN CAIRNCROSS

ROME, (OFNS) — Naples is the headquarters of the AFSE (Allied Forces, Southeast Europe). There is hardly a week when there is not at least one Allied warship in port. And United States arms for the Italian forces are constantly being unloaded at its docks. Naturally the Russians are most interested in what goes on there.

An Italian naval officer has observed that he had never seen so many Russian vessels cruising in the neighborhood as at the last NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organisation) manoeuvres off Naples. And it is surely more than a coincidence that, while previously Russian ships never stayed more than a fortnight, the "Andreev" has been at Naples for the last fifteen months.

Originally, repairs to the ship were scheduled to take from five to eight months. The Neapolitan shipyards, spurred on by the local Communists, made a special effort and completed the job in record time — only to learn, to their great chagrin, that the work had to be done all over again. (They were already feeling annoyed at the ship's refusal to respond to the "spontaneous" welcome organised by the Party.) Since then, on one pretext or another, the stay at Naples has been protracted. The Andreev is due to leave this month — and almost at the same time another Russian ship arrives for repairs, which will no doubt prove equally extensive.

The ship has been termed (by an American officer) a "thorn in the flesh of our warships' movement in the Mediterranean"; and there is little doubt that the "Andreev" has made the fullest use of its opportunities. A U.S. official affirms that numerous photographs of the inside and outside of American warships, and including shots of the latest apparatus, have reached Moscow. It is assumed that the regular visits effected by engineers from the Russian Embassy in Rome ensure liaison with headquarters. These visitors are free to move about the shipyards both in Naples and Genoa.

But the counter-intelligence services of Italy and the Nato countries have not been inactive.

It was known that every Russian ship has its political commissar. But, since his identity is concealed from most of the men, how was the "Andreev's" commissar to be tracked down? There were several clues. First, all the sailors aboard the "Andreev" except for the captain and a certain Peter Melnklik, were clearly Mongol, and non-commissar, types. The captain could be ruled out at once. The commissar is usually a separate official, and in any case, the captain was distinguished chiefly for his fondness for Italian wines. It was noted, too, that the emissaries from the embassy at Rome hobnobbed with Melnklik.

But conclusive identification was obtained in true Italian style, by using the services of a Neapolitan lady. She is a colorful character in all senses of the word. Her dress is made up of the most impossible ties, which she cajoles out of her clients.

But the approach to the Russians proved difficult. Members of the crew of the "Andreeve" are allowed out only for a short time and in parties of four, of whom one is responsible for the good conduct of his mates. Contact with local beauties is strictly forbidden. Nevertheless one of the sailors succumbed to the siren's lure, and, duly surprised by the Italian police, was induced to reveal the commissar's name. This information has, of course, greatly eased the task of keeping an eye on the gentleman's goings on.

Some Italian papers, rightly indignant at the latitude accorded these ships, have been urging that a salutary degree of reciprocity be applied, and the "Andreev" and other Russian vessels subjected to the same draconian treatment meted out to Italian ships in Russian ports. But the Italian authorities, being good democrats, hesitate to descend to totalitarian levels.

Fortunately there is a more cheerful side to the story. The amorous episode is held to show that Russian invaders would be Neapolitanised in twenty-four hours should they ever set foot so far south. Indeed, between Stalin's death and Malenkov's taking over, the whole crew ran riot, and ventured as far affield as Capri, Pompei, and Sorrento.

Short addresses were given by Mr. Maxwell and District Scout Commissioner Cotton.

A presentation was made by E. J. Wolff to Dr. J. N. Perry, former president of the Peterborough Boy Scouts Association, for his outstanding contribution to scouting in Peterborough.

Guest speaker John Pierce, Ontario Land Surveyor, gave a most interesting talk on "Life in the Wilds", which dealt with the winter experiences of his surveying group while on their 1953 survey in Northern Ontario.

A delicious dinner was served by the Scout-Cub Mothers' Auxiliary. The following were in charge of the food arrangements: Mrs. Russell Cole, General Convenor, Mrs. Oscar Jamieson, Mrs. Harry Dunham, Mrs. Jack Nichols. The very attractive table decorations were designed by Mrs. J. Hendry with the assistance of Mrs. R. Scrutton and Mrs. Blain Till.

Part-Time Prospecting Makes Two Millionaires

GERALDTON (CP) — Three Geraldton men, of moderate means a year ago but now millionaires as a result of part-time prospecting, started a staking rush in an area of base metal deposits 65 miles southeast of here that has been going strong for the last five months.

The three men found a copper-zinc deposit, apparently lost part of it, then got it again when two prospectors who had staked 18 claims failed to record them within the 30-day period set by Ontario mining law.

Today Roy Barker, 53, a carpenter, William Dowidowich, a lumber camp foreman, and John Forster, an automobile dealer, each hold 100,000 shares of Geco Mines Limited valued at about $12 a share.

They turned their claims over to the company last August for 450,000 shares. Each man optioned 50,000 shares back to the company.

Each man's parcel of 100,000 shares today is worth about $1,200,000 on the listed market.

NO LUCK FOR YEARS

The three men are students of base metal mining who prospected for years without any real find. But early last year they discovered the base metal deposits about 35 miles north of Lake Superior in the Marathon district.

The three filed their claims last July, immediately after prospectors Fred Bergquist and Windy Sam Perchilac, both of Fort William, failed to record 18 claims in the heart of the discovery area within the required time limit.

The Fort William men had been looking for nickel, and decided not to record their claims when little was found. But they returned in September when news of the Geraldton men's copper-zinc discoveries leaked out and a staking rush began.

Mining claims inspector Tom Christianson of Port Arthur says he thinks between 5,000 and 6,000 claims have been staked.

BUFFALO, N. Y. (AP) — Nine persons face arraignment this week on charges that they were involved in a $75,000-a-month gambling operation in Buffalo and Erie county.

The six men and three women were picked up by police Saturday in raids on five homes and a store. All were booked on charges of gambling and conspiracy.

Erie county district attorney John F. Dwyer said the information came from wiretaps obtained under court order. He said the suspected gambling operation involved betting on horse races.

Sheriff Arthur D. Britt said the operations of the group extended across the border into Canada and as far south as Florida.

Misunderstanding Of Talk Causes Tour Controversy

OTTAWA (CP)—Advance planning for the Duke of Edinburgh's whirlwind tour of Canada's subarctic this summer has stirred up an international argument based on an apparent misunderstanding.

On Feb. 5 a tour-arranger told the Canadian managing editors conference at Windsor, Ont., that a special press-radio-and-movie plane would be provided to move reporters to outlying spots in the Yukon, Northwest Territories and Labrador.

R. C. MacInees, public relations director of Trans-Canada Air Lines who is working with government officials on the arrangements, said —off the record — that only 13 places would be available in the plane to cover Canadian and other news agencies and radio, photo and television services.

Editor and Publisher, New York trade magazine, in its issue today reported: "The Canadian government appealed to the managing editors of Canadian newspapers. . . to refrain from giving next summer's visit of the Duke of Edinburgh the blanket, all-out coverage customary for royals tours."

WOULD LIMIT COVERAGE

The trade magazine quoted Mr. MacInnes as saying that to encourage the Royal Family to visit the country more often Canadians would have to get away from the idea of the full-blown royal tour. It added: "The tour arranger said the way editors can help is by assigning only a few reporters and photographers to cover the story.

On its editorial page, Editor and Publisher said: "We can't recall a similar request in any free country during peacetime. It seems ridiculous to us to ask local newspapers to hold back in telling their readers about the duke when everything he does will be news. If the newspapers agree to this, or are restrained in their coverage, the readers can only wonder what it is they have not been told and thereby lose confidence in their press."

Mr. MacInnes today denied that he asked the editors to refrain from giving all-out coverage.

He explained: "I told the managing editors that all possible accommodation would be available in Ottawa, Vancouver and other major points on his itinerary. The whole purpose of my talk to the managing editors was to arrange fullest possible coverage. I said a special plane would be provided for the subarctic tour. The only restriction mentioned in my talk was the purely physical one of accommodation in the plane.

"I made it clear that any publication undertaking coverage on their own initiative would be offered every co-operation in delivering the copy or photographs to a point where better transmission facilities would be available than those at the isolated points."

T. N. Morrison, managing editor of the Welland-Port Colborne Tribune and acting president of the conference said it was unfortunate Mr. MacInnes' speech had been misinterpreted.

"It was quite clear to those attending that MacInnes was just short of space in the northland plane. Everyone knew that papers interested could spot men through the north independently. You just can't transport 100 reporters across the barren lands the way they were shipped by train for the 1951 royal tour."

Yale Frowns On Stock Deal

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP)—The "learn by doing" method of education didn't work out so well for a Yale freshman class in introductory economics.

Instructor Robert E. Will mentioned during a lecture last week what he thought was a good buy in the stock market: Canadian stock known as "New Brisiol Oil Ltd."

About 15 freshmen raised more than $500 and asked Mr. Will if he'd invest it for them, as they were minors. Will did, but now he's going to sell the stock.

Prof. Lloyd G. Reynolds, head of the department of economics, read the story in Friday's Yale Daily News, the student publication, and quickly informed Will that while it was not illegal for him to invest for the students, Yale does frown on this sort of thing.

The News said that when the stock was purchased it was selling for $1.50 a share but added that the latest quotation was $1.45 a share.

The students, according to The News, had purchased 360 shares.

Require Staff of 335 At UN To Keep Building, Miles of Glass Shining

By A. I. GOLDBERG

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—If you're tired of doing housework, m'am, it may help to know of a place that has 2,000,000 square feet of floor to be swept every day and nearly seven miles of carpet to be vacuumed.

Or if your husband complains about washing the windows, tell him here's a building that has 5,400 of the double-hung variety to be washed every 40 days—inside and out.

On the other hand, there's a crew of 335 to do the dirty work—and dirty work it is to keep the United Nations buildings looking clean and shining.

Smoke and acid in the air make it a major project to keep a polish on the eight huge nickel doors Canada donated for the entrance to the General Assembly building. They're dulled within 24 hours.

LOSING BATTLE

Keeping clean the mammoth pool fronting the glass-and-marble skyscraper has become a losing battle. Built with the pennies and nickels of American school children, it's decorated in alternate bands of white and black stones—the latter from the Greek isle of Rhodes. But the soot and dirt made it impossible to keep the white stones white. Now they're going to be covered with a hard white paint in a last-ditch try to make them glisten again.

The clean-up job goes on nights and week-ends, as well as on the day when 11,000 visitors, employees and delegates troop in and out of the 39-storey secretariat skyscraper and the round-domed assembly.

The 25-foot-high plate glass window walls in each of the council chambers, conference rooms, delegates' lounges and public lobbies must be washed down with special equipment. There are also 45-foot-high picture windows in the south end of the General Assembly building and 110-foot high windows in the north end which require constant attention.

WASHED SEVERAL TIMES

Glass doors have to be washed several times a day. There are 8,500 panes of glass in partitions to be done on rainy days.

Nearly seven miles of draperies and curtains have to be cleaned periodically, at least 324,000 venetian blind slats have to be dusted, and 6,000 upholstered chairs need cleaning occasionally.

Much of the UN work is done by hired crews, although the UN may take on its own cleaning work some day.

GARAGES SANDED

But it has on its maintenance staff five upholsterers to patch worn or cigaret-burned furniture covering and broken chair legs and arms.

The floors of the UN underground garages are sanded and cleaned every night to remove oil that employees might otherwise track into the other buildings.

Another chore each day is to sterilize 500 water jugs and 1,500 glasses. Six machines produce ice cubes so that every UN delegate will have a glass of cool water in front of him.

Six gardeners have to care for 20 varieties of plants inside the building, washing them leaf by leaf, giving them special plant food, moving them in and out of dark areas. Plants even get ultra-violet light to make up for the sunshine they miss. Outside there are 1,500 rose bushes and 185 flowering Japanese cherry trees.

LOGY, LISTLESS, OUT OF LOVE WITH LIFE?

Electrical Engineers Recruited In Britain

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Canadian companies announced Sunday that they have sent representatives to Britain to recruit electrical engineers.

William R. Pritchard of Montreal, employment supervisor of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada and Elbert H. Hayes, chief engineer of the Northern Electric Company here, are scheduled to begin a five-week tour of British universities today.

Mr. Pritchard said in an interview they hoped to recruit 20 engineers. Northern Ireland and Holland might later be included in their itinerary.

"The demand for electrical engineers has risen so rapidly in recent years that Canadian universities have not been able to meet our requirements," he said.

Four ways to get a

NIAGARA LOAN

Need money? Then the four different ways you can borrow at Niagara Finance will interest you.

First, domestic loans . . . These are sometimes called 'husband-and-wife' loans—they alone sign—it is arranged in about 24 to 36 hours and enjoys widespread popularity amongst Canadian couples.

Second, car or truck loans. Here's one of the fastest ways to borrow money. It's very easy to handle, both from your point of view and ours. Motor owners can apply by mail or in person. Only the owner of the car and truck need sign. Details are often completed in as short a time as 10 minutes.

Third, loans on business equipment . . . Businessmen like this service because it is fast and trouble-free. The business equipment acts as a backing and loans are made in accordance with value. Only the owner needs to sign ...an excellent answer for temporary financial shortages.

Fourth, loans on farm machinery—stock . . . These loans have been especially designed for farmers' needs. And of importance to them—seasonal payment plans are available on loans over $500. Such loans are completed with little delay.

Besides loan plans which fit the needs of almost everyone, there are two good reasons for you to pick Niagara Finance for money requirements. Loans to $1500 are life insured at no extra cost to you. And rates on many Niagara loans are lower . . . in other words, you get more for your money! For full information, just drop in anytime or phone.

Say Calm Mind May Slow Growth Of Some Cancers

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—A happy, calm mind may be a good defence against cancer.

So far there is a little evidence that being serene emotionally, can slow down the growth of cancers. Studies under way here are going even further to learn if the ability to handle the stresses of life easily could prevent cancers from developing.

There is a tie-up between some kinds of cancers and the body's output of hormones. Certain hormones make some cancers grow faster. And many kinds of stress, from worry to fear, anger, frustration, excitement, can stimulate the output of hormones.

This interconnection between emotions, glands and cancer is the basis of new studies being made at M.D. Anderson Hospital for Cancer Research of the University of Texas by Drs. Beatrix Cobb and Jack Wheeler, psychologists of the department of psychosomatic medicine, and Dr. Jack Trunnell, head of the experimental medicine.

ENZYME GOOD BAROMETER

A first step concerns men with cancer of the prostate gland. This gland produces a chemical, an enzyme known as acid phosphatase, which is a pretty good barometer of how active the cancer is. More enzyme gets into the bloodstream when the cancer is growing actively; less when the cancer is quiet or under control.

The medical team sometimes finds a sharp drop in the enzyme when men with this cancer enter the hospital for treatment. The mere fact of being in the hospital makes the cancer grow slower.

Why does this peculiar thing happen? A reason could be a change in mental outlook, more peace of mind. The man may no longer be worrying about whether to seek treatment, or may have overcome his fear of surgery, or is avoiding stress because now the hospital, not himself, is responsible for decisions.

If that's true, then any new stress or worry should increase the enzyme in his blood, meaning his cancer was growing again.

To test this, Drs. Cobb and Wheeler are trying to create psychological stresses. In one experiment, a man was made to feel frustrated, angry at himself. There was a sharp increase in the "tell-tale enzyme during three days of the test, then it dropped when his problem was solved. But the increase had appeared a day before the test began; and so could be coincidence.

More persons will be tested to see if stress affects the growth of cancers of the prostate, the breast and thyroid, and melanomas or black cancers.

If peace of mind and avoidance of stress really help against cancer growth, patients could be advised on cultivating peace of mind, such as heart patients are advised to avoid excitement.

Won't Allow Indian Troops To Go

S. Korea Insists On Guarantee Of Saftey of 76 PoWs

SEOUL (AP)—South Korea warned today that additional Indian troops "will not leave here" until this republic is assured of future safety for 76 Korean war prisoners now en route to India.

The Koreans did not spell out the implied threat to use force if they consider it necessary.

The decision was announced in a letter to Lt.-Gen. K. S. Thimayya, Indian chairman of the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission.

The letter, signed by Lt.-Gen. Woh Yong Duk, was made public by South Korea's office of public information.

3,000 REMAIN

About 3,000 Indian troops which guarded unrepatriated war prisoners have left for home, and about 3,000 remain in Korea.

The 76 Korean prisoners had asked to be sent to neutral countries rather than to North or South Korea. The Indian command ordered them sent to India until arrangements are made for them to live elsewhere.

South Korea has demanded assurances that removal of the prisoners was "voluntary and destinations freely selected by them."

Police Called To Quiet Council

SUDBURY (CP)—In a stormy four-hour meeting at which Mayor Dan Jessup had to call uniformed police to the door to keep order, city council Monday night decided against continuing rent controls when the Ontario government drops them March 2.

About 400 persons, including tenants, landlords and other property owners, crowded the council chambers.

During the early part of the meeting, heckling was so loud and continuous that the mayor got little attention. He pounded the desk repeatedly with his gavel.

Plainclothes policemen mingled with the audience, but uniformed police had to be called in later when the crowd threatened to get out of hand.

Spokesmen for the tenants were told to "Shut up." The tenants waited their turn and shouted, "Sit down" at speakers from the landlords' side.

Mob Attacks U.S. Library

NEW DELHI (AP) — A violent Communist-led mob attacked the United States information offices library in the heart of Calcutta tonight as an outgrowth of a teachers strike there, smashing windows and setting fire to the library, according to telephone reports reaching New Delhi.

Reports to the United States embassy here from Thomas J. Needham of New York, consulate public affairs officer in Calcutta, said police fired tear gas in a battle to control the demonstrators.

Reports said there were no injuries among American personnel.

B. R. Mitter, an Indian employee of the U.S. library, said the mob pulled books from the library shelves and set them on fire. The blaze was quickly controlled.

As he spoke, said Mitter, two police vans were upset and burned by the mob outside the library while the sound of heavy firing was heard as police battled thousands of wildly shouting demonstrators.

TWELVE AND ONE-HALF TONS OF PORK products took a tumble early today on Highway 28 at Highway 7A intersection when a Herb Payne Transport slewed into the west ditch and toppled over. The driver applied brakes on the greasy pavement to avoid hitting a bread truck in front of him, and an approaching car, Mr. Payne said. A tow truck arrived on the scene about 10:30 a.m. and later righted the vehicle that lay half-way across the highway. Owners estimate the damage, at first glance, to be about $1,000; driver Trevor G. Colby of Bruce St., was unharmed. —(Examiner Staff Photo)

Would Lower Berlin Barriers

BERLIN (AP)—The Western Ministers may propose to Russia immediate steps to make life more bearable inside divided Germany by lowering barriers between the Eastern and Western zones, it was learned today. Such an easing of border restrictions is considered one positive gain which might be salvaged from the wreckage of Big Four efforts here to unify Germany and make a German peace. American officials said Foreign Minister Molotov probably would be asked to agree to a meeting at once of the high commissioners of Russia, the United States, Britain and France for the purpose of removing or lessening barriers between the Communist East and Free West.

Points that may be taken up include:

1. Reopening of interzonal crossing points. This would facilitate especially truck transport.

2. Elimination of the "death zone," a quarter-mile-wide strip of plowed land on the Soviet side of the East-West zonal frontier. Any German caught in that area without permission is liable to immediate gunfire from Communist police.

3. Restoration of telephone service and streetcar lines between divided East and West Berlin.

One line of reasoning is that if the European Defence Community, now awaiting French approval, is finally set up, the position of the West will become so strong that Russia will give up hope of ever taking over West Germany, and may then be induced to consider a reasonable German unity program.

EDC KEY FACTOR

In this connection, it was noted today that the Big Four conference battle for France appears ended after a clear-cut French rejection of every major proposal made by Russia in the last three weeks here.

It is not known, however, what damage Foreign Minister Molotov may have done to the cause of the European Defence Community Treaty, soon to be brought up for ratification by the French parliament.

In what was doubtless his major speech of the conference, Foreign Minister Bidault Monday analyzed the Soviet package deal for a European security pact which would neutralize Germany, push United States assistance out of Europe and make Russia the sponsoring power in a "Molotov doctrine" for the Continent.

Bidault turned it all down. He denounced the proposals one by one as not contributing in any big way to peace.

Soviet Russia Wants Revive Trade With Canada

OTTAWA (CP)—Soviet Russia wants to revive trade with Canada—a trade that now is virtually non-existent. Ambassador D. S. Chuvahin, who came here in October, told a group of parliamentary press gallery correspondents Monday night that his country is ready to start negotiations "right now". He said a commercial attache will join the Russian embassy within a month and handle all details if Canadian authorities are willing to negotiate.

In this connection, he said Soviet authorities "regard favorably" a statement last Jan. 4 by Trade Minister Howe that Canada is willing to enlarge trade with Russia.

Mr. Chuvahin, short, portly and affable, is the first Russian ambassador since 1945 when the embassy's cipher clerk, Igor Gouzenko, fled his job and delivered to Canadian authorities documents which resulted in the espionage trials of 1946. Canada recently appointed John C. Watkins, former minister to Norway, as ambassador to Russia.

AMBASSADOR NOT INVOLVED

Georges Zarubin, previous Soviet ambassador, left Canada before the spy ring broke. A subsequent royal commission report said he was not involved. He now is ambassador to the United States.

Will Free Prisoners Giving Skin Grafts

KINGSTON (CP) — William M. Nickle, member of the Ontario legislature for Kingston, said today Attorney-General Porter and Reforms Minister Foote have agreed to free two Kingston county jail prisoners who gave skin grafts to a badly-burned hydro employee.

The men, Edmond Morton and Thomas Cota, both 29, volunteered on the understanding they could not expect a reward. Both now are in the Hotel Dieu Hospital recovering from the operations.

Mr. Nickle said they will be freed after they are released from hospital in about a week or 10 days.

Morton, serving a 30-day sentence, would normally be due for release Feb. 26 and Cota March 6.

Mr. Nickle said he also recommended to the justice department that the sentences Morton and Cota are serving be quashed and that they be given certificates of character.

Police Smash Rome Outbreak

ROME (AP) — Heavily-armed riot police quickly smashed the first outbreak of violence today in connection with a Communist-called one-day general strike in Rome.

More than 500 persons, including about 50 demonstrators, were taken into custody. Most of them were accused of distributing unauthorized hand bills and failing to obey police orders.

Three policemen suffered minor injuries. They included a police commissioner hit by a stone.

Flying squads of police in their red riot jeeps dashed into the crowd of several hundred demonstrators as they marched through one of downtown Rome's main streets, snarling mid-day traffic.

The Red-led walkout had twin aims—to boost wages and to harass the shaky new government of Premier Mario Scelba.

The strike was staggered in timing and appeared only partly effective.

Scelba, a foe of communism who formed the riot police six years ago, meanwhile sat down with his new cabinet—Italy's fourth government in seven months—to work out answers to growing demands of labor for higher wages and other benefits. He already has hinted that pay boosts are in the works for some government employees.

Biltmores' Coach Suspended One Year

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association announced today that coach Alf Pike of Guelph Biltmores has been suspended for one year for taking his team off the ice in a game at Toronto Sunday.

Bill Hanley, OHA secretary-manager, said the suspension was automatic under OHA rules and will be in effect until Feb. 14, 1955.

Transport Skids, Turns On Side On Highway 28

As helpless as an upended turtle, one of Herb Payne's huge tractor-trailers lay sprawled acrbss the ditch on Highway 28 at the turnoff to Cavan, nine miles south of Peterborough on Tuesday.

Loaded with beef, hams, and 400-pound drums of lard, the truck was heading for Toronto this morning through a drizzling sleet. It was 6:30 a.m. when it hit the ditch and workmen were still trying to figure how to get it right side up at 11:00.

The driver, Trevor G. Colby, of 12 Bruce St., swerved off the right lane to avoid a stalled bread truck. Another car proceeding north forced him to cut back in sharply, and put on his brakes. As a result the tractor-trailer jack-knifed into the right hand ditch and turned over on its right side.

$1,000 DAMAGE

Total damage, estimated at $1,000, is probably more to the perishable cargo than to the truck itself. Most of the damage to the truck was near the couplings where the truck was astride the shoulder.

This morning workmen under the direction of Herb Payne were busily unloading the van of the truck to make it easier to set aright and to keep the cargo more or less intact. Sides of beef sat on the further bank of the ditch, the brown paper wrappings flapping in the breeze while cables were put under the truck to hoist it up.

Total cargo of the six-ton trailer was estimated at 25,000 pounds.

News Editor Dies Suddenly

BRANTFORD (CP) — Arthur Tempest Whitaker, 63, a newspaper man for 48 years and news editor of the Brantford Expositor since 1915, died suddenly today at his home.

He was known among newspaper men as a fast and able deskman, with a prodigious memory and a flair for instructing newcomers.

A native of Keighley in Yorkshire, England, he broke into newspaper work with the old Guelph Herald in 1906. In 1908 he moved to Brantford for two years as a reporter with The Expositor. Then he headed back to Guelph to become city editor of The Mercury, succeeding novelist Thomas B. Costain. He returned to The Expositor in 1913 as a reporter and two years later was appointed news editor.

GREAT PARKS BOOSTER

Among his varied interests, he was best known for parks work. He was a member of the Niagara parks commission for 10 years and founder of the Ontario Parks Association of which he became honorary life president after three years as president.

In 1941 he received the Carter Gold Medal awarded from the Ontario Horticultural Association.

He took an active part in politics, and held various offices in the Brantford Liberal Association.

He had been Brantford correspondent for The Canadian Press since the national news co-operative came into being in 1917.

Surviving are his widow, a son and a daughter.

Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Unions Purge 7 Top Men

BERLIN (AP)—East Germany's Communist trade unions disclosed today that a new purge has swept seven top leaders into disgrace. The action, second in eight months, indicates continued opposition among the membership of Red rule.

The ousters were announced in a communique issued by the Communist-controlled "free German trade unions." It said the seven were dismissed for permitting "agent activity" against Communism, and disclosed that two already have fled to the west.

The purge affected half the organization's 14-member board of governors.

The first purge of the organization's leadership occurred immediately after the June 17 workers' revolt in East Germany.

Today's statement did not mention that uprising, but in the general accusation of "agent activity" made it clear there has been farflung opposition to Red rule, dissatisfaction with working conditions and, in some cases, outright political opposition.

Heads For Pakistan

Prime Minister Popular On Rome Visit

ROME (CP) — Canada's prime minister flew out of Rome today on the fifth leg of his round-the-world goodwill tour after a hectic three-day visit in the Italian capital.

Prime Minister St. Laurent's RCAF C-5 transport plane roared off Rome's Ciampino airport this morning for Bahrein, British-protected island in the Persian gulf, where he'll spend the night before going on to Karachi, Pakistan, Wednesday.

Italy's new premier, Mario Scelba, who welcomed the Canadian leader to Rome Friday night, was at the airport with members of his cabinet to see the Canadian party off.

Pierre Dupuy, Canadian ambassador to Italy, and other Canadian officials and members of Rome's Canadian colony, also were on hand at the airport to bid farewell.

TALKS WITH LEADERS

During his visit the prime minister conferred with Scelba, former premier Alcide de Gasperi, president Luigi Einaudi and other leaders, and was guest of honor at several receptions and banquets.

But he appeared rested and in good spirits at take-off time despite his heavy schedule, which also included some sight-seeing and a visit to the Vatican.

A tentatively scheduled audience with the Pope was cancelled because of the pontiff's weakness following his grave three-week illness. However, the prime minister talked with the Pope's pro-secretaries of state and received the latest information on Pope Pius' health.

The prime minister lunched at the Canadian pontifical college where Canadian Roman Catholic priests study in Rome. He also called at the Canadian embassy to meet the staff, and gave a brief talk.

The prime minister was a state guest of the Italian government during his stay here.

Wm. J. Buck Hits Dynamite With Drill

Dummer Resident Dies Instantly In Severe Blast

NEPHTON (ENS)—The first mining fatality at the property of the American Nepheline Mines occurred when quarryman William John Buck, 45, of the 9th Line of Dummer township, was killed instantly at the property on Monday at 3:30 p.m.

Buck was operating a plugger-type rock drill when his machine bored into a "blind" blasting hole that contained an old charge of dynamite and detonator. The explosion is said to have blown him several feet; he died instantly from head, leg and body injuries. Mr. Buck was alone on the machine when the accident happened.

General mine superintendent Joe Wright said today that Buck was working on a new location of the quarry and that his drill struck an old blast hole that had not been discharged during some past blasting operation.

SECOND ACCIDENT

Although this is the first fatality at the property during working hours another accident happend a year ago during lunch period when Austin Stevenson climbed onto a moving mine truck to ride up to the quarry to resume work; Austin slipped and the truck wheels passed over his body. He died as result of injuries.

Dr. H. E. Gastle of Lakefield was called to the scene of the accident on Monday and also coroner Dr. H. G. Carleton who said an inquest would be held. Corp. Fred Rawlings and Const. Wally Mohns of the Provincial Police investigated.

Mr. Buck is survived by his wife, the former Agnes Chard, and a four-year-old daughter, Kathleen; brothers, Percy of Millbrook and Leo of Norwood; and sisters, Mrs. William Kirk (Elizabeth), of Pittsburg, Mrs. Max Fowler (Lila) and Mrs. Walter Cox (Viola), both of Peterborough, Miss Selina Buck of Peterborough, and Mrs. Melville Patton (Margaret), of Norwood.

Mr. Buck was educated in Dummer township and was a member of the Norwood United church. Funeral services will be on Thursday, at 2 p.m., from the McConnell and Warner funeral home, Norwood, for burial in Norwood cemetery. The Rev. H. K. Wright will officiate.

BROADER TRADE

300 Flee Floods Across Ontario, Report 2 Drown

TORONTO (CP)—Two persons were drowned and more than 300 persons have been driven from their homes in Ontario as heavy rains and mild weather sent creeks and rivers on a flood rampage. Arthur Lawrence, father of five children, was drowned in Callahan's lake near Sault Ste. Marie when a tractor plunged through weakened ice. A companion, Donald Emergy, fought his way to safety. At Winona in the Niagara peninsula, Ricky Pettifer, 4, was drowned Monday when he was swept under a ledge of ice in a swollen creek a few yards from his home. His body was recovered.

In Highland Creek valley a few miles east of Toronto, four families were marooned for an hour Monday in a house they had entered before the flood began. An ice jam broke upstream, raising the water level around the house to three feet. They were rescued by men in a rowboat.

Waters three feet deep invaded one home on the Credit river near Brampton, 15 miles west of Toronto. The residents were rescued with a rowboat.

Four other families in the same area also were flooded out. They were taken to higher ground in tractors, trucks or by wading through the flood waters.

TWO SCHOOLS CLOSE

At Stratford, two schools were closed when their basements were flooded and furnaces failed. More than two inches of rain fell in the area in 24 hours.

A half-inch of rain was general through most of southern Ontario. But mild temperatures melted snows to increase the flooding.

At Pickering near Toronto, Duffin's creek overflowed its banks onto Highway 2, flooding it 15 inches deep. Traffic had to take a five-mile detour for three hours.

One family on the creek banks was evacuated by rowboat. The flood spread after ice blocks jammed at a bend in the creek, forcing the water back and over the road.

DETOUR AT OSHAWA

At Oshawa, school children were forced to detour about five blocks when Oshawa creek overflowed

OTTAWA (CP) — Mayor Lloyd Jackson of Hamilton today headed a delegation which placed before Labor Minister Gregg problems of unemployment in the Hamilton area.

The group was closeted with the minister for 2½ hours. The delegates described their discussion as "very pleasant" and said they and the minister left the meeting "understanding each other perfectly."

Murder Suspect From U.K. Discovered Shot

COLOGNE, Germany (Reuters) German police here today found the body of a man believed to be wanted by London police for questioning in connection with the death of two women in a home for the aged last week.

The police said the man, a British citizen, had shot himself through the head.

Police would not release the man's name, but said he was about 45 and that his description answered that of a man sought by Scotland Yard in the murder of two women in an old folks home at Ealing, a London suburb, last Thursday.

STRANGLED MATRON

One of the women was Mrs. Isobel Chesney, 43, estranged wife of former navy officer Ronald Chesney, 45. The killer strangled the chic matron in her sheer nightgown, then placed her in a bathtub full of water.

Then, surprised by the dead woman's 73-year-old mother, Mary Menzies — who called herself "Lady Menzies" — he whirled on her, battered her head in and strangled her.

The man's body was found in a forest on the outskirts of Cologne. A pistol was found in one hand.

Fake Policeman Grabs $10,831

TORONTO (CP)—A man dressed in a policeman's uniform today grabbed a brief case containing $10,831 in cash and cheques from a woman clerk and escaped in what police called one of the boldest robberies in years.

Police said a man dressed as a police officer appeared at the office of the Prudential Insurance Company in suburban Etobicoke. He was believed to be an officer who was to accompany clerk Eleanor Harrington to a bank across the street with weekly receipts.

Once outside the bank with Miss Harrington, the man said, "I'll take it," grabbed her brief case containing $8,340 in cash and $2,491 in non-negotiable cheques, and fled in a car that had been parked nearby.

Arkansas Tornadoes Kill 1, Injure 24

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Tornadoes struck in two widely separated sections of Arkansas last night, killing at least one person and injuring 24.

A twister that hit the Whitton community in east Arkansas killed one man and hurt four others.

A tornado also dipped into Clarksville, in west Arkansas, injuring 20 persons and wrecking more than a score of buildings. Most of the injured were attending a basketball game in a college gymnasium when the twisting wind smashed the building.

Montreal Customers Sad As Price War Ends 17-Cent Breakfast Nice While It Lasted

MONTREAL (CP) A "truce" was called Monday night in a price war that has gladdened the hearts of customers of two town of Mount Royal restaurants.

The price of two eggs, toast and coffee has soared back to 40 cents after three happy days when the public enjoyed the meal for as little as 17 cents.

The armistice was reached after a brief meeting between Robert Schachter, a drug store proprietor, and Bernard Deguire, owner of a cigar store next door. Terms included taking down signs advertising cut rates and a return to regular prices.

The trouble started, Mr. Schachter said, when the opposition stuck up a sign offering eggs, toast and coffee for 29 cents. His store was quoting 40 cents for the same meal.

"We put up a sign advertising them at 19 cents and he put up a sign offering them for 18 cents and so on."

Mr. Deguire said he cut the price of the meal in retaliation against the drug store selling cigarettes at cut rates.

Says Frost Handcuffs Road Inquiry

Public Accounts Committee Said Handicapped

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario's Legislature, warmed up Monday by opposition charges of "hand-cuffing" the public accounts committee in the investigation of alleged irregularities in the Fort William division of the department of highways, today will hear an address moving the adoption of the speech from the throne.

The address will be given by Arthur E. Jolley, Progressive Conservative member for Niagara Falls. His motion will be seconded by William G. Noden (PC—Rainy River).

The motion will open general debate on the throne speech read at the opening of the Legislature last Thursday by Lieutenant-Governor Louis Breithaupt.

The opposition rose in a body Monday as Premier Frost made a statement after John Pringle (PC—Addington) tabled a special committee's report nominating the members of the standing committee. In so doing, the premier said that as some questions are already before the courts it has been decided "that to safeguard provincial interests and rights, disclosures should be made only in court."

"A SMART MOVE"

He said the question of limitation of powers of enquiry of the public accounts committee will be left in the committee's hands.

Liberal leader Farquhar Oliver said Mr. Frost was "not pulling the wool over our eyes."

"He is simply moving forward in a smart political move which he hopes to smother the situation."

He said the premier had "not only handcuffed the committee but I can see an astute political move."

CAN'T GIVE FULL TIME

He said that due to heavy work in other committees, members may not be able to give their full attention to the whole question.

"And a preponderance of government members of the committee could overrule any objections."

Members of 17 standing committees were named. The committee on government commissions was scheduled to hold its first meeting today.

Invite Pleven To Visit U.S.

PARIS (Freuters)—The United States government has invited Defence Minister Rene Pleven to visit Washington when he has completed his current inspection tour in Indo-China, it was announced today.

The object of the visit will be to review the military situation in Indo-China with members of the U. S. national security council, it was stated.

But defence ministry officials here think it unlikely that Pleven will be able to accept the U. S. invitation, since he would want to submit first a full report to the French cabinet.

Gen. Paul Ely, chief of staff of the French armed forces who is accompanying Pleven in Indo-China, is likely to go to Washington instead, officials said.

MORE ABOUT—

Soviet Russia

Correspondents representing 16 newspapers and news agencies went to the embassy at 8 p.m. by special invitation.

This probably was the first time a Soviet ambassador had initiated a press conference and the correspondents were given no indication of the subject matter in advance.

Mr. Chuvahin read a brief statement to the effect that his country is ready to do business with Canadian importers and exporters.

NO OTHER DISCUSSION

He declined to reply to questions on any subject other than trade and he had nothing to say regarding payment. Such questions would be answered by the trade attache.

However, he said Russia can sell Canada manganese ore, diesel fuels and petroleum products, cotton and probably many other commodities.

Russia would be ready to buy freighters, textiles, agriculture machinery, butter, meats, rawhides, and other commodities. She might even buy some wheat if that were desirable to maintain a good trading relationship.

For many years there has been virtually no trade between the two countries.

In the first nine months of 1953, Canada exported $466 worth of commodities to Russia and $128 worth in the corresponding period in 1952.

In the similar period of 1953 Canada bought from Russia goods to the value of $433,964 and in the first nine months of 1952 the figure was $1,665,526, almost entirely composed of undressed furs.

Worker Lit Cigar Starts Flash Fire

Firemen answered a call to the new Zeller store extension on Simcoe St. at 1.30 p.m. Tuesday. The fire, which was in the basement, did not cause any great damage and did not get out of control.

Chief William Sorrie said that the blaze had started when an employee of Bradford—Horstall contractors, Neil Huggins, struck a match to light his cigar. The flame started a flash fire on newly-lacquered timber. The chief considered the painter was fortunate to escape serious injury.

DON HENSHAW

Don Henshaw Dinner Speaker To Open Drive

Don Henshaw, senior executive of the MacLaren Advertising Agency, of Toronto, will be the speaker at the Peterborough Red Cross and Community Funds teeoff banquet March 5.

Peterborough is "very fortunate" to have such a speaker, Russel Baer, publicity chairman of the campaign, said Tuesday. He is "one of the outstanding public speakers in Canada, if not the very best."

Mr. Henshaw is the "same high calibre" speaker as the CBC's John Fisher. He has written extensively in the field of public relations and is equally well-known for his work as speaker at such events as the Community Chests dinner.

Michigan-born, Mr. Henshaw was one of the pioneers in U.S. radio. He was a sportscaster, drama-writer and program director for American stations in the 1920's before moving to Canada.

In Canada, Mr. Henshaw stayed to aid development of dramatic programs on the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission, forerunner of the CBC. Later he switched to advertising and public relations work and joined the MacLaren agency.

All canvassers and Community Chests workers, more than 400 in all, are expected at the opening dinner in the CGE cafeteria March 5. A CGE committee under Benjamin Smith is making all arrangements for the banquet, and the CGE is donating all food and facilities.

Also at the banquet will be representatives from all ten agencies benefiting from the Community Chests drive for $100,000. Presiding will be Chest chairman Alex Elliott.

Because of the generosity of the CGE and other contributing organizations, said Mr. Baer, the opening dinner costs the campaign nothing. Free dinner music will also be provided, this by the Salvation Army.

Denies Knowledge Of Beer In Car

"You must have been seeing things," said 16-year-old Douglas Tripp, 100 Kent St., when OPP Constable Gordon Gray acused him of having beer in his car outside Brookside dance pavilion on January 23.

"Then Constable Feeley must be seeing things, too, because he saw the bottles as well as I did," answered the constable.

Tripp continued denying any knowledge of the beer when he was charged in court today with having a carton and some bottles in his car at the dance. He considered that the beer had been "planted" in his car by someone else. Harold Smith, who was with Tripp, denied owning the beer.

Both the constables testified to seeing the beer in the car early in the evening. When they returned at the close of the dance the bottles and carton were lying on the ground.

Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, thought the evidence extremely suspicious, but not strong enough to warrant a conviction. The case was dismissed.

All Groups Lower In Light Trading

TORONTO (CP) — All groups were lower in light early afternoon stock market trading today.

Papers, utilities, financial institutions, foods, steels, refining oils, agricultures and constructions were all lower. Industrials lost more than a point on the exchange's index. Manufactures showed the only slight gain in mixed trading.

All golds categories slipped slightly in quiet trading with East Malartic, down 10 cents, leading the juniors, and Mining Corporation, down 37½ cents.

Home, down 40 cents in the western oils, led the group lower.

Noranda and Falconbridge led senior base metals lower with 25-cent losses. Juniors were slightly down with penny losses. Uraniums and Bathurst - area base metals were down in dull trading.

True Bill Returned In Murder Charge

SUDBURY (CP) — A true bill was returned today by the grand jury at the Supreme Court of Ontario spring assizes here in the case of three Montreal men facing a joint charge of murder.

Jean Guy Tenaire, Robert Desleuriers and Emile Bedard are accused of killing Francis (Frank) Asselin near Sudbury Oct. 10, 1953.

Wife, Mother Get Blackeyes, Charge Husband

A family quarrel, which involved the alleged beating of a young wife and a mother-in-law, was aired in court today when Philip Marshall Greene, Young's Point, was charged with assaulting Mildred McIlmoyle, his mother-in-law.

Conducting his own defence, Greene pleaded not guilty. He intends to call two witnesses when the case resumed on Thursday.

Mrs. McIlmoyle said that on the night of January 23, herself, her daughter, Betty, and Greene, had drunk some bottles of beer in their house at Young's Point.

At about midnight witness and her daughter had gone to the family truck, intending to drive over to see some friends. Greene had objected and tried to pull the two women out of the truck. In the ensuing ruckus both women had collected black eyes and bruises. Only when Mrs. McIlmoyle's husband had come out of the house had Greene left.

DENIES ASSAULT

Greene denied the assault although he admitted that he had attempted to stop his wife and mother-in-law from going out.

He considered that they were going off to finish an argument with another woman that had started in the South Beach hotel earlier in the day. He thought they must have gone later in the night and had received their bruises there. He also considered his wife had not been in a fit condition to drive.

To Crown attorney John A. Bradshaw, Greene said that the brawls were quite frequent occurrences. After one of them he had wound up in St. Joseph's hospital.

The hearing will be continued Thursday.

into a street.

The Humber river at Nobleton about 15 miles north of Toronto was also reported in flood.

At Strathroy, the Sudenham river overflowed its banks and covering flats for 500 yards at 10 a.m. today. Three miles of Highway 81 from Strathroy north to Highway 22 were practically impassable.

In mid-town Strathroy, flood waters rose to danger proportions. Alexandra Park, home of Strathroy doctors, was under 10 feet of water.

At Exeter, the Snell Brothers garage was flooded. Water was up to the hoods of cars. Cellars all over town were flooded.

Men of the village of Wellesley, 20 miles northwest of Kitchener, were summoned by fire whistle today to help bolster the sagging village dam. They worked feverishly placing sandbags to bulwark the dam. Some homes are flooded.

The village of St. Jacobs, eight miles north of Kitchener, is having its worst flood in 10 years. One factory has been shut down and the Conestogo river has overflowed its banks in some areas.

At Hamilton, electric switches in a Canadian National Railways yard were made useless when a rock slide blamed on heavy rains felled a hydro pole. Commuters' trains were delayed 40 minutes.

At London, five families were taken from their flood-surrounded homes in rowboats.

At Collingwood 35 miles east of Owen Sound, a dam broke and drove 200 persons from their homes on Oak street. More than 50 homes were surrounded by several feet of water.

Ambulance attendants wearing waders entered the home of Mrs. Bert Pitch at the height of the flood, and took her to hospital. The 55-year-old woman has been ill for some weeks.

The south branch of the Thames river, many feet above its normal level tumbled through soggy countryside south and east of London.

The river streamed through the "cut" at Ingersoll, then spread over hundreds of acres of flatlands to the west.

Employees worked overtime Monday at Globe Mills Ltd. in Meaford to move $100,000 worth of finished goods before floods struck the plant, and waters of the Big Head river flooded the plant to a depth of 18 inches.

The plant was shut down today and officials expect it will remain closed for two or three days. Meaford is 20 miles east of Owen Sound.

Windsor shared with the rest of southwestern Ontario in the damage, delays and floods.

Flooded basements were reported in many parts of the Windsor district.

GOLF COURSE IS LAKE

Continuing rains further aggravated flood conditions in most of Lambton county today.

Much of Bright Grove area near Sarnia was under water and Lake View golf course was a miniature lake. Thirty miles farther northeast at Port Franks the school was closed because of the flood.

Canada's Move Sparked U.S.

KINGSTON (CP)—Canada would still be waiting for the United States Congress to make up its mind, with the outcome as doubtful as ever, if this country had not already prepared to build the St. Lawrence seaway, Transport Minister Chevrier said Monday night.

He noted that the U.S. Senate recently approved a measure for the U.S. to build two canals in the international rapids section of the joint project.

"The information we have is that the House of Representatives may follow the same course. . . The progress of the Canadian plan seems to be bringing a change of heart in Congress."

In a speech prepared for delivery at Queen's University as the final lecture in a series on the seaway, Mr. Chevrier also noted that the U.S. federal power commission has approved a licence for the New York power authority to develop the U.S. share of the St. Lawrence power. The project must be undertaken before the seaway can be started.

Calls Exhibit Art 'Nightmare'

MEDICINE HAT (CP)—Librarian R. M. Block has protested against the "obnoxious and tawdry" exhibit of 36 water colors selected by the National Gallery of Canada which opened here Sunday.

Mr. Block Monday referred to the exhibits as a "nightmare" and "immature dabblings."

The exhibit, which contains the works of many well-known artists, also drew criticism from the public library board and the community art class, sponsoring agent here for the western and national art circuits.

Mr. Block called the show a "cheap and juvenile imitation of surrealist and abstract efforts, without any firm foundation of imagination or conception."

The exhibit includes works by such artists as Andre Bieler, ARCA; Jack Bush, ARCA; B. Cogill Haworth, ARCA; Tom Hodgson, J. W. G. MacDonald, William Ogilvie, William Ronald and William Winter.

Pet Cockatoo Cleared In Mistress' Death

MATLOCK, England (AP) — A pet cockatoo named Cocky was formally cleared today of any connection with the death of his mistress, Mrs. Minne Fletcher, 74.

A coroner ruled that Mrs. Feltcher died of natural causes after collapsing in her cottage last Sunday.

Cocky, whose beak and claws were gory when the bloodstained, unconscious woman was found on the floor of her bedroom, had apparently pecked at Mrs. Fletcher after she collapsed. The woman died without regaining consciousness.

Russia Fails, Make Showcase Of East Berlin

LINDSAY (ENS).— Russia has failed miserably in their attempt to make East Berlin "the showcase of their kind of freedom," said John Fisher, internationally known commentator and reporter, at the annual Chamber of Commerce dinner in Lindsay Monday night.

Diverting from his usual subject, Canada, Mr. Fisher devoted most of his time to his visit in 1953 to Germany and particularly East Berlin. He stressed the contrast between the two sectors of Berlin. While the difference at night was notable, it was much clearer during the day when the people of the two sectors could be seen at work, he said.

In commenting on Germany, he said the country was posing a new kind of threat to Europe in matters of trade and commerce. Urban industry has great power because of the supplies of labor, the growth of dedication to hard labor by the people, modern equipment in factories and the low taxes and costs.

The German people, he said, were a likeable people, but they had two weaknesses: (1). They are still willing to be led, and can be by any powerful leader; and (2) they still nurse hatred and humility for their Russian conquerors. They may yet precipitate a clash with the Russians which could involve all the western powers, said Mr. Fisher.

UNFAIR CRITICISM

Mr. Fisher visited the Canadian troops in Germany during the time "the bombshell" concerning their morale and morals was bursting in Canada. He attacked the "bombshell" publicity stating "it's not right to malign the army —you wouldn't catch the communists doing it . . . and it's unfair to generalize about any group."

He suggested the distance from home these men were stationed, the youth of many of them, and the need for adjustment to European manners and morals, had caused much of the trouble.

Mr. Fisher was introduced by magistrate R. I. Moore and thanked by Mayor A. E. Hick. President of the Lindsay Chamber of Commerce, K. G. MacDuffee, was chairman of the dinner.

There remains the question whether the Western Big Three can pull out of the conference some hope of ending the Indo - China struggle this year. This may come up Wednesday night, on the eve of the conference adjournment, when Bidault dines with Molotov at the Soviet embassy.

RUSSIA MAY INTERVENE

At that dinner Russian "good offices" may again be offered to stop the war, which has been draining France's military manpower and treasury for seven years.

Through much of Monday's meeting Molotov offered to talk about things to which the West objects —for example, the relationship of the United States, Red China and Canada to his proposed new European bloc, or how fast occupation troops could evacuate a neutralized Germany. He even offered to "study" whether his European peace pact would outlaw the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance.

Today the ministers again were to debate the Austrian independence treaty question, with little hope of agreement.

Wednesday they will meet in restricted session to see if anything can be agreed on about a Korean peace conference with China. The West says that also might grow into negotiations about Indo-China.

CONFERENCE AMMUNITION

French foes of the EDC treaty, which would arm West Germans with French, Italian, Belgian, Luxembourg and Dutch troops in a unified command, can be expected to use aspects of the conference as ammunition when Bidault again appears before parliament in government efforts to get the treaty ratified.

Foreign Secretary Eden will tell in the House of Commons on the talks, aware that many Britons had been hopeful Berlin would bring a real thawing of the cold war.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer plans to visit Berlin early next week to deliver a major address on West German policy in the wake of the ministers' failure to agree on German unification. Informed sources in Bonn said he will promise the East Germans that his government will continue to work for unification and reaffirm his program of linking West Germany politically and militarily with the Atlantic powers.

State Secretary Dulles plans a broadcast when he returns on the happenings in Berlin.

Spending $5,800,000,000

OTTAWA (CP) — Government and private industry will spend an estimated $5,800,000,000 this year—three per cent more than in 1953—on new construction, machinery and equipment. Trade Minister Howe Monday gave the Commons a preview of a government survey of planned capital spending this year during a general debate on unemployment. He said the full report of the survey will be made public soon. Spending on new construction, he said, will be an estimated $3,865,000,000, a six-per-cent increase over last year. He gave no figure for spending on new machinery and equipment, which he said will be down by three per cent. But on the basis of his percentage it would total $1,935,000,000.

The latest comparable government figures for 1953 are those estimated last July. They estimated total capital investment last year at $5,564,000,000 of which $3,479,000,000 was for new construction and $2,085,000,000 for new machinery and equipment.

SPENDING HIGHER

He said new capital spending by business and institutions in 1954 will be four per cent higher than last year, and their spending on new construction would be up six per cent.

(Estimates for 1953 were $4,734,000,000 for non-government capital investments, including $2,793,000,000 for non-government spending on new construction.)

The total of capital outlays by federal, provincial and municipal governments is expected to remain "about the same as last year," Mr. Howe said.

FAR-REACHING SIGNIFICANCE

(Estimated capital expenditures in 1953 by the three governments were: Federal $353,000,000; provincial $239,000,000; municipal, $196,000,000.)

Mr. Howe added:

"This projected volume of capital spending has far-reaching significance for the trend of economic activity in 1954. Expenditures on new capital goods account for about 23 per cent of total production in the economy. Prospects of a further increase in the capital expenditure programs means that in over-all terms this important sector of demand will be more than maintained."

Parking On Romaine Street Again Subject Of Protest

City council decided Monday night to instruct their special traffic committee to make a survey of parking and general traffic conditions in the area of the Monaghan Rd.-Romaine St. intersection.

A month ago, Garfield Bryant of 560 Romaine St. led a delegation to city council demanding that the parking bylaws be enforced on Romaine and Kent Sts., east of Monaghan Rd.

He told The Examiner he would give council a month to do something about the situation caused by Outboard Marine employees parking where they weren't supposed to.

"If they don't do anything about it there'll be an angry bunch of citizens go to the council meeting and the sparks will fly," Mr. Bryant promised.

SOME IMPROVEMENT

A month later, on Monday night, he came before council again and told the city fathers that the situation had improved "50 per cent" but was still "far from satisfactory."

With persistent needling, Mr. Bryant extracted a promise from Mayor Norman Graham to "take the matter to the police commission next Thursday and see that it is enforced."

Mr. Bryant's arguments were reinforced by another delegation, led by Palmer Lonseth, 612 Romaine St., who complained that there was no bylaw to prohibit parking west of Monaghan Rd. He asked council for action to control the speed and volume of traffic, a parking bylaw and provisions for a new bus stop.

The combined arguments of the two spokesmen led to Ald. Stan McBride's motion for a special survey by the traffic committee.

Mr. Bryant said that the Outboard Marine and Manufacturing Co. had gone to considerable expense to provide a large parking area for their employees. The company had co-operated and so had 80 per cent of their employees.

"But the others are determined to park where they please," he said.

Since the delegation had appeared a month before, the police had made "three or four raids and handed out parking tickets."

The police "raids" had driven the offenders onto Monaghan Rd. and Romaine St., west of Monaghan Rd.

"But when things quiet down, they come back again. There were 20 cars there when we left tonight," Mr. Bryant said.

Calling for "prompt and rigid enforcement of the bylaw," Mr. Bryant thanked council for the efforts that had been made so far but insisted that further efforts would have to be made. He said it had taken nine months to get the signs put up; another eight months had gone by and still the bylaw was not being enforced.

"None of you live there," the 5½-foot orator said, sweeping the city fathers with challenging eyes. "Ninety per cent of that property is owned by residents. We pay our taxes and we're not going to have a junk pile up there.

"They eat their lunch there, leave their junk lying about, throw milk bottles into the bushes and upset our garbage cans," he said.

FORCE NOT AT PAR

"We have a sick chief constable and a sick sergeant; our police force is not at par," Mayor Graham said. "We intend to give you co-operation, but we have more than one street to look after and only one police force."

Mr. Lonseth said that his petition had been signed by 28 residents and had first been submitted in September. Subsequently, the city clerk had been telephoned twice and they had been given the reply that some of the council members had gone deer hunting. By the first of the year, two no-parking signs had been erected.

The delegation had appeared again on January 18 and a bus stop sign had been erected but the sign obscured the crossing light and was not in a safe place owing to the heavy traffic.

When it came time to discuss the submission of the two delegations, Ald. Pat Anglesey said it seemed Mr. Bryant's complaint was that the parking bylaw wasn't being enforced.

STEADY ENFORCEMENT

"That's right," Mr. Bryant said. "You can't enforce a bylaw in leaps and bounds; it has to be enforced steadily. You can go from place to place and see the same thing. You can go to one place and see where a car has been parked beside a hydrant all winter."

"Can you tell us where the hydrant is and the number of the car?" Mayor Graham asked.

"As I told the police, I'm not a law enforcement officer," Mr. Bryant said. "The bylaw says no parking on the south side of Romaine St. and the cars are straddling the sidewalks on that side."

"These people would appear to have a legitimate complaint," Ald. Gordon Farquharson said. "I suggest we request an explanation from the police commission as to why this bylaw is not being enforced and what steps have been taken to enforce it."

"I'll take that to the commission myself next Thursday and see that it's enforced," said His Worship. "But we can't keep a policeman on Romaine St."

"The only way of enforcing a bylaw is by steady inspection," Mr. Bryant said.

"If we kept a policeman there every day, would you pay the extra taxes?" His Worship asked.

"If you kept a policeman there, you would make money," Mr. Bryant replied. "You made $7 a week ago."

Mr. Lonseth complained that the people on Romaine St., east of Monaghan Rd., had a bylaw and no enforcement but the people on the west side had no bylaw and no enforcement. The two chief problems were heavy traffic and speed.

He asked for council action to control the traffic and speed and provisions for a bus stop.

Mayor Graham said that some action had been taken but signs couldn't be put up while frost was in the ground. Temporary signs on hydro poles were not satisfactory.

As a parting shot, Mr. Bryant suggested that "to save the labors of policemen, sign putter-uppers and post-hole diggers, a sign be put up saying "No Parking From Here to The Highway."

Pleads Guilty Theft Of Steer

COBOURG, (ENS) — William Bright of Warkworth pleaded guilty Monday to theft of a steer from Floyd Murphy of Haldimand township on August 21 and was remanded until Friday for sentence. Constable Lyle Erskine testified that the steer was slaughtered out in the pasture field and only the hide and hooves left behind. Some of the meat later was recovered in a Belleville cold storage locker, the constable said, having been sold for $15.

Darrell Douglas and Phillip Fisher, two teen age Cobourg youths were remanded until Monday when they appeared on a charge of dangerous driving. Police said that the pair had been driving recklessly on town streets on January 25.

Donald Quinlan and Kenneth Lonsberry of Cobourg pleaded guilty to disorderly conduct and were remanded till Friday. Lonsberry said that Quinlan was making wisecracks about his girl friend in a cafe here on Saturday night and that he and Quinlan stepped outside to settle it. In the scuffle, Quinlan bumped against a plate glass window and broke it. Damage amounted to $100.

Operating Costs Stressed In Education Report

TORONTO (CP) — Soaring operating costs, indebtedness and teachers' salaries were indicated in the annual report of the Ontario department of education Monday.

The report, tabled in the Legislature by Education Minister Dunlop, said teachers' salaries in Ontario public schools trebled in the last 12 years. Salaries for teachers in separate schools increased by almost as much and those in secondary schools had doubled.

At the same time operating costs had trebled in all types of schools, capital costs had increased from $8,000,000 to $22,000,000 and indebtedness had multiplied five times.

Figures for teachers' salaries for 1952-53, with those for 1940-41 in brackets:

Public schools: Men $2,434 ($888) women $2,206 ($760).

Separate schools: Men $2,278 ($890); women $1,863 ($786).

Academic and composite secondary schools: Men $4,268 ($2,245); women $4,197 ($2,067).

Vocational and senior auxiliary schools: Men $5,065 ($2,557); women $4,630 ($2,290).

In the same period annual operating costs for public schools rose from $28,000,000 to $93,000,000; for separate schools, from $4,000,000 to $15,000,000; and for secondary schools, from $16,00,000 to $49,000,000.

Capital indebtedness for public schools had increased from $17,000,000 to $95,000,000; for separate schools from $6,000,000 to $260,000,000; and for secondary schools from $31,000,000 to $56,000,000.

Believes Labor Formula Can Be Found

MONTREAL (CP) — Confidence that a formula can be found for speedy and satisfactory solution of employer-employee differences before they become disputes was expressed Monday by Lionel A. Forsyth, president of Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

In an address to the Canadian Club, Mr. Forsyth said labor and industry in Canada can marshal brain power in quantity and, with the will to do it, a formula can be found to resolve such differences.

"Perhaps the solution can be found in the adoption by one party or the other, preferably by both, of an attitude that assumes good faith on the part of the other and insists, regardless of the interim trials and tribulations and of the outcome, upon following that policy firmly and steadfastly to the end. . . ."

He said that before the advent of trade unions the vast majority of those employed in industrial occupations had "a pretty thin time." Poverty, distress, disease and squalor were more evident in localities where large industries were concentrated than where men earned their living in more individualistic callings.

HAS BROUGHT PROGRESS

The history of the labor movement could not be regarded other than as one of progress and improvement, not only of the men who work, but of the various industries in which they were employed.

Today, collective bargaining was not only generally accepted by industry as a necessary incident to operation but also derived authority from statutes in force throughout the country.

"In a long experience in negotiations with which each successive collective bargaining is initiated, I have yet to see one opened or carried on in an atmosphere of mutual confidence and good faith.

"The usual thing is for the unions to make 'demands' and for the employers to describe them as 'fantastic' and 'unacceptable.'

"The missing link, as I see it, is the absence of good faith, the lack of confidence, the mistrust and suspicion which characterize that aspect of labor relations known as collective bargaining."

QUEEN AND DUKE CONTINUE TOUR—Queen Elizabeth and her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, stand on the observation platform of a train at Bathurst, New South Wales, Australia. The royal couple were in Canberra Monday where the Queen unveiled a memorial to the people of the United States.

Queen Unveils Monument Dedicated To U.S. People

CANBERRA (CP)—Queen Elizabeth today unveiled a towering monument dedicated to the United States for helping to defend Australia during the Second World War, and spoke of the "great goodwill" between the British and American people.

The 258-foot stone column dominates the skyline of Australia's federal capital. It tops the city's tallest buildings, which are about 100 feet high.

The Queen was accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh. U.S. ambassador Amos J. Peaslee attended the ceremony as did Australia's governor-general, Sir William Slim and Prime Minister Robert Menzies.

The Queen said Australia especially remembers the "timely and generous aid which flowed from the United States when the battles in the Pacific raged close to these shores. That aid was given without reserve of human life or wealth."

RESPECT, AFFECTION

The mutual respect and affection, and unity of thought and purpose between the British and American people "will always give pause to those who may think to disturb the tranquility of the world".

The memorial was planned by the Australian-American Association and built with £63,000 contributed by Australians and £50,000 subscribed by the Australian government.

It is an eight-sided aluminum-plated shaft on top of which are a sphere and an eagle with wings raised in the victory sign.

When the Queen unveiled the memorial she uncovered a tablet with the inscription: "In grateful remembrance of the vital help given by the United States of America during the war in the Pacific 1941-45. Unveiled by Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II, February 16, 1954."

"The brave men and women to whom we dedicate this place made our alliance flourish," said the Queen.

RESPECT NOT ENOUGH

"But our respect for them and our thanks are not enough. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work they have thus far so nobly advanced.

"The statue of the man who first used these words, President Abraham Lincoln, stands in London along with that of President Roosevelt to bear witness to Anglo-American concord. . . ."

When the Queen finished, she stood erect and still as a band played the U.S national anthem.

Amos Peaslee, United States ambassador, in reply said "the United States of America accept this tribute from the Australian people with gratitude and humility."

Nova Scotia Miners Of 90, Plan Retirement

SYDNEY, N.S. (CP)—They say if you put a Scotsman on pension he'll live forever. Bolstering this adage are 15 ex-miners, mostly of Scottish descent, on the pension rolls of the Dominion Steel and Coal Company here.

All are over 90 years old, and all plan to enjoy retirement for years to come.

Nobody can say they didn't earn it. They are some of the men who started in the pits at 11 or 12 years of age, back in the days before child labor laws and trade unions. They earned up to 50 cents a day.

LONG CAREERS

Once the hardy descendants of crusty old Scots found they had a pay proposition, they stuck to it. Some worked in the same mineshaft for more than 50 years—watching mine owners come and go.

At least two of the oldsters are sharing retirement with their sons. Allan MacDonald, 97, began his working life when he was 12 years old, holding a miner's lamp for his big brother for 35 cents a day. He served for 66 years. His son, Joseph, 66, retired recently as shotfirer after 50 years' service.

Michael MacNeil retired in 1947 after 65 years service. A year later his son, Stephen, began to draw pension after 41 years in the pits.

These four between them account for nearly 2¼ centuries of coal mining.

Court Takes Opinion Of Officers, Not Accused

"You've got to have policemen — we enjoy having them — but it is his opinion against mine," protested 51-year-old Gordon Hamlin in court Monday. He was pleading innocence after two constables had testified to having found him intoxicated on the night of February 5.

Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, fined him $10, costs $2.50.

Station Operator Remanded For Being Public Mischief

PORT HOPE (ENS) — Sequel to a story that he had been robbed in his service station last week by an armed robber, a charge of giving false information to the police, thereby being a public mischief, was read against Andy Murphy in police court Monday afternoon. Murphy pleaded guilty and was remanded a week for sentence. He was released on his own bail recognizance.

Murphy reported to police on Monday of last week that he was adding up the receipts of the previous day when a man walked into his service station at 8:40 a.m., levelled a revolver at him and walked out with a bag containing $150 in cash and $180 in credit cards. Chief C. W. Graham was suspicious of the circumstances of the reported robbery and after an investigation laid the charge.

FAKED STORY of holdup and armed robbery of his service station, Andy Murphy, of Port Hope, pleaded guilty Monday to being a public mischief and was remanded for sentence.

Chief Graham testified that Constable Don Henderson, on being despatched to the service station after the accused reported a robbery, happened to notice on entering the west door of the service station that snow which had been falling that morning was undisturbed on the doorstep and had drifted up against the door. On entering the builing, via the west door, he was told by Murphy that a stranger had walked in the west door and held a gun on him while he scooped up the money. He gave his description as being about five feet seven, dressed in dark clothing and driving a grey car. Prior to coming up to the service station, Constable Henderson had notified the provincial police and about 20 provincial constables set up road blocks in the area but without success.

Chief Graham added that his investigation revealed that the accused had driven his own car to the service station at 8:30 and reported the robbery at 8.40 but there was no evidence of any other car than that of the accused, being at the service station during that period of time.

St. Laurent, Missioner To Asia

Prime Minister St. Laurent's goodwill tour of the world is not a mere return of courtesies, a state junket. It may prove to be the most significant trip ever undertaken by a Canadian statesman, for in it Canada is being made manifest to the world. Countries afar are being enabled, through their reception of Mr. St. Laurent, to give Canada the recognition Canadians themselves do not realize is her right, and they have the opportunity to show the admiration which Canadians themselves do not know exists. The ceremonials, the state receptions, and above all, the frank curiosity and cordiality of the ordinary people in countries Mr. St. Laurent is visiting, are revealing to Canadians at home the very great position Canada occupies in the hearts and minds of other national peoples, and her almost incredible prestige in international councils.

* * *

Consider, for instance, the Prime Minister's reception in France, Germany and Italy. Not one, but all the chief dignitaries come to meet him and to pay their respects. He is cheered by crowds gathered at airports and stations. People line the tracks to see his special train go by and wave their greetings to the distinguished representative of a greatly-esteemed land they know by its deeds.

* * *

The goal of Mr. St. Laurent's mission is Asia, and Asia is proving to be the theme of his visit. Almost every time he has spoken publicly, in England, France, Germany, Italy, the countries of non-Communist Asia have been on his tongue. Why? Because the great chancelleries of Europe as well as Washington, know better than Canadians themselves do, the extraordinary favour and trust in which India, Pakistan, Burma, Ceylon, Indonesia, hold Canada. It is possible that Canada's influence in India, for instance, is stronger than the influence of either Britain or the U.S. Why? Because India sees Canada as a former colony which is now an independent nation. It sees Canada as a part of the American continent, bordered by three thousand miles of the United States, but neither beholden to the U.S. nor submissive to it. Canada has withstood both British imperialism and dollar imperialism, and has emerged as a strong, vigorous, wealthy, prosperous, progressive and, above all, independent nation. Mr. St. Laurent, a French-speaking native of this land, comes to India as a Prime Minister of the Queen, and elected head of a country that is able and has dared to talk back to the U.S. Canada represents in Asia an ultimate achievement to which the newly-independent nations are striving, and Mr. St. Laurent is the epitome of it.

* * *

Not only has Canada withstood the stresses which imperial and dollar power have placed on most other countries; it has stood up against the newest and most dangerous imperialism—Communism. Asian countries, nervous about Communism at their back doors, remember that Canada was the first country to detect and expose the Communist conspiracy. And they remember how quickly and sternly the affair was handled. And they know also that this was done without raising a McCarthy in the land.

* * *

And so Canada goes to Asia, in the person of Mr. St. Laurent, where, by her example and deeds, she is extraordinarily welcome and influential. Britain was the former despot, and therefore Asian suspicion still hedges her every move. The United States is the present world leader, and its voice has the overtones of dictatorial dollars and military might. Its riches cause jealousy, and its grants and gifts involve obligations. Do not nations always distrust the generosity of another? 'Beware the Greeks bearing gifts'. Canada is not burdened by any of these impedimenta of power. She has never used her prowess to dictate, her wealth to bribe or her influence to pander. She is the only country in the whole democratic world which has never needed or accepted American aid, and the only one to wage the war on her own resources. She has become in the non-Communist world the voice of authority which is neither imperial nor American, and yet she is the outgrowth of both Empire and America. Mr. St. Laurent's mission to Asia is as missioner of this admired, exemplary and trusted Canada.

Schoolma'am In Politics

Miss Agnes Macphail brought to the world of politics the courage of a schoolma'am who has undertaken to discipline a class of rough boys; her sleeves were rolled up, and her tongue was ever ready with a crushing comment; she was determined to show the toughies that she could be as tough as they, and tougher. Admiring the courage and good humour which she brought to political life, we cannot honestly say that she illuminated its dark places with any flashes of inspiration, and we must express some surprise that she could have been in politics so long without learning some of the elementary facts about government and economics. It was she who thought that a shortage of money could be ended by the simple procedure of printing more. She repeatedly mistook the courtesy with which parliamentarians treated her strange misunderstandings as confessions of masculine weakness. She was a lady of infinite and invincible self-confidence.

She had a tender heart and was quick to pity distress wherever she saw it. She was a doughty fighter for equal rights and equal pay for women, and she lived to see the Ontario Legislature make legislation which was in a great degree a fulfillment of this ideal. The people of Peterborough will remember her recommendation that the Trent Canal be filled in and made into a highway. To wish that such a fiery soul may rest in peace is to disregard the character of the departed one; we are sure that she would prefer an eternity of lively controversy.

Parked Planes

Four small aeroplanes are parked at the Crescent Street government wharf. They are like fish out of water. Two fitted with skis are parked on the ice and snow of the lake, now a surface of water. One wonders what will happen to the forlorn things should the ice give way entirely in a February thaw? The third plane has its usual pontoons. But is it sitting in the water? No; it is as ludicrously out of its proper element as the two with skis. It is parked on a raft frozen into the sub-surface ice. And the fourth plane? Well, it (or its owner) does not seem to be able to make up its mind what species of earth-bound bird it is. It has neither wheels, nor pontoons nor skis; just match-stick legs. In this changeable weather the owner has probably taken whatever landing equipment was on the thing off to a cave to worry about it with a hibernating bear.

The parking of planes on or near the Government Wharf raises in our fancy a problem of rights and privileges. Water-going vehicles are free to use navigable lakes and streams, and to tie up at docks. That is what navigable waters and wharfs are for. What is the legal right of a pontooned plane to park on a frozen raft, or a ski-legged plane to park in a puddle of a bay, or a footless one to be tied down right on top of the dock? The question will be resolved soon—in three or four months when Spring really comes. The lake will again be navigable and all the planes will have to sink or swim. They could, perhaps, take to the air.

Can A Squat City Be A City?

Today's architects and builders seem to be intent on lowering the roofs of all but the biggest cities. Everywhere across the country, except in Montreal, Toronto and in a few isolated commercial buildings elsewhere, one and two-storey structures are replacing higher ones, and new buildings seldom rise above a second floor. We can understand reasons for wanting one-floor operations in a factory, but we cannot be persuaded that commercial and government buildings should be squat and sprawling. Commercial sites are more valuabl than they have ever been; why then spread three floors on one, to occupy expensive square feet on the ground instead of building up, where the air costs nothing?

Whatever the reasons, cities like Peterborough are being lowered, rather than raised. Our main streets in 1900 had quite a lofty aspect. Fires and renovation have reduced its height. The latest example is the old Hamilton store building on Simcoe Street, which is being flattened, its top storey removed.

Downtown third and fourth floors are disappearing and also, in new buildings, the height between floor and ceiling is being reduced. The result: Peterborough's facade is looking more small-townish in 1954 and with a population of 40,000 than it did in 1900 when it was a town of only 10,879 people.

If we had the courage to buck the ground-hugging architects and builders of today we would start a national campaign to raise the roofs of Canada. For Peterborough's new down-town flatness is characteristic of all other towns and cities in the country, apart from metropolitan centres. Maybe Peterborough was too pretentious fifty years ago, with its false fronts and high airs. But at least its citizens walked citified streets. Now the place is becoming altogether too lowly, with a glossy physical humbleness which can only induce spiritual depression. In our opinion a squat city is not a city at all.

Boxing Memories

By GENE TUNNEY
(Heavyweight Champion of the World, 1926-28)

(Gene Tunney here reviews for The Examiner a re-issue of James J. Corbett's book, "The Roar of the Crowd.")

FOR me, this is less like reviewing a book than a renewal of memories. It is like a review of lessons learned long ago. I knew Jim Corbett well. He taught me much when I was a young boxer beginning a career, and illustrated the lessons with examples of his own great battles in the ring. The story of his life is, necessarily, woven around those legendary contests.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE ROAR OF THE CROWD was published first in 1925, and it is good to see it printed again, a brightly told tale of the most brilliant career in boxing history. Boxing, that is, not mere fighting. There is a naivety in Corbett's narration when he revels respectfully in his acquaintance with the sporting characters of the day, the millionaire horse-race men, the politicians, the actors, the gambling-house operators; but there is nothing naive in his recital of the strategies of the ring. For example, he tells how, in his championship match with John L. Sullivan, he was afraid of what might happen if, when dazed or tired, he were cornered by the mighty John L. In the early rounds, when he was fresh, he deliberately allowed Sullivan to corner him and noted his pattern of action, how Sullivan attacked a cornered opponent. Corbett backed into the corners repeatedly, with the champion in hot pursuit, and worked out tactics for an emergency.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN his talks with me, Corbett emphasised the importance of foot-work. He would move around to illustrate, or take a pencil and paper and diagram the steps in a pugilistic manoeuvre. He was like a ballet director plotting the steps for Coppelia or Les Sylphides. He told me that he made it a practice to "shadow dance," as he called it, for one hour every day with no time out for rest. It was not for nothing that they called him the Dancing Master. I found the lessons useful when I got into the ring with Jack Dempsey.

In his sixty-two-round fight with Peter Jackson, Corbett had to solve the problem of a dangerous one-two punch. In "The Roar of the Crowd" he tells how he met it. The great negro pugilist would throw a left to the head, followed immediately by a savage right to the jaw or body. Corbett found that the left had little power; the right was the killer. So he ignored the left, or, rather, he used it as a signal for a right counter of his own. Thus he would beat Jackson to the right-hand punch, and the fast, powerful negro was deprived of his best weapon.

✧ ✧ ✧

THAT page reads like a lesson Corbett used to give me, as we would sit and talk. In my bout with Tom Gibbons, I had to solve a problem of deception. Gibbons was expert at feinting, almost a lost art nowadays. He would feint with his left, once twice, a third time — you never knew how many times — but inched closer each time until his opponent pawed out with a left as a defensive gesture. It was then that Gibbons slipped in with a paralyzing left upper-cut to the liver (the most painful blow in boxing) or left to the jaw. I noted that, when he feinted just before throwing the left, he would advance his left foot. It was like a signal for the real thing. Throughout the fight I watched his left foot, and when it came forward with the feint, I would drive a one-two (straight left followed instantly by a straight right) to the jaw, then move out of range after beating him to the punch. Corbett would have approved. It was the style he encouraged me to use.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT WAS interesting to read his account of how he lost his first bout with Jeffries. I remember how he used to tell me about it as a comedy. It was an irony of vanity. Corbett was the great exponent of mentality in boxing. His book abounds in examples of quick wit, especially the exploitation of the temperamental weakness of an opponent. But he fell a victim to his own temperamental weakness. He had the vanity of the theatre. "The Roar of the Crowd" is full of his long experience with the stage. He ended as a competent actor, playing the circuits.

✧ ✧ ✧

MEETING JEFFRIES, he had victory in his grasp. For twenty-three rounds he outboxed the powerful champion, and gave him a severe beating. He had two rounds and a fraction to go for a sure decision. In his mind he was the champion all over again, and he would make a triumphal theatrical tour. In the twenty-third round, Jeffries backed him to the ropes. This had happened repeatedly, with Corbett slipping away easily and hitting Jeffries virtually at will. But this time his attention failed. His mind was away on something else, and he never saw the knock-out left that stretched him out for the count. He was thinking of the banner he would have in front of the theatre in huge letters:-

JAMES J. CORBETT, AGAIN THE HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION O WORLD

Even if he didn't win the back, Corbett was one of the most (if not the most intelligent) and co great men of ring history. He was gentle in manner and always considerate, and had only praise for those he knew.

Bible Message

(From The Authorized Version)

When the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gather together. Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shall love thy neighbor as thyself. On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets. (Matt. 22:23-40.)

✧ ✧ ✧

And, seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: and he opened his mouth, and taught them saying . . .

Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy but to fulfill. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fullfilled. (Matt. 5:1, 2, 17, 18.)

An American Opinion: HIGH AND DRY

ROME NOTEBOOK

The Beast In The Jungle

By HILTON YOUNG

"SNOW," called the newspaper man in the Campo dei Fiori; "Snow in Rome!" He brushed the flakes off his arm and held out a paper with the confirming headlines; "Snow in Rome." The Great Powers were meeting in Berlin. Italian Governments were rising and falling a few yards away, Italy had announced the building of her first atomic pile, but what the Romans liked to read in their newspaper was about the unusual but unmistakable fact that it was snowing. Snow is now, snow is here; look, it's white, it's pretty. Brown paper will keep our heads dry so don't let's think about tomorrow.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE OPERA announces its programme only two days ahead; to do more would be to tempt Providence: Nor will the theatres even those which boast the longest runs ("Second Month!") take bookings further than two days ahead. Who knows what may happen? Temperament, electricity, rotten floorboards. When a tram passes, especially in wet weather, the tramwires shed brilliant little blue fireworks. Most of them burn out before they hit the ground, and they are very pretty, and there is no capital for modernisation. All the same, there can't be much thickness left in those wires.

During the working hours the telephone gives the engaged signal as soon as you pick up the receiver; this is very tiresome, but the telephone company is a private monopoly and it is going to be nationalised some time soon, not quite yet. But soon enough for the company not to feel like putting capital into modernisation. You can't blame them, and, besides, you can always send Aldo a message by his sister-in-law when you meet her tomorrow night instead of ringing him up now.

And then there's the bureaucracy. The Italian Government has a Minister for the Reform of the Bureaucracy, which is much as if Britain had a Minister for the Reform of the Weather. Getting a package by air freight, for example, is like this. You go out to Ciampino, the international airport and find the package by candlelight. Two Customs men write and tabulate and cross-refer and enter and calculate and exact for forty minutes, all in handsome copperplate on expensive paper in handsome rough-edged folders; up-shot, sevenpence duty. Then there is twenty minutes' more writing while another official ascertains that what has been written by the first two has been well written and concerns your baggage and not someone else's. If you go after dark this part has to be done by the headlights of your car, if you have one. If you haven't, you go back next morning.

Routine contact between Government and people is Dantesque. The room is always the same; a semi-circle with twenty sportelli or guichets (we are lucky enough not to have a word for it) where people do not queue but mill. Smoke, heat, exhaustion, crying babies, claustrophobia. The doors are usually open from ten to twelve, and the last of the crowd which is left inside when they close is worked off by about three. In the afternoons a lot of officials do other jobs because this means that their places can be taken by other officials, thus, of course, solving the unemployment problem.

✧ ✧ ✧

THESE afternoon officials have a different job in the morning. One fascinating thing is the rubber stamp, the great symbol itself, is not yet in use everywhere. There are still plenty of offices where instead of rubber-stamping they tear off a small piece of paper, tearing along a ruler because it is not perforated, put paste on the back with a brush because it is not gummed, and stick it over the place. Outside, the road surface is missing and the tramlines stick eight inches in the air; there is no warning for motorists. The street lights go out pretty often.

Corruption is nearly universal in the lower levels of the bureaucracy and public utility companies, petty thieving is as it always has been. Nine years after the war, main-line expresses still have to cross temporary bridges at "dead slow," and there are still swarms of people on the outside of buses and trams. Lunch was at half past one just after the war and dinner at nine. Now they are at three and half past ten. Appointments are not made; see you sometime; any time.

Small trees grow out of church towers and the banks are as unwilling to accept your money as they are to return it. In the district of Parioli, where the diplomats and the Communist leaders live in plate-glassed, central-heated flats, there are also people living three, four, nine — not to a room — to a plank shack; and some in caves. Heating by communal camp fires of fruit-boxes from the market. Sanitation under the railway line. Bread and vegetable soup; squid on Sundays. Seven and a half per cent. of Italians can never, repeat never, afford meat or sugar.

✧ ✧ ✧

OF COURSE, it is all desperate; sometimes it feels like the end of the world. Perhaps it is the end of freedom for Italy, such as it is. There is a feeling of exasperated rigidity which was lacking five years ago. Something is brewing up; it will have to break one way or another soon. And at all levels Italians are watching one another. Christian and Communist, employer and workers, mayor and priest; watching and wary; don't move too fast or he'll pounce. All are friends individually, all have masses of relations, arm around shoulder, I want to marry your daughter, have some of my sandwiches.

The earth is the same, the sun is the same, all are Italians; what is it; then, that makes this deadlock where the poor stay poor and pieces fall off the tramwires and nobody does what he's supposed to? There is a Beast in the Jungle, a Beast with many heads: Communism, Fascism, War, America, Tito, Reform. He is different for everyone, but everyone reacts to him in the same way; careful, don't move, don't provoke him. Life could just be worse; better not risk any change. How white the snow is! How bright the sun is! Let's go to the opera tonight.

How Time Flies

FEBRUARY 16

1924 The parks committee decides to ask sports' organizations to make offers for the use of Riverside Park.

Letters To The Editor

DOUBTS IF REGISTRY ESSENTIAL

SIR: Regarding the controversy re Nurses Registry, I would like to take exception to one nurse's remarks about "the poor taxpayer." She may not be aware that there are hundreds of ventures, enterprises and what nots, aside from living expenses that need subsidizing and assistance of some form or another that add up considerably more than a few mills that would take care of the Registry's deficit. I would like to ask this question. Is it necessary to buy and maintain a $1,500 car to walk 4 or 5 blocks occasionally or would it be cheaper to board a bus and an odd taxi when some special time arose? I actually believe the Registry's method of operation is an outright extravagance and by way of offering a solution I feel sure that for $500 a year or even less money the Nurses could have an elaborate list of names and addresses and phones and other information advertised in the local paper, the rate for ads as you know are very reasonable especially when left month after month. This letter is not designed to stir up any ill feeling nor was it meant that I know what or how it should be run because I know nothing about its operation. Just from what I've read I thought the advertising would be just as effective and far cheaper with more returns to the nurses and less the "poor taxpayer" has to cough up. I might add that carpenters, plumber's tradesmen, factory workers and hundreds of other just as essential setups or businesses don't have $5,000 Registrys and they keep going, I believe, for a lot less than $5,000.

Yours truly,
"SHORT OF CASH."

FERTILE ANTI-BRITISH MINDS

SIR: People can only be judged by their actions and not by their words. It seems quite evident that the correspondence of one Elvira Smith, not only gave the Peterborough Examiner an excuse to blast the British people again, but gave its editor a chance to appease some ancient grudge he holds towards literary people in Britain. This type of editorial gives comfort and added strength to that rabid anti-British portion of the population in Quebec who are constantly deprecating everything English and praising everything French Canadian.

If Mr. King fraternized with men like Henri Bourassa and his nationalistic clique as you state, then Mr. King's inconsistency towards our war effort is explained. Their fertile anti-British minds were always striving to destroy what British Canada had accomplished.

A letter in the Ottawa Citizen of November 23rd, 1944 says after listing casualties of the RCAF, "it may be noted that more American airmen gave their lives in defence of Canada than French Canadians from Quebec." I enclose a list of casualties for your inspections.

I correct your last paragraph, Mr. Editor, by saying, the Canada of today was made by men of British extraction and not those seditionaries and traitors in the Province of Quebec.

The anti-British press in Quebec should at least be balanced by a stout-hearted pro-British press in the enlightened Province of Ontario. I am pleased to note that I am not the only citizen in this country who looks with embarrassment and scorn upon the Quebec disgrace.

Yours truly,
HORATIO SCOTT.
Keene, Ontario.

NECESSARY

A patient was pleading with a doctor that he really didn't need an operation. "There's nothing wrong with me," he argued, "except that my appendix itches."

"Good," replied the doctor, "we'll take it out."

"Just because it itches?" the patient gasped.

"Certainly," the doctor boomed back. "Have to take it out before we can scratch it."

"AND TOMORROW MAYBE THERE WON'T BE ANY ICE AT ALL, SEE?"

ATOMIC PROJECT—This is the heart of Canada's atomic project at Chalk River, Ont. The big building in the left foreground holds the NRX nuclear reactor. Before the reactor broke down 15 months ago it produced radioactive substances used in medicine and industry and enabled Canadian scientists to carry on atomic research. The reactor has been rebuilt and soon will be in operation again.—(CP Photo).

Atomic Scientists Excited As Chalk River Reactor Soon To Operate Again

By JOHN E. BIRD

CHALK RIVER, Ont. (CP)—The secrecy-shrouded atomic energy plant here is bustling with activity and scientists are tense with excitement.

A major event in the short history of the project is due to take place soon — resumption of the powerful NRX nuclear reactor which broke down Dec. 12, 1952. The rebuilt reactor will be a more powerful and better research tool, and scientists are awaiting the day when they can make new stabs at the secrets of the atom.

Even after the reactor is back in operation there will be only a slight easing of excitement at the project operated by Atomic Energy of Canada, Limited, a crown company. The men probing the secrets of atomic power will be looking forward to the start of still another atomic pile on the 10,000-acre reservation devoted to Canada's nuclear research.

NRU REACTOR

The pile is the new NRU reactor, being built at a cost of more than $30,000,000 a short distance from the NRX pile building. Scheduled to go into operation in 1955, it has been designed to make tests applicable to power reactors, one of Canada's immediate goals in the atomic energy field.

When the two reactors are working, Canada's atomic research facilities will be among the best in the western world. They will enable the project to step up processing and marketing of the by-products of atomic energy piles.

These by-products include radioactive substances used in industry and medicine such as the cobalt 60 isotope, the energy source for the cobalt bomb. The bomb is the therapy unit developed by Canada to fight cancer.

The 1,500 workers who man the project live in the tree-lined village of Deep River, seven miles up the Ottawa from here, at Pembroke and other nearby communities. Chalk River itself is 125 miles up-river from Canada's capital.

All project workers and officials, including William J. Bennett, AECL president, must wear identifying badges to enter the plant. An outsider can get in only after clearance by the RCMP.

TOURS PROJECT

Security on construction of the NRU reactor and on the re-design work on NRX was lifted slightly for this reporter during a tour of the project.

Officials disclosed for the first time that the NRU pile will be a heavy-water-cooled nuclear reactor. Heavy water is produced at a Trail, B.C., smelter.

The officials also said that the NRX reactor has been modified considerably on the basis of information gained during the five years it operated before the breakdown.

"During those years weaknesses in the design became evident, and a grat deal of new information on nuclear processes was gained," said J. L. Gray, vice-president of administration and operations. "Certain re-design work will result in a more powerful reactor with certain improvements in operation and research facilities."

Most of the changes which have been made to the NRX pile are secret. However, officials said they include modifications in the type of shielding used to prevent radiation escaping from the reactor and in equipment necessary for control and operation of the pile.

The use of heavy water to cool the NRU reactor and prevent it generating too much heat and melting is a departure for Canada. This technique is being used to make NRU more powerful and more efficient than NRX and to cut down the loss of neutrons, the atomic bullets released by the splitting of uranium atoms when the pile is operating.

When ordinary water is used for cooling as in NRX, it absorbs many neutrons. Heavy water will cut down the absorption rate because its atoms are closer to the size of a neutron.

The use of heavy water to cool the NRU pile will be expensive. A report made to the United States government by four firms intereste in harnessing the atom for industrial power estimates the cost at $83 a pound. Officially the price is secret.

The NRX pile and the earlier "zeep" experimental reactor at Chalk River contain about 15 and 10 tons of heavy water respectively. On the basis of $83 a pound the value of the heavy water in the two reactors is about $4,000,000. It is used in these piles as a control rather than for cooling. No estimate is available of the amount of heavy water to be used in the NRU reactor.

Third Offender Jailed 90 Days

It was just an ordinary transparent medicine bottle, but it intrigued Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, and "learned friends" in court Monday. They looked at it, they sniffed it (it was empty) and they read the label.

The bottle was produced by Percy Crummie, 39-year-old Peterborough man who was convicted of a third offense of intoxication and given three months definite and one indefinite, reformatory detention. Crummie adamantly maintained that medicine the bottle had contained, smelled like alcohol and therefore police had thought (quite wrongly) that he was drunk.

NO ODOR LEFT

Unfortunately for Crummie there was no odor left in the bottle. After consuming the medicine, prescribed by a doctor "for my condition," he had rinsed it out.

However, Crummie had other arguments. On the day when police had found him stretched out in a city bus, it was the afternoon of February 11, he had been to his doctor and received a hypo and the medicine.

Sergeant Claire McGillen and constable W. G. Scott had a different tale to tell. In their opinion Crummie had been helplessly drunk. Not only did he smell of alcohol, but he could not walk unaided and it had taken three men to assist him to the cells.

W. C. Grant, defending, asked the sergeant if Crummie could not have been just sleeping in the bus.

"Well you might have called it being asleep—or just passed out," answered the sergeant.

Likes Work Too Well To Retire

OTTAWA (CP)—Marius Barbeau, 71, officially is retired, but he's still working in his office at the National Museum.

Dr. Barbeau was "pensioned off" in 1948 after more than 40 years of collecting Canadian folk songs and folklore, and writing dozens of books and hundreds of booklets.

"My life is here," he said as he waved his hand at his compact office. He is working on three new books—"Haida Carvers," "Pantamuel in Canada" and "Calendar of Indian Captivities"—and has plans for many more.

BUSY OFFICE

His office is on the third floor of the National Museum, nestled on a block of grass and trees in the heart of the capital. One wall is covered with filing cabinets bulging with manuscripts, finished works and background material.

The room is filled with hand-carved statues and figurines; miniature totem poles and Indian rugs.

A native of Ste. Marie de Beauce, Que., he graduated from Laval University, where Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent was two years ahead of him. Dr. Barbeau was called to the bar, but dropped law when he was awarded a Rhodes scholarship and went to England to study at Oxford where he picked ethnology, "because it was a new thing." Anthropology is another of his specialties.

Dr. Barbeau joined the museum in 1911. Travelling by train, car, canoe and on foot, he collected hundreds of old Eskimo, Indian, French - Canadian and English-Canadian folk songs.

HAS COLLECTION

The museum now has a collection of 195 Eskimo folk songs, more than 3,000 in Indian, close to 7,000 in French-Canadian and some 1,500 old English songs. Many of them are still on the old tube-like records that came off Dr. Barbeau's Edison recorder. He tells of one man, Francois St. Laurent of Gaspe, who sang 310 songs for him from memory.

The dean of authorities on Canadian folklore is finished gathering songs and legends at first hand. Now he is putting them down on paper.

Despite his retirement, Dr. Barbeau's old office is still his. He is there every day from 9 a.m. until he is ready to leave.

He has never taken a vacation. "My vocation is my vacation," he says.

FOLKLORIST — Marius Barbeau, 71-year-old ethnologist, folklorist and author, was pensioned off in 1948 but still works in his office at the National Museum in Ottawa. He has spent more than 40 years collecting Canadian folk songs and folklore and writing hundreds of booklets and dozens of books. He now is working on three new books. (CP Photo)

Bring Prisoner To Son's Bedside

TIMMINS (CP) — Police, the crown attorney's office and officials at the Monteith industrial farm collaborated Monday to bring Bernard Decoeur, 27-year-old McIntyre miner serving a one month sentence for theft, to the bedside of his 15-month-old son. The boy underwent an emergency operation in hospital for an intestinal obstruction.

Doctors said the youngster was a little improved but his condition was still serious.

Chief constable Gordon Beacock received a request from the doctors to have the father on hand and he called crown attorney S. A. Caldbrick who signed the man's release. Decoeur was brought to Timmins under guard. He will finish the jail term here.

The miner was sentenced Jan. 19 with two other miners to one month in jail for their part in the theft of $300 worth of canned goods from the United Steelworker of America (CIO-CCL) food warehouse Jan. 6. The three pleaded guilty.

Mrs. Hendley Hostess To Apsley WA

St. James' Bible Class of Peterborough offered to present their play, and tentative dates, March 19 and March 24, were set.

A balance of $72.73 was reported by the treasurer. An increased attendance at the monthly film showing was reported. The visiting committee has sent gifts and cards and made several visits.

Mrs. M. C. Tucker, convener of the parsonage committee reported that this committee had been consulted about wiring the parsonage, which had been completed.

The World Day of Prayer was discussed and prayers were assigned to Mrs. H. Montgomery, Mrs. K. Watson and Mrs. G. Watson. Mrs. N. Wilson has been asked to be speaker at the service, which will be held in St. George's Anglican church.

The balance of $6.19 from film collections will ge given to Apsley Central School to help in curtaining the auditorium.

The meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction. Mrs. G. Watson conducted a Bible quiz, won by Mrs. N. Wilson and Mrs. J. Stegenga.

Mrs. Keith Watson and Mrs. Newberry served lunch.

LONDON (CP)—The "father" of the barrow boys in the city of Westminster, Capt. William Dunstone, has retired after 25 years as the city's street-trading inspector. He collected more than £70,000 in licences from street traders during his term of office.

Sentenced One Year For Reckless Driving

KITCHENER (CP)—Joseph M. Finnigan, 23, of Guelph Monday was sentenced to one year definite and one year indeterminate in reformatory on conviction of reckless driving.

Finnigan was found guilty by a Supreme Court jury Friday. He was acquitted on a charge of manslaughter.

Mr. Justice J. L. Wilson observed today: "There seems to be no doubt you were driving at a high rate of speed and took the life of a passenger in a car lawfully on the highway ahead of you."

Finnigan was charged as a result of an accident on Oct. 11. Mrs. Lena Irene Leader of Guelph, a passenger in a car which Finnigan's car struck from the rear, was fatally injured.

South African Bill Aimed At British Territories

By JOHN WORRALL

CAPE TOWN (OFNS)—A significant provision in a bill introduced by the South African government is being interpreted here as the quiet beginning of sanctions against the British High Commission territories of Basutoland, Bechuanaland and Swaziland. The bill is to amend the Natives (Urban Areas) Consolidation Act and it includes natives from these territories in the category of "foreign" natives. The effect of this provision is that natives who come to the Union from these territories to seek employment will be subject to the same regulations as those entering the Union from, say, Portuguese Africa; and they will have to obtain permits from the South African minister of native affairs.

Under the act that is to be amended, natives from the High Commission territories were specifically excluded from this restriction. The bill specifies that they will be exempt only if they are already living in urban areas in the Union.

BEGINNING OF A "SQUEEZE"

Commenting on this new government move, Senator W. G. Ballinger, who represents the natives of the Transvaal and Orange Free States in parliament, said that it was intended to be the beginning of a "squeeze" on the territories. The Prime Minister, Dr. Daniel F. Malan, has in the past threatened that if incorporation of the protectorates (in the Union of South Africa) were delayed, he would treat them as "foreign territories".

Are the movements of protectorate natives to be used as a bargaining counter in a new Union move to induce Britain to give way on the question of incorporating the territories into the Union? That is the question now being asked in Cape Town. In a Union Government memorandum in 1939, quoted in the recent white paper on the future of the territories, this passage appeared: "Transfer would naturally have the effect of securing to the inhabitants of the territories for all time the right to be treated as rightful residents of the Union, with the same claim as the other natives of the Union to its labour markets. Any questioning of the right of territorial natives to enter the Union for study or visits, or for any other legitimate reason, would cease."

The new discriminatory measure will not affect the Swanzis and the Bechuanas so much as the Basutos, who flock in their thousands to work on the Rand gold mines, thus supplementing the meagre living of their families scratched from the worn soil of overcrowded Basutoland. To have to procure a permit to enter the Union, with all the difficulties and frustrations which that entails for the average African, will undoubtedly put a brake on such migrations.

It is not thought that the Union Government intends to stop migration, because labour is already short on the mines, and the Basuto is a fine and valued worker. This suggests that it is the Union's intention merely to warn Britain that the territories will from now on be regarded as "foreign" Senator Ballinger suggested that the move will not have the same effect as it might have had in the past, as the territories are fast developing their own internal economy and labour markets with the help of the colonial development corporation. Moreover, he says that the Union might well hurt itself by switching this valuable labour to the Central African federation, where lucrative employment for Africans is rapidly opening up.

The territories of Swaziland and Bechuanaland are on the borders of South Africa, while Basutoland is an island entirely surrounded by the Union. Dr. Malan indicated in a recent speech that his patience on the subject of the Union's claims to incorporate the territories is rapidly becoming exhausted. The British view is that nothing can be done without first consulting the African inhabitants of the territories. White South Africans are united in their claim to the territories; but the view of the parliamentary opposition is that more diplomatic methods than those being used by the Government must be employed to secure them; and that, anyway, the time is not ripe to press the Union's claims.

Penalties Hurt Young Petes As Port Perry Wins 7-2 To Begin Junior B Playoffs

Red Creighton's Young Petes forgot Monday night the old saying, you can't win a game in the penalty-box. They didn't only get penalties one at a time, but bunched them in twos and threes in minors, majors and misconducts. While they were in the penalty box, the Port Perry Flyers scored four goals which helped them take a 7-2 victory and a one-game lead in their best-of-seven series for their junior "B" group title.

Right from the start the heavier, taller Flyers used their weight to advantage, bouncing the smaller Petes at every opportunity. The Creighton-coached lads tried to retaliate but referees, Jim Crombie of Bowmanville and Sixty Coombs of Lindsay, didn't like the way they did, therefore the penalties.

The Ports who played their best game of the season on the Civic arena ice found that a few heavy body checks, both legal and illegal threw the Petes off their game. They laid the body on in the first and second periods and the Petes were so busy dodging checks, they couldn't get organized.

COSTLY PENALTIES

At the same time the Petes suffered two costly penalties, both in the first period. Murray Byrne went off for boarding in the opening minute and Kevin Heffernan for slashing midway through the period. Both times the Ports capitalized for goals.

These goals helped the Ports take a 3-0 lead in the first.

Again in the second the Petes were disorganized, particularly the defence which gave goalie B6b Delehaye little protection. The Ports took advantage of this to score twice before another Pete penalty gave them advantage for their sixth goal.

RETURN TO FORM

The Petes, probably given a peppery talk by Creighton after the second period, came out looking like a vastly different team in the third. They were watching their checks better, passing better and taking more time for their shots on goal. These all resulted in their out-scoring the Ports 2-1.

Apart from the penalties which ruined their game, the Petes had more troubles with Ports' goalie, Ross Howe. When Howe wasn't playing sensationally, he was lucky, particularly in the third when the Petes, especially Kearns, Heffernan and Coyle, crowded about him and broke into the clear.

Little Kearns deserved a large E for effort as he along with Doris and Heffernan tried to spark a Petes' rally. He dodged, squeezed and was bounced by the much bigger Ports.

COPELAND SCORES

While Byrne was off for boarding, Ken Fisher and Ted Attersley set Gary Copeland up for a long shot for the first goal. Nine minutes later Heffernan slashed O'Connor on a breakaway and while he was off Brodie scored on a ganging attack. Copeland scored his second goal with a minute to go when he checked Pue inside the Petes blueline to coast in on Delehaye.

Morrow went off for tripping, followed by Copeland for holding early in the second. Doris, Gardner and Kearns promptly tested Howe from close-in without success. Then Copeland turned, faked passing behind the net, and tucked the puck into the net. Attersley added the fifth taking an O'Connor pass on the fly down the left side.

The play became particularly rough and gradually got out of hand. Finally McDougall and Miles highsticked, then fought, causing a minor free-for-all. Both were given minors and majors, totalling seven minutes. Frizzelle, then Heffernan followed them to the penalty box, meaning the Petes played for four minutes with four players.

PORTS LEAD 6-0

Just before Heffernan returned Johnson took a loose puck to break into the clear, scoring the Ports' sixth goal.

Early in the third the Ports played two men short for four minutes and during this time Howe shone, turning back the efforts of Heffernan and Coyle on close-in breaks.

Finally Kearns, taking the puck from a corner faceoff, worked in front, shot and scored the Petes first goal. While playing a man short, the Petes scored their second goal as Tim Hook broke in with Gardner and scored.

With Twist still off, McDougall was given a kneeing penalty, followed by a misconduct for arguing. Just before Twist returned Copeland scored his fourth goal.

The second game is Wednesday in Port Perry.

Woolley Rink In Quarter-Final

SARNIA (CP) — Mrs. L. E. Woolley of Toronto Granites, three-time winner of the Ontario women's tankard trophy, entered the quarter-finals of the fourth annual Sarnia Imperial women's bonspiel Monday along with three other Toronto rinks.

Mrs. Paul Armstrong of Winneka, Ill., and Mrs. G. Baldwin of Brookline, Mass., also entered the quarter-finals of the three-day bonspiel which winds up Wednesday.

Mrs. Woolley's rink is the defending champion of the Sarnia 'spiel. Among the 32 rinks entered in this year's competitions are those from Lindsay, St. Catharines, London, Chatham, Welland, Hamilton, Kitchener, Sarnia and Toronto. Three rinks have come from the Chicago area and one from Brookline, Mass.

Warne Trophy 'Spiel Running For Two Days

The annual ladies' curling bonspiel in Peterborough for the Warne Trophy commences this Wednesday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the Charlotte St. Curling Rink. Many entries have been received from various cities in the province as well as local and district rinks. Mrs. L. Bearne is in charge of the committee staging the 'spiel.

The competition consists of three events, the main event, the secondary, and the consolation with two prizes for each, and the Warne Trophy for the winner of the main event. The ladies will be curling all day and evening Wednesday, and until late afternoon or early evening Thursday before the two-day bonspiel is concluded.

YMCA Boys Win

Paced by T. Killen, the YMCA Orphans romped to an easy 55-18 victory over the Lakefield Golden Bears Monday night.

The "Y" quintet took an early first quarter 23-3 score, went on to a 35-7 half-time score, to 44-11 at three-quarters, and coasted throughout the fourth for the easy win.

Killen easily led the scoring with 21 points, while Cranfield had 14. Lakefield's best was Downs with seven.

McCartney Rink Downs Galt 11-5

TORONTO (CP)—The field in the hunt for the premier trophy of the Ontario Bonspiel was reduced by three-quarters in the first day of competition Monday.

Thirty-two of the original entry of 128 rinks are left in the running for the Royal York trophy, top prize in the 27th annual bonspiel. Sixteen will fall today.

Of the surviving rinks 18 are from Toronto, representing five local clubs. The 14 visiting rinks still eligible for the Royal York come from 10 clubs.

Five of the Toronto rinks who advanced through the first two rounds Monday were from the Royal Canadian Club. Four each came from Granites and High Park, three from Torontos and two from Civil Service.

PETERBOROUGH ENTRY

Detroit, Kingston and Brampton each had two rinks move into the third round and Brockville, Brantford, Unionville, London, Peterborough, Chicago, Hamilton and Chatham each have one entry in the primary event.

Gerve Meech of High Park, last year's winner of the Royal York, is still in contention but he needed a comeback to defeat J. H. Crawford of Wingham 15-12.

Sid Smithers of Galt, runner-up last year and also the winner of the Grand Aggregate a year ago, was defeated in the second round by Dr. M. G. McCartney of Peterborough 11-5.

THREE DRAWS TODAY

Six trophies, besides the Royal York, will be decided before the week-long bonspiel is over.

Today's action will be comprised of only three draws because of the banquet and entertainment planned for the evening. The third round of primary event and the second round of the second event will be completed, bringing each of the events down to 16 rinks.

These 32 rinks will compose the Grand Aggregate playdown.

Of the 124 games played during the first day of the bonspiel, nine were won by extra ends. Three extra ends were necesasry in the premier event and six in the second event. Twenty-nine games, including eight of the extra-end games, were decided by one shot and 11 others were won by two shots.

Ontario Boxers Take 6 Wins

TORONTO (CP)—Ontario boxers pounded out wins over United States boxers in six of the eight international bouts at the 31st annual Newsboys' Benevolent boxing show at Maple Leaf Gardens Monday night.

Only one of the eight contests failed to last the scheduled three rounds.

A crowd of 7,000 watched the matches between the Ontario boxers and fighters of Golden Gloves calibre from Detroit and Buffalo.

Boxers from the Bagnato Boxing Club in Toronto won five of the international bouts. The Ontario win went to flyweight Jim Hurley of Brantford, who won a unanimous decision from Johnny James, Buffalo, in the 112-pounds class.

John Kelly, Niagara Falls, Ont., scored a TKO over Peter Anderson, Toronto, at 1:37 of the third round in their heavyweight division bout.

Santee Sets Record For Indoor Running

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Wes Santee of Kansas sped for a 4:04.9 mile here Monday night—the fastest ever run indoors.

The best previous indoor time was a 4:05.3 by Gil Dodds, former Wheaton, Ill., great, run at Madison Square Garden in 1948.

Dodds ran his record mile on an 11-lap banked board track. Santee ran on the eight-lap Michigan State gym dirt track as a feature of a triangular meet between Kansas, Illinois and Michigan State.

GRANT'S SPORT CORNER

By DON GRANT

Oh where, oh where have my sports notes gone?
Oh where, oh where can they be?
With the smokes cut short
With this column so long
Oh where, oh where can they be?

It all boils down to the fact we're in a desperate situation today. Over the weekend we wrote out a column notes on a cigarette package and then, never thinking, we tossed the empty pack away.

We're getting as bad as a contemporary (Toronto paper type) who tossed a cig package, cigs and notes into a mail box and arrived at work with the letter he was supposed to mail for his wife.

Before getting down to sports, this absentmindedness reminds us of a little joke mother used to tell about the absentminded professor who kissed the door and slammed his wife.

We aren't quite that bad.....yet.

Women Bowlers

Jim Kokesh (thanks boy, for the parka hood at the Loblaw fire) brings in a small note on ladies' bowling in Oshawa.

The weaker sex sent a team of bowlers to the Motor City on the weekend in the first annual ladies five-pin bowling playdowns, sponsored by good old Molson's. From all accounts of their efforts the men will have to roll pretty high this week in the district play at Campbellford or the little ladies will show them up.

Bill Osborne, Molson's rep., had the pleasure of presenting the district trophy to Bea Ross of Oshawa. Bea didn't have too much opposition, totalling some 1,553 points in six games (an average of 268, fellows). She also had the sigle high of 328.

The other 30 lasses, including 12 of Peterborough's best, were well off Bea's mark. H. Reynolds of Oshawa was second with 1,258, M. Thompson of Duffus third with 1,256, A. Lanning of Oshawa fourth with 1,251. Others in line were J. Moore, Peterborough, 1234; F. Kokesk (that's pretty close relation, Jim), 1,203; M. Collins, Campbellford, 1,197; B. Peterkin, Peterborough, 1,160; P. Taylor, Trenton, 1,155.

It's a good bet the 100 or so men will be bowling for at least these scores Saturday in the singles championship at Campbellford's Lockwood Lanes.

Hockey Playoff Dates

Up Lakefield way the Big Chief is really smoking. At least he was Monday morning when trying to arrange playoff dates between Lakefield Lumbermen and Port Hope.

Leaning over a cup of witch's brew at Babe's, Garn Samis revealed he had been telephoning the Ports halfway through Sunday night. Apparently the Ports only want to play their best of five semi-final on Friday and Saturday nights.

But Garn assured us the first game will likely be Wednesday night since they have only two weeks to complete the series and declare a winner to meet either Cobourg or Lindsay.

If the warmish weather continues, the Lumbermen may be forced back to the Civic arena. City folks will like the hockey played by Doc Bean and the his boys.

We going to keep drumming the boxing angle in Peterborough. During the past week Gord Smith, former Toronto Diamond Club boxer, has been contacted by at least 25 boys interested in starting a second club in the city. Gord's still hunting for a place to train.

At the same time Alex Cross, coach of the Fowlers Corners club, is busy lining up cards throughout the district, hoping to revive interest.

After the Sharbot Lake fights two weeks ago, Alex mentioned the lack of suitable accommodation for a card in Peterborough. This corner suggested perhaps St. Peter's High gym (they used the Sharbot Lake High school gym very successfully) and the armories. The gym seems most likely.

Incidentally Ken Robinson, the new recreational director, is a former boxer, being a good friend of former recreation director, Jack Dane, another successful boxer from this district. Ken's interested in Peterborough revival.

Another note has been received from our unknown pen-pal from the sunny regions of the US and A. This time he's in Texas, pardner, and writing from Hotel Cortez.

Invented In Canada

His unsigned note says "Guess those hockey and ball games we see Sunday afternoons in Toronto and Montreal are just figments of our imagination! Should we put our cousins wise to the fact that football was invented by Canadians, not Russians?"

Included is Bob Ingram's As I was Saying from the El Paso Herald-Post. This column is much better than last week's in that the facts are true, that is, some are.

Interviewing Gene Kiniski, Ingram quotes the Edmonton Eskimo (former U of Arizona star) as saying "All our teams travel first class, by plane, we stop in the best hotels, have best of medical attention and our salaries can't be so bad if we lure some top US players to our league."

American Kiniski really sticks up for his newly adopted Canadian football throughout the column and even puts the National Football League in its place for its "silly" accusations during the cold war.

The note refers to Ingram's info that "Canadian laws forbid Sunday sports of any kind" and the comment that "football has replaced ice hockey as Canada's No. 1 sport."

We leave that last quote as something for you to chew on.

STAND WELL BACK, MISTER—Junior Petes' goalie Bob Delahaye waves his stick as he stands well out of his net Monday night after making a stop. The Port Perry Flyers had brushed too close for comfort, a stick clipping him in the close play. Delahaye didn't clip Ted Attersley (lower photo); another player caught the Flyer with a high stick. Attersley was able to finish the game.

CITY CARPETBALL

The schedule for the week of February 22: Legion No. 11 vs. Fire Hall No. 4; Legion No. 1 vs. Orphans No. 8; Legion No. 7 vs. Glens No. 6; Legion No. 5 vs. Legion No. 9; LOL No. 12 vs. Red Patch No. 13; Legion No. 3 vs. Lawn Boys No. 2; Fire Hall No. 10 vs. Post Office No. 14.

Results of last week's play: LOL No. 12 swept to a 21-1 victory over Post Office No. 14 at the Orange Hall in the first game. The second game saw No. 14 go into the lead, which they held until the seventh end,, when No. 12 overtook and passed them until they in turn had built up a lead of 13-4 before No. 14 scored again. The final score was 15-8 for the Orange team.

At the Fire Hall, the first game saw Fire Hall No. 10 come from behind four times to tie the score; the last time was in the 11th frame. They then scored a single in the final end to win a close fight 8-7. The second game was Orphans No. 8 all the way as they went into the lead and held it until they had finally won by an 18-11 score.

Both games were won by Red Patch No. 13 over Legion No. 7. The first game was close; it was tied three times, the last time 9-all in the 11th frame. Then Patches scored a single to win 10-9 in the final end.

The second game was No. 13 all the way, even though No. 7 scored a big five in the 10th frame, making the score 12-10 for No. 13. The Red Patch team in the next frame also scored a five and then a three to win 20-10.

One of the best matches of the week developed between Legion No. 5 and Lawn Boys No. 2. In the first game No. 2 went into the lead, No. 5 tying the score at 5-5 in the sixth end, then going ahead by one in the next end. No. 2 captured the next three ends and the lead 10-7. A big five by No. 5 in the 11th frame made the score 12-10 for No. 5. In the final end No. 5 copped a deuce to win a 14-10 game. The second game again saw Legion No. 5 behind as the 11th end came up. The 11th and 12th frame fell to No. 5 with a three and a one, and the final score was 13-all.

Glens No. 6 were leading, in the first game, when in the eigth frame Legion No. 3 came through with a big five and then a deuce. While the Glens won two more frames with singles the game went to Legion No. 3 11-8. The second game was Legion No. 3's all the way as they won by a 21-6 score.

TIED THE GAME

Legion No. 11, coming from behind, tied the first game at 8-all in the ninth frame and went into the lead in the next frame by one. No. 9 then came through with a four to make the score 12-9 for them. In the final end, No. 11 came on top with a three end and the final score was 13-13.

The second game saw Legion No. 11 leading Legion No. 9, 6-1, when the blow fell. That was when No. 9 scored a six, two and two in the sixth, seventh and eighth frames, making the score 11-6 for No. 9. Legion No. 11 scored a single in the next end but No. 9 put the game on ice by scoring a four and a one in the 10th and 11th frames and while No. 11 captured the final end with a deuce they lost the game to Legion No. 9 by a 9-16 score.

At the Legion, Fire Hall No. 4 met Legion No. 1—or son against father. The first game saw No. 4 score a five in the seventh end which proved the big factor in a 13-6 victory for No. 4.

The second game saw Legion No. 1 leading all the way until No. 4 made it a 9-9 game, going into the final frame. Then Legion No. 1 put a ball on the kat and Legion No. 1 won a close 10-9 game.

To repeat, we have received an invitation to attend the Knox Men's Club annual bowling tournament, Friday, February 26, at 7.45 p.m. Members, do not leave those draw tickets in your pocket—sell them as the draw takes place April 14.

CURLING NOTES

By HERB MARTIN

The biscuits were soggy, the cream was sour,
The coffee was muddy and black;
The baby whined, the gas was low
And dad had a crick in his back.
Tom lost his cap, the last bell rang,
And everything is in a whirl—
Things all gone wrong this whole day long
'Cause mother has gone to curl!

Tomorrow is ladies' day at the curling rink. It's the day the lady curlers have been looking forward to since the 1953-1954 season began, away back in November. In short, it's their annual open bonspiel for the Warne Trophy. Play begins sharp at 9:30 o'clock, Wednesday morning, and will continue all day and well into the evening. And then on Thursday nine o'clock in the morning is the starting time, and it is expected that the finals in all three events will be over around five p.m.

Many rinks from outside clubs are coming to cross brooms with local ladies and the spectators are sure of some real high-class curling.

Playing in the Ontario open bonspiel at Toronto on Monday, Garth Braund and Dr. M. McCartney each won their opening game in the Royal York competition.

Flanagan and Barend in Semi-Final

Mills Brothers Take On Rough Twosome In Hombre Montana And Fred Atkins

The Mills Brothers return to action here this Wednesday at the Brock Arena in a tag team match against rugged Fred Atkins and huge Hombre Montana. This should be one for the books as the Mills boys are just about the worst rabble rouser in wrestling. Fans will come prepared to witness a smashing, crashing, hard-fisted encounter in which just about everything goes.

Speedy Pat Flanagan and equally speedy Johnny Barend should dish up a mat classic in the semi-final. Both men are fast and scientific, and keep moving at all times.

Earl McCready, always a favorite here, returns after a long absence to take on Ray Cernandos in the preliminary. Cernandos made a strong impression in his only appearance here last week.

EARL McCREADY

New Zealander Murray Halberg To Be Entry

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — The emergence of a slender New Zealand education student in the forefront of the track picture has raised the possibility of a three-way assault on the four-minute mile at Vancouver next summer.

Murray Halberg, a five-foot-ten, 137-pound youngster whose previous exploits were unknown outside New Zealand, attracted world-wide interest in track circles when he covered the mile Saturday in four minutes, 4.4 seconds, just three seconds off Gunder Haegg's world record.

The 20-year-old New Zealand cross-country champion disclaims any immediate intention of trying to crack the four-minute barrier. But his performance on the unfavorable footing of a 400-yard grass track marked him as a worthy opponent for the world's top milers, two of whom are possible starters in the British Empire Games at Vancouver.

WOULD MEET LANDY

Halberg is a virtual certainty to represent New Zealand at the games, where he will probably face Australia's great John Landy who has been clocked in 4:02.

Present indications are that Landy will participate in the games during a North American tour in which he will also test the top United States milers.

And B. E. Games promoters still retain the hope that Britain's Gordon Pirie will reconsider his decision to pass up the Vancouver meet in favor of a European campaign.

Pirie, who is at his best at longer distances but holds a decision over Wes Santee, the top American miler, has announced he plans to concentrate on his training for the European events later in August, in which he will match strides with Emil Zatopek, the great Czech distance runner.

DeWolfe Rolls High

Stan DeWolfe rolled high three of 873 and good singles of 276 and 254 in the Mercantile Bowling League at Playfair last week. The 7-0 wins went to Char. Credit No. 2, Combines, Austin's, Canoe, Bob & Betty, and Seabrook over United Co-op, Pet. Co-op, Loblaw's, Express, Cherney and Mustangs. The 5-2 victories were taken by Dominion, Ackison, Charl. Credit No. 1 over Tent & Awning, Turner's and Jets.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

History repeated itself as Muzz Patrick, younger of Lester Patrick's two big sons, recently took over as coach of the New York Rangers. He thus becomes a rival of his brother Lynn, former playing star of Rangers, now coach of Boston Bruins.

History enters into this brother-rivalry because it happened before. Lester Patrick, the colorful White Eagle, was coach of New York Rangers almost from the beginning of that colorful club's career. For one or two seasons, Frank Patrick, brother of Lester, was coach of Boston Bruins, later of Montreal Maroons, so these two brothers were rivals, too.

The Patrick family has written indelible chapters into the saga of hockey in Canada, at home and abroad. Lester and Frank engineered one of the most daring promotions in the entire history of sport on this continent when, nearly 50 years ago, after both had starred brilliantly in eastern hockey, they invaded the west coast, set up a series of artificial ice-rinks in Vancouver, Victoria and New Westminster, scoured the east for playing talent, and formed the Pacific Coast League.

This became the first international body in professional hockey, long before eastern United States cities became part and parcel of the National League. As far back as 1914, ten years before a United States city entered the National League, Portland, Oregon, had a team in the Patricks' West Coast organization, followed the next season by the entry of Seattle.

Not only did the Patricks conduct the League, with Frank as President, but both played regularly in the bitterly-fought games that marked the hockey of that era. So dangerous to eastern hockey did the Patricks become—they appropriated Toronto's Stanley Cup champions of 1914 intact and took them to the Coast—that the eastern moguls declared war. But the Patricks won the skirmish, and for a time, believe it or not, their Pacific Coast League had drafting rights from the east.

When their western league petered out, the Patricks sold out their stars to the east, and Lester became manager of Rangers, a position he held until 1946, a 20-year span.

Meantime, his two sons, Lynn and Muzz, had starred for Rangers. Lynn later became coach for a time, then moved to Boston to take over there, with signal success. Now brother Muzz comes east from the Pacific Coast Tacoma team, following a familiar Patrick trail, so the Patrick rivalry blazes once again.

Red Wings Easily Down Chicago In 3-2 Home Win

DETROIT (CP)—Beating the weak Chicago Black Hawks these days isn't a feather in anyone's cap, but to the powerhouse Detroit Red Wings it's an easy way to another National Hockey league championship. Monday night the Red Wings edged the Black Hawks 3-2 on home ice to boost their first-place margin to 10 points — their greatest this season. The Black Hawks have been easy pickings for the rest of the league with only 10 victories in 57 games, but to the Red Wings they have really been cousins. Detroit now has won nine out of 12 games from the last-place club and tied one for 19 out of a possible 24 points.

Detroit's record against Chicago last season was 7-4-3.

All the scoring came in the first 23 minutes of play Monday. In the final period the players on both sides were panting from the unseasonable Detroit heat. (It was 66 outside.)

Black Hawks took an early lead on Jack McIntyre's first of two goals.

PENALTIES BRING GOALS

McIntyre notched his first goal in the initial session while Detroit's Glen Skov was in the penalty box. Johnny Wilson evened the count for the Red Wings at 9:05. Less than two minutes later Gordie Howe got his 25 goal while Gus Mortson was in the penalty box.

Bill Dineen made it 3-1 for Detroit early in the second period and a minute later McIntyre rapped in his second goal.

Terry Sawchuk of Detroit made only 17 saves to 27 by Al Rollins.

Sullivan Headed For Records In Assists

NEW YORK (CP) — Centre George (Red) Sullivan of Hershey Bears is headed for an American Hockey League record in assists.

The 24-year-old 150-pounder from Peterborough, Ont., also is favored to take the league scoring title, provided the parent NHL Boston Bruins don't recall him for their drive to clinch a playoff berth.

Sullivan scored 11 points last week and that was the margin by which he led the AHL. Sullivan had 22 goals and 63 assists for 85 points. Ab Demarco set the league record of 76 assists with Buffalo in 1950-51.

Sullivan has 15 more games left to overtake Demarco.

RUNNNER-UP SPOT

In the runner-up scoring spot was Jack Gordon of Cleveland Barons with 24 goals and 50 assists for 74 points. Teammate Eddie Olson had 26 goals and 47 assists for 73 points.

Rounding out the top 10 were: Don Marshall, Buffalo 30-40—70; Gaye Stewart, Buffalo 29-40—69; Arnie Kullman, Hershey, 29-36—65; Ed Slowinski, Buffalo, 32-33—65; Danny Lewicki, Pittsburgh 29-32—61; Bronco Horvath, Syracuse 21-39—60; and Lorne Ferguson, Hershey, 30-30—60.

Slowinski's 32 goals topped the league. Larry Cahan of Pittsburgh was the leading bad man with 137 minutes in penalties.

Playoff Berths Decided In Senior OHA

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The playoff berths in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series have been decided.

With Niagara Falls' 3-1 loss to Hamilton Tigers in Hamilton last night the Cataracts dropped from the running for one of the six positions that would have enabled them to take part in the league playoffs.

The Cataracts, who have 30 points, have five games left this season. Chatham Maroons, in sixth place, have 41 points. Even if the Cataracts won all of their remaining games it would give them only 40 points.

The teams assured of post-season play are Owen Sound Mercurys Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen, Hamilton, Windsor Bulldogs, Stratford Indians and Chatham.

STILL CAUSE SHUFFLE

But Niagara Falls can still cause a shuffle in the positions of the top six teams. And the way this year's playoffs will be run positional standings can make a big difference.

A new playoff schedule this season gives the team that finishes first its choice to meet any of the five other teams in the playoffs. The second-highest team will then have its choice to meet any one of the remaining teams and the third-highest will play the remaining team.

The fight for first place is definitely between Owen Sound and Kitchener with the Mercurys holding a one-point edge and two games in hand over the Dutchmen.

Hamilton, Windsor and Stratford each have a chance to finish third.

Hamilton increased its third-place lead over the idle Bulldogs to three points with a victory over Niagara Falls Monday night.

Jack Taylor, Frank Bergeron and Bob Salvisburg, who came up from Dundas Merchants of the OHA Senior B league, scored one each for the Tabbies. Ed Plata notched the Cataracts' goal.

GREYHOUNDS VICTORS

In North Bay the league-leading Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Greyhounds of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association Senior A southern group defeated North Bay Trappers 5-2.

The victory increased Sault's first-place margin to six points over Sudbury Wolves.

Jim Johnston fired the winning goal for the Greyhounds. Other goals for Sault Ste. Marie were by Pentti Lund and Jim McBurney. Ab Demarco scored for the Trappers.

Chatham is at Windsor, Stratford at Niagara Falls and Kitchener at Owen Sound in the OHA tonight. Greyhounds play the Lumber Kings in Pembroke in the only NOHA meeting.

Snyder Says Ti-Cats To.d Of Heath Injury

HAMILTON (CP)—Bob Snyder, former coach of the Calgary Stampeders, denied Monday that he was associated with the National Football League or any club in that league.

Snyder, reported several weeks ago as being a propaganda agent for the NFL to persuade U.S. players from coming to Canada, was chief witness for Stan Heath in his Ontario Supreme Court lawsuit against coach Carl Voyles and the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four Football Union.

Heath, one of numerous quarterbacks employed by the Tiger-Cats last season, is suing to recover his $9,500 salary and $500 general damages. The case will continue today.

TOLD OF SORE ARM

Snyder also testified that he had informed Voyles of the Tiger-Cats, by telephone that Heath had a sore throwing arm before the transaction had been completed between the Calgary and Hamilton clubs sending the quarterback to the Tiger-Cats. Snyder said that Voyles had inquired about the injury and Snyder assured the Hamilton coach that it wasn't serious.

But last fall when the Tiger-Cats released Heath it was understood that he was dropped owing to his inability to throw forward passes. The Hamilton club maintained at the time that they didn't realize Heath had an ailing arm when they bought him from Calgary.

Lumley Drawing Away From Sawchuk In Race

MONTREAL (CP)—Terry Sawchuk of Detroit Red Wings is putting a hefty squeeze on Harry Lumley of Toronto Maple Leafs in the race for the Vezina trophy, emblematic of goal-tending supremacy in the National Hockey League.

Until Monday night, Sawchuk was tied with Lumley with a 1.72 average after trailing the burly Toronto goalie in a close chase since mid-November. Each played 54 games; each let by 93 goals.

But with Detroit's 3-2 win over Chicago Black Hawks Monday night, Sawchuk fell to an average of 1.73—giving the drop to his Maple Leaf adversary.

The goalie struggle was only one feature of the NHL figures released by the league today.

Others showed that Gordie Howe Detroit's favorite adopted son, has again been up to the tricks that have made him the league's top point-getter. During the week he copped five goals and one assist for 64 points. His latest six points were scored in three games, best showing of the week

BETTER THAN RICHARD

This was better than his nearest rival, Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens, who failed to get a goal but provided two assists for a total tally of 54 points.

Canadiens themselves dropped from second to third place in team standings.

Toronto slipped ahead of the Habs, gathering four of eight possible points during the last week on one win, two ties and one loss. This gave the Leafs 64 points, one more than the Montrealers who had two ties, one loss and no wins. Toronto has one game in hand over Canadiens.

Detroit's two wins were enough to give Red Wings 74 points, a good margin for their long-standing league leadership.

Boston Bruins made the best showing of the week, winning three games of four and losing one. Taking six of eight possible points, they made the going tougher for New York Rangers for the last playoff spot.

CHIHAWKS WIN ONE

Boston now has 55 points compared to 50 for New York. Chicago Black Hawks are last with 26 points, winning one of four during the week.

In individual scoring, Richard still is top goal-getter with 32 goals and 22 assists. Howe has 26 goals and 38 assists.

Ted Lindsay of Detroit maintains third spot with 47 points, while Bernie Geoffrion, out with an injury, comes next with 46 points.

Ken Mosdell of Montreal with one goal this week became one of the five players to score 20 goals this season.

During the next week, Detroit plays four times, including two games in Montreal Thursday and Saturday. Then the teams meet in Detroit Monday.

Boston and New York each have three games, one of them a Boston-at-New York meeting.

2 Que. Players Ranked Top For Juniors

MONTREAL (CP)—Pierre Lambert of Victoriaville, Que., and Marietta Laframboise of Montreal were ranked No. 1 in the national junior 1953 tennis rankings for men and women announced Monday night.

The announcement was made by Dr. Georges Leclerc, chairman of the Davis Cup selection and national ranking committee of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association.

John Swann of Vancouver and Mary Nunns, Toronto, were given the respective No. 2 rankings and Guy Durocher, Sherbrooke, and Eleanor Dodge, Montreal, No. 3.

HONORABLE MENTION

Dr. Leclerc said the honorable mention category was again used to give recognition to players who, in the opinion of the ranking committee, performed creditably throughout the season but who failed by a narrow margin to qualify for inclusion in the first 10.

In the junior women class, Dawn McDonald, Cornwall, won equal ranking with Jean MacPherson, Bridgewater, N.S.

Those receiving honorable mention included: Dick Kalik, Cornwall, in both junior men and boys classes, and G. Delacretaz, also of Cornwall, in both junior women and girls classes.

Job Jokes Still Making Rounds Behind Grim Russian Iron Curtain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Probably people have joked about their government ever since they set up their first one.

So it's a relief to know the same thing still goes on behind the iron curtain, even though the jesting may be grim and dangerous.

Anyone who escapes from a Communist-controlled country is asked, among other things, what stories are going the rounds. For example:

A Soviet officer was explaining to a Czech peasant how Russia could deal with the United States.

"We could pack 20 atom bombs in 20 leather suitcases," he said, "and distribute them all over America."

The peasant looked doubtful. "what's the matter?" asked the officer. "Don't you believe we Russians have 20 atom bombs?"

"Oh, I wasn't thinking of that," the peasant said. "I was just wondering where you'd ever find 20 leather suitcases."

Then there was the secret police agent who went out to discover what the people really thought of the Communist regime.

The first day was tough. Nothing but complaints. Finally he found a laborer who spoke highly of the Communists.

"People can say what they like about the Communists," the laborer said, "but as far as I'm concerned, I'd rather work for them than anyone else."

"Fine, fine," said the agent. "And what type of work do you do?"

"Me?" said the laborer. "I'm a grave digger."

Farouk Stamps Bring £78,000 At Auction

CAIRO (Reuters) — Ex-king Farouk's collections of Egyptian stamps brought a total of more than £78,000 at the auction sales which ended here Monday night.

Sales by the Egyptian government of the deposed monarch's collection of stamps from the rest of the world are due to open Wednesday.

The last batch of Egyptian stamps sold for about $46,000 to K. Bileski of Winnipeg who was also among the highest bidders Sunday. Bileski paid $7,500 for a unique collection specially prepared for exhibition at the Paris and Brussels philatelist congresses in 1949.

HAMILTON (CP)—Ricky Pettifer, was drowned Monday in a creek at nearby Orchard Beach when he fell into the water. He had been playing on the shore with two other children.

Gov't Says Employment Normal By Spring; 2 Non-Confidence Motions

OTTAWA (CP) — Rising unemployment in Canada has prompted two motions of want-of-confidence in the government. The government, however, says employment will return to normal by spring.

The motions were proposed Monday in the Commons by the Progressive Conservative and CCF parties.

Progressive Conservatives suggested a parliamentary committee to investigate unemployment and recommend remedial measures.

The CCF motion said the situation is serious and asked the government to take immediate action to "prevent further economic distress."

DAY-LONG DEBATE

The motions touched off a day-long debate on the issue. It will continue today. As amendments to a government motion to have the House go into committee to consider departmental estimates, they were technically non-confidence motions.

The unemployment debate, first in the Commons in years, follows meetings between labor leaders and the government in which the labor leaders have suggested unemployment may be as high as 580,000.

Labor Minister Gregg said Monday that at Jan. 21, 524,000 persons were looking for jobs through the government's National Employment Service, 186,000 more than at Dec. 10 and 140,000 more than a year ago.

The bureau of statistics estimate of unemployed was 280,000 at Jan. 23—90,000 more than in early December and 93,000 more than a year ago.

He said the 524,000 figure is too high for the actual number of unemployed. He made no estimate of actual figures, but said the present situation is due mainly to seasonal factors and to those temporarily between jobs for reasons other than the cold weather.

Acting Prime Minister Howe said he expects employment to return to levels of the last several years "as the season opens up."

The government was taking the situation seriously, but economic facts indicated it was "a temporary slowdown in the pace of business, which has coincided with the winter slack period."

INVESTMENT TO INCREASE

Capital investment was expected to reach $5,800,000,000, a three-percent increase over the 1953 record.

Canada's exporters could expect "another good year" and the high level of consumer purchasing should continue.

However, unions should recognize that it is not the time to seek larger wage increases. Workers should join with industry in the transition from the "Korean period" to peacetime conditions.

Howard Green (PC—Vancouver Quadra), who proposed his party's motion for a Commons committee, said unemployment is a serious problem and now should be faced.

The government had given little hope that it would deal with the situation at an early date.

Clarie Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South) said the government should plan definite steps to provide jobs, cope with seasonal unemployment in the same way it "staggered" production seasons during the Second World War, and appoint a royal commission to recommend new industries.

CHIMNEY AND PIPES AFIRE

Firemen were called to John Brooks' home, 496 Park St. N., at 5.37 p.m. Monday to deal with a triple threat. A space heater had overheated and the chimney and pipes had caught fire. The fires were doused with a hand pump.

REPRESENTS COUNCIL

Ald. R. E. (Bob) Knox Monday night was appointed a representative of city council on the board of directors of the Victorian Order of Nursing. Ald. Stan McBride was appointed council's representative on the Children's Aid Society board.

BUYS BRITISH MACHINE

On order for a $1,500,000 turbo-generator recently placed by Calgary Power Ltd. with a British firm was one of the biggest purchases of British equipment ever made from Alberta. It was reported in the Calgary Albertan recently. M. J. Marshall, United Kingdom trade commissioner to Alberta, has been two months in office. "From peanuts to battleships" is the scope of Anglo-Canadian trade, he says.

HONORARY DIRECTOR

Gordon Matthews for many years a member of the board of directors of the YMCA and a past president has been named by the board an honorary director in recognition of the great service which he rendered the institution. Mr. Matthews became a member of the board in 1931 and served unti lthis year. He was president in 1936 and 1937.

NO COMMENT

As has been the custom with his predecessors, Ald. Pat Anglesey "skipped over" the list of recommendations for business licences when reading his report as chairman of the finance committee Monday night. Well down on the list, in alphabetical order, were those for mobile lunches for Percy Harrison and E. Conners, the source of some debate in the 1953 council, when a delegation appeared to protest the way the mobile lunches operated. The licences were approved without comment by council Monday night.

2 Girls Save Chums In Icy Water

Railing Collapses Over Culvert Thrown Into Water

KEENE (ENS)—Two eight-year-old Keene girls are credited with saving two of their school friends from possible death by drowning Monday afternoon.

Peggy Green, 5, and Gerryl Long, 6, fell into an overflowing culvert north of Villiers Monday when the rail on which they were leaning collapsed. Soon they were in icy water over their heads.

Hearing their cries, Janet Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Wilson and Isobel Irwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Irwin rushed to the rescue.

When the girls rushed in to save their friends, Gerryl had sunk to her chin and only the coat-tails of the Long child were visible. Isobel and Janet then were able to haul their friends out of the water and take them to Mrs. Irwin's home.

Both Peggy and Gerryl are newcomers to the Villiers district. Peggy's father is with the army and Geryl is the daughter of Mrs. John Long. Isobel's mother, Mrs. Clifford Irwin, teaches school at Villiers where all four children attend.

No Criminal Case To Be Heard By Supreme Court

Mr. Justice Ferguson was presented with the traditional pair of white gloves "symbolic of the purity of Peterborough county" at the opening of the Supreme Court Monday afternoon. The gloves are presented whenever there are no criminal cases to be tried at a session of the assizes.

Since there are civil cases only this session, a grand jury was not empanelled. Although happy that this "old and settled community" has been without major crime recently, the judge regretted that there should be no grand jury on hand to perform one of its "essential functions" — inquiring into jails to see if any persons are on hand who should be tried, and generally probing jail conditions.

The only petit jury empanelled Monday did not have much to do since opposing counsel agreed on a settlement after consultation.

The case of Furtney vs. LeBreton resulted in awards of damages totalling $2,000 against Herve LeBreton, of Oshawa. This sum was earlier agreed on by J. W. Thompson, QC for the plaintiffs, and by A. W. S. Greer for LeBreton. LeBreton also pays $500 court costs.

THREE-CAR SMASH

Last June 21, LeBreton, a resident of Oshawa, was in collision with cars driven by Wentworth Furtney and his brother-in-law, Cecil Furtney, both of Toronto. Wentworth Furtney was following Cecil into the city when they were met by the LeBreton vehicle and there was a three-car smash.

Cecil's car was sideswiped by the LeBreton vehicle, which then caromed over the road and ricocheted into the rear left side of Wentworth's car. None of the cars hit the ditch but all were extensively damaged.

Cecil Furtney's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Furtney, driving with her son, suffered a broken hip as a result of the accident. It occurred near the Rockhaven Motel on Highway 28 south-west of Peterborough.

Damages awarded by Mr. Justice Ferguson were broken down as follows: Cecil Furtney, $850; Wentworth Furtney, $254.35; Mrs. Elizabeth Furtney, $895.65.

At the time of the accident Mr. LeBreton was driving a new car with only 200 miles on the speedometer. He was not insured.

Police chief John Thompson, who has been ill for the past week, is reported to be progressing satisfactorily. Convalescing at home, chief Thompson is expected to be absent from the station for about a month.

Council Delays Approving Rink Supervision

City council Monday night delayed approval of Ald. Bob Knox's suggestion to have the recreation commission take over supervision of the outdoor skating rinks from the parks department during the 1954-55 season.

The proposal came from Ald. Knox's parks committee where it was pointed out that it had been impossible for the parks department supervisors to curb some of the rowdyism at the rinks.

The idea, first mooted by Ald. Knox, was for the recreation commission to endeavor to awaken sufficient neighborhood interest in the success of the rinks to provide volunteer supervision. It was hoped in this way to cut down on some of the rowdyism.

When the recommendation came before council Monday night, Ald. Harold Rehill, said he wondered if it would be better to have a meeting of the parks committee with the recreation commission to talk it over before it was definitely decided to have the parks department drop the responsibility of supervision.

SHIFTING EXPENSES

Ald. Rehill said this would be necessary in his opinion, especially if it were to mean shifting the expense of the rinks from the parks department to the recreation commission.

Ald. Knox said he had already taken the matter up with the recreation commission and he hadn't heard much objection to it. He said the parks department would continue the job of maintenance, including setting up, flooding and cleaning the rinks. This could be done in the mornings so that employees would be free the rest of the day for other tasks.

"I don't think the present supervision is satisfactory," he said. "If the recreation commission hasn't enough money, now is the time to ask for it."

"I feel you have done a wonderful job in the parks committee," Mayor Norman Graham told Ald. Knox. "But I would like to see that recommendation deleted from your report until we start going over the estimates."

175 Attend Session Home Builders' Clinic

The attendance of 175 people interested in housing at the first session of a homebuilders "clinic" at Peterborough Lumber Co. suggested to Howard Doolittle, sales manager, that "probably we'll never catch up with the demand."

The subject for Thursday night will take up the financing of a new home and the provisions of the housing act. It will be discussed by Murray Humphries of the Veterans Land Act office, Al Revie of Cntral Mortgage and Doug Cochrane of the mortgage department of London Life.

List Of Names Suggested In Move To Start Centre

Plans for the re-organization of a general committee of the Memorial Community Centre were advanced to the stage of nominations at the weekend. Mayor Norman G. Graham presided, and with him were Ald. W. Gordon Powell, Ald. Stan McBride, Harold Dormer and Frank Buckland.

Their assignment was to line up a slate of citizens for presentation to a general meeting next Saturday afternoon. At that time other nominations may be submitted from the floor.

One of the responsibilities of the general committee will be to appoint building, finance and publicity committees.

Ald. Gordon Powell informed the Examiner today that the men who have been listed as prospects are to be consulted for their consent.

POSSIBLE BOARD MEN

They are: Doug Anderson, Percy Killingbeck, Geddes Harper, Dick Ouimet, G. A. Macdonald, Harold Dormer, Reg. Faryon, Ed Riley, George Gimblett, Don McGillis, Max J. Swanston, A. E. Adams, Joseph Watson,, R. R. Stewart of Otonabee; John Kitney, president of the Peterborough Exhibition, Harry Yudin, Dave Leether, Ray Tanner, Dr. Rodger Chenoweth, Arthur H. Lewis, T. C. Ephgrave, Hurrell Dodds, Percy Johnston, Harold L. Garner, James Lillico, also a representative from the Veterans' Association of CGE and from the Veterans of Western Clock, one each from two Labor organizations.

Robert Maybee was also proposed but he has already decided that his affairs at Peterborough Lock Co. prevent him from accepting nomination.

One of the suggestions was that Max Swanston should be considered as a prospect of chairman of the general committee. It was also suggested that Bob Hamilton be made secretary.

Also named were Cec Perdue and Bud LaBranche. The original Memorial Community Centre committee consisted of 30 members, and that precedent was followed in proposing 30 for the consideration of the meeting next Saturday.

Eventually when, in the reviving hopes of the general public, progress with site and preliminaries of construction develops, a small board of management of the Centre is to be appointed.

Finish Study Of Comet

LONDON (AP)—Three top officials of Japan Air Lines flew home Monday night after 2½ months in Britain studying the Comet II airliner. The airline has placed an initial order for two Comets for the Tokyo-San Francisco run. The service opened last week with an American-built DC-6, but the Japanese plan to switch to Comets next year.

Claim Fire Bug In Groceteria Late Day Of Fire

A report that a fire bug was in the Loblaw store late Thursday afternoon was unconfirmed today by Lionel Bishop, investigator for the Ontario Fire Marshall's office, and by city police.

Mr. Bishop arrived in Peterborough Monday noon. Fire Chief William Sorrie sought help on Friday in investigating the $500,000 fire which destroyed the modern supermarket and two smaller stores, Western Tire and Auto, and Superior Propane Ltd.

The investigator made a preliminary inspection of the ruins about 3 p.m. Monday.

He refused to comment on the possibility of arson. This theory arose on the weekend when it was discovered the fire did not start in the oil furnace.

KNOWN AS FIRE BUG

Today, as Mr. Bishop continues his investigation, unofficial sources revealed that a man, known to Peterborough police as a fire bug, was seen in the Loblaw store shortly before closing time Thursday.

The same source added that the man was also seen downstairs in the store basement by three witnesses and in the vicinity of the focal point of the blaze, the south-west corner of the building by the loading platform and unloading chute.

It is believed the fire got under way in this corner and may have been fed to the other corners of the building by inflammable material stored near the chute.

As yet, no one has been questioned by the police. Detective John Stevenson has been named to work with Mr. Bishop.

Mr. Bishop refused to comment at all today on his investigation and the fact there may be an arson suspect. He criticized the Examiner for publishing the story Monday that the possibility of arson was being investigated.

"I'm not answering any questions after printing things like that.," he told the Examiner today. "It ties our hands. I won't answer any questions whatever."

Council Agrees To Consider Again Giving $1,000 Grant To Registry

The off-again, on-again question of a $1,000 grant to the Peterborough Community Nursing Registry was dropped back into the laps of the city fathers Monday night, when a delegation for the registry asked city council to reconsider their reversal of a previous decision to make the grant.

Spokesman for the delegation was Dr. W. I. Taylor, who, along with the president, Mrs. Eva Breckenridge, was subjected to a barrage of questions by Ald. Alene Holt, until Mayor Norman Graham called a halt by allowing Ald. Holt "one more question."

The delegation included Sister Gonzaga and Sister Benedicta of St. Joseph's Hospital, Miss Evelyn Robson, director of nursing at Civic Hospital, Mrs. C. J. Ray of the Civic Hospital board of governors, and Donald Munro, principal of King George School.

Council passed Ald. Gordon Powell's motion to refer the matter to the next meeting of the committee of the whole council. It was Ald. Holt who seconded Ald. Powell's motion.

CONFUSION

Dr. Taylor said there seemed to be some confusion as to what the registry was and was not. First of all, it was not a private corporation; it was a group of citizens whose members were nurses. The average salary of the women it employed in 1953 was slightly under $21 a week.

The registry was not meant to provide a service which could be provided otherwise; it was not in competition with private enterprise and it provided a community service which only registered nurses could perform.

The registry services were paid for, generally speaking, by the nurses, doctors and hospitals but approximately half the 21,000 calls handled by the registry last year were from private citizens seeking help, although the general public had not contributed to date.

The registry had contributed to the maintenance of professional standards of nursing in hospitals, Dr. Taylor said. They insisted that nurses who had not had employment for three years take a six-months course, which consisted of hospital floor duty.

From the point of view of civil defence, there was no substitute for the registry in cases of disaster involving injuries to several persons, he said.

The registry rendered help to the police and fire departments and sports organizations, he added.

Speaking as a private citizen and not as a representative of his profession, Dr. Taylor said that if the registry were to cease functioning, the doctors whose offices were in clinics would have to set up an equivalent service. As it was, the professional groups could get cheaper service than from the registry.

MUST DISBAND?

Asked by Ald. Gordon Farquharson if it was the intention of the registry to disband if the $1,000 from city council was not forthcoming, Dr. Taylor answered that it was his impression that they would.

He said that when the executive met in January and it appeared the registry would not have sufficient funds to continue, it was the opinion of some members of the executive that they could not support the registry if it continued to show a deficit, as this would be embarrassing to certain supporters.

"Certain members of the executive would not want to continue in office unless there was a reasonable chance of financial assistance," Dr. Taylor said.

Ald. Powell asked how it would affect future operations of the registry if council's decision were held over until after March 8. Dr. Taylor said that the urgency of the request lay with the need for making arrangements for listing the registry's number along with its subscribers' numbers in the telephone directory.

"I think it would be very embarrassing and entirely wrong to have the listings if no such number existed," Mrs. Breckenridge commented.

Ald. Holt said she seemed to have been the target of some criticism during the past week. She had been falsely accused of not attending some of the meetings. As a consequence, she said there were a number of points the delegation ought to clear up, as they would only come up again when the request went to committee.

"We were led to think at first that this grant would be only for one year," Ald. Holt said. "Am I

$10,000 Libel Suit Opens In Supreme Court; Two Rival Unions Involved

UE Member Art Hunter Brings Suit Against Thomas Quinn, And Three Top Officials Of IUE

A $10,000 libel suit, brought by Art Hunter of Local 524, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (Indep.), against Thomas M. Quinn of Ennismore, is being heard today at the Peterborough Assizes. Named along with Quinn as defendants are three top officials of the rival union, the International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO-CCL). They are Joseph Wirtz, IUE Canadian co-ordinator; Ray Hansen, head of campaign publicity in 1952-53; and Minor J. Shaw, IUE international representative.

The case is going on before Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson and a Peterborough county jury.

Hunter claims he was libelled in a leaflet issued by the IUE-CIO CGE organizing committee on April 17, 1953, during the campaign by the IUE to supplant the UE as bargaining agents for more than 3,000 production workers at the CGE plant in Peterborough.

QUOTE FORGERY

Quinn is quoted as saying in an IUE leaflet that a checkoff card purportedly signed by him was a forgery.

"Furthermore," the alleged statement continues, "I told Art Hunter, business agent, that it is a forgery and he knows it. According to my records I have approximately $6 in back checkoff money owing to me."

Following is the leaflet that Hunter has entered as an exhibit, the basis of his case:

"Here Is The Proof! (large type heading.)

"Below you see the signed statement of Thomas M. Quinn. This statement speaks for itself. It states simply and categorically: 'I never joined the union at 50 cents a week, and that the checkoff card bearing my name for such checkoff is a forgery.'

"Furthermore, compare the signatures on the UE's so-called 'evidence' and you will note the difference yourself. Especially, note the Q—note how in Quinn's own handwriting the Q is much more elaborate; UE's Q looks just like a (large 2).

"No amount of so-called documentary evidence can lie UE's way out of this. The worker involved declares that he never joined the union at 50 cents a week and no amount of lying can alter that fact.

"It is forgery. Brother Quinn has approximately $6 in back checkoff money coming. Will you give it to him, UE, or will you keep it as you did when you were caught forging signatures two years ago"?

Quinn's alleged statement, printed on the leaflet, follows:

"My name is Thomas M. Quinn. I live at Ennismore and have worked at CGE since August, 1950. I am now working in Industrial Control.

"I hereby state categorically and under oath that I never joined the union at 50 cents a week, and that the checkoff card bearing my name for such checkoff is a forgery.

"Furthermore, I told Art Hunter, business agent, that it is a forgery and he knows it. According to my records I have ap-

Bedroom Burglar Robs Tin Bank; Loot Totals $2.50

Through the ages crime annals have become filled with the histories of burglars. There have been cat burglars, safe burglars and many other species However, Peterborough seems to have caught up with one who appears to be specializing in a new field.

Twice, in as many days, this light-fingered gent (police think he is the same man) has forced his way into houses and made a beeline for the bedroom. So he has become known as the bedroom burglar.

Monday, while occupants Mr. and Mrs W. M. German were away, the boudoir boy broke into apartment 1259B at the Miller Block on Clonsilla Ave. He ransacked the bedroom and settled for a small tin bank which yielded $2.50.

To gain entry to the apartment he slid a knife through the door jamb and levered back the lock.

SAME MAN

It is highly probably that the same man entered Harold Simmons' house at 182 Dumble Ave. on Sunday. Here again the bedroom was ransacked and a small plastic bank was smashed to get $5.

Detectives think that clues suggest a professional at work. However, if he is like most professional men then he will be demanding a higher fee before long, or maybe the third try will prove unlucky for him.

Sees Profit Of $10,000,000 From Seaway

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A professor of economic and political science at University of Western Ontario said Monday Canada can expect a profit of about $10,000,000 a year when the St. Lawrence seaway is built.

Dr. M. K. Inman told a service club meeting Canada could charge between 50 cents and $1.25 a ton on shipping using the waterway and take in $30,000,000 a year. Expenses would reach about $20,000,000.

Iron ore probably would be the largest traffic item on the waterway and reach about 20,000,000 tons a year. Other large items upbound would be wood, pulpwood and paper. Downbound ships would carry wheat, other grains and automobiles.

Dr. Inman said railroads would probably lose traffic for a time but would benefit in the long run because the seaway would open up the country.

ICE FLOE RESCUE—Police and lifeguards combine to rescue two small boys adrift on an ice raft inside the breakwater on Toronto's waterfront. Marital Peace Improves In Que. Town

BOURLAMAQUE, Que. (CP)—Sociologically and in the matter of marital peace generally, Bourlamaque is improving. Police chief A. C. Riddington says so.

The chief duly reported his findings, with supporting facts and figures, in his annual report to the council of this town of 2,700, which is hard by Val d'Or in northwestern Quebec's mining area.

Chief Riddington noted with satisfaction that not only had "back fence" disputes fallen off by 75 per cent in 1953, but that "married life in our town has been running 90 per cent smoother than it did in 1952."

The chief reported: "Although it is reasonable to suspect that this department was not informed of all the back-fence controversies that transpired, the record nevertheless points to a pleasing degree of human harmony in our midst.

"We venture one step further to inform you that married life in our town has been running 60 per cent smoother than it did in 1952.

"Here, again, our view of the situation is obscured by conventionalism."

Italy's Political Situation Volatile

By WAYLAND HILTON YOUNG

ROME (OFNS)—The designation of the Christian Democrat "strong man" and former minister of the interior, Signor Mario Scelba, to be Italy's new prime minister, leaves the political situation here as obscure and volatile as ever.

Signor Scelba is best known for the part he played as the minister of the interior in the government of Signor De Gasperi in 1947-48, when there was a wave of Communist strikes and agitation with violence. Signor Scelba dealt with the agitation by the rather free use of police jeep charges and armoured cars in front of the prefectures. Later he passed the so-called Scelba Laws, which provided for summary treatment of agitators, both of the left and right, and which are still on the statute book.

The immediate focus of interest is now on the private crisis going on in Signor Saragat's Social-democrat party. Two members of the party's executive and the editor of its paper resigned in protest against Saragat's announcement that he was prepared to enter a Government under Scelba. This private crisis comes just after the Christian Democratic party had agreed with the three lay parties of the centre—Liberals, Republicans and Social-Democrats — themselves on a program for a coalition government; and it may well wreck the agreement.

Scelba may try to do what Fanfani failed to do: that is, launcha Christian-Democrat government without the promise of support from any other party. But with financial provisions waiting to be passed and the next round of general strikes announced the return to the premiership of De Gasperi himself looks more and more like the only possible solution short of new elections.

Refused Transfusion

HAMILTON (CP)—Hospital officials said Monday night the condition of a woman who refused a blood transfusion for an operation because of religious beliefs is in good condition. Doctors at the hospital declined to operate on the woman, a member of the Jehovah Witnesses, without the safeguards of blood plasma. Nature of her illness has not been disclosed.

Mrs. Shipley On Committee

OTTAWA (CP)—Mrs. Ann Shipley, Liberal member for Timiskaming, will be the only woman Commons member on the joint Commons-Senate committee which will study Criminal Code provisions on capital and corporal punishment and lotteries.

It will be the first major job for the energetic former reeve of Teck township, in northern Ontario, who entered the Commons in last summer's election. Mrs. Shipley, 53, is a mining expert and a former president of both the Ontario Municipal Association and the Ontario Mayors and Reeves Association.

She will join two other women on the committee. The Senate has named Mrs. Nancy Hodges (L—British Columbia) and Mrs. Muriel McQueen Fergusson (L — New Brunswick) to be among the 10 senators on the committee.

Men's Club Hears Of Boys' Work In City

The monthly dinner meeting of Mark St. United church men was held Friday evening in the Sunday school hall.

The dinner prepared and served by wives of the executive was enjoyed by 45 men. A vote of thanks was extended to the ladies by president Evans Hatherly. George Bennett was in charge of the entertainment, and introduced Bill McFarlane, secretary of the Peterborough Boys' Work Board, who led the group in a sing-song.

Sam Castle sang a solo, accompanied by Norm Hewitt. Hamilton Humphries entertained the group with four intersting films.

President E. Hatherly was in the chair for the business section and Stuart Laing spoke briefly to the group outlining the need for support to boys' groups in the city. Rev. Dr. N. D. Patterson closed the meeting with the benediction.

Preliminary Study Of Car Accessories

OTTAWA (CP) — The government said Monday combined investigators have made a preliminary study of the distribution and sale of automobile accessories.

Information tabled in the Commons for Douglas Harkness (PC—Calgary North) said, however, that "it is not possible to give any details at this time in view of its preliminary nature."

Mr. Harkness asked whether an investigation has been made under the Combines Investigation Act "to ascertain whether automobile manufacturers, oil companies, etc. exert pressure on their dealers compelling them to purchase parts and accessories exclusively from the manufacturers or their wholesale outlets."

Salsberg Unhappy Not On Committees

TORONTO (CP)—J. B. Salsberg, Communist - Labor-Progressive member of the Legislature for Toronto St. Andrew, Monday expressed "extreme dissatisfaction" over the way he has been placed on House committees during the last three years.

"There are certain committees that I have asked to be placed on. I have been dropped from some and in each case it was for questions I had asked . . . I think it is a poor business."

Mr. Salsberg said as the only member of his party in the house, he had no one to talk things over with.

"You might try talking to yourself," quipped Premier Frost who promised to investigate the matter.

Urge Heat Bylaw

STRATFORD (CP) — Board of health has recommended that city council pass a heat bylaw to force landlords to provide reasonable heat for their tenants. Mayor Lawrenfe Feick suggested a heat clause could be inserted in a rental control by-law which has already had one reading in council.

Will Stock Waters

TORONTO (CP) — Millions of whitefish fry will be placed in Ontario waters during March and April, the department of lands and forests said Monday. About 235,000,000 whitefish eggs were obtained last fall, and it was expected about 80 per cent of these will soon hatch and be ready for distribution.

New Deal For British Guiana Announced In House Of Commons

By J. HALCRO FERGUSON

LONDON (OFNS) — The first concrete result of last year's constitutional crisis in British Guiana was announced in London last week, when the Colonial Secretary, Oliver Lyttelton, told the House of Commons of the $24,000,000 development plan for that colony, which includes a grant of some $8,000,000 from the United Kingdon Government.

More than $8,000,000 of the total is to be allocated to transport, communications and public works. At present the country's communications system, if such it can be called, is virtually restricted to the densely-populated coastal strip. It consists of one partially-metalled road, largely built-up and made perilous by wandering pedestrians and livestock, running east from Georgetown, the capital, to the country of Berbice, crossing a ferry at New Amsterdam; and westwards towards Essequibo from the west bank of the Demerara river at Vreed-En-Hoop, which is connected by ferry with the capital.

A railway wanders westward from the same point, and is operated by toy-like trains bought from Bermuda after the war, when the latter country bowed to the inevitable in permitting motor traffic for the first time. A more serious-looking railway runs eastward from Georgetown itself to Rosignol, on the banks of the Berbice river.

COMMUNICATIONS RESTRICTED

Apart from an American-built highway to the airport at Atkinson Field, communications in the area are restricted to river transport and airways. There are no practical land - communications with the neighbouring republics of Brazil and Venezuela. The telephone system is confined to the coast, and outside Georgetown and New Amsterdam almost the only subscribers are sugar-plantations, business premises, police stations, and so on. Public electric light and power is also available only in the neighbourhood of the two cities, although the plantations have their own generators.

Two and a half million pounds sterling is allocated under the new proposals for agriculture, forestry and land - settlement schemes for small farmers. So far the large sugar companies have been chiefly responsible for such schemes, although the Government has started a land-settlement scheme at Cane Grove, which is being watched with interest and some scepticism by the private firms.

So far the program basically follows the recommendations of the recently - published World Bank report. Where it goes further is in the allocation of $10 million for social development, principally in the form of housing, which will be in addition to the $1,250,000 already transferred by the sugar producers from the Sugar Price Stabilization Fund for the replacement of the old "ranges" where sugar workers live in overcrowded and unsanitary conditions.

Housing certainly provides one of the chief grounds for complaints by the Guianese workers, and it is a subject which the deposed People's Progressive Party administration exploited to the full for electoral purposes, however little action the party took in practice. The emphasis on housing, though no doubt largely the result of the sincere interest taken by the Governor, Sir Alfred Savage, in the matter, may be intended to steal some of the thunder from the still-popular PPP. Housing legislation might have this effect; but it might equally well cause the Guianese to give more credit to the PPP on the grounds that if the Party had not agitated as it did, nothing would have been done. Indeed, the PPP is likely to take this line about the proposals as a whole.

Another effect of the development schemes will certainly be to cause dissatisfaction in the more "well - behaved" colonies which may well draw the moral that the way to extract more favorable treatment from the home government is to make a thorough nuisance of yourself. This does not mean that West Indian politicians (for instance) are going to precipitate crises deliberately; but it is likely to lead to a lot of awkward questions —questions which the colonial office will have to answer.

Horse Trainer Dies

TORONTO (CP)—Robert James Robinson, 39, well-known horse trainer and rider, died here Monday after a brief illness. Mr. Robinson had been employed at the Clifford Sifton stables here after coming to Toronto from Guelph six years ago. His widow, the former Maud Chappell, a daughter Shirley Ann, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Avid Robinson of Guelph, survive.

SURVIVES 1,000-FOOT FALL — Pte. Raymond Jacques, 22-year-old paratrooper from Thetford Mines, Que., fell 1,000 feet with his parachute only partly open. He landed in a two-foot snowbank and suffered a fracture of the upper spinal column. His parachute came out of its case during a routine jumping exercise at Ancienne Lorette, a Quebec City suburb, but the silk did not spread properly. The army has set up a board of inquiry to investigate the cause of the mishap.—(CP Photo).

Plan Telephone Authority To Regulate Independents

TORONTO (CP)—Formation of an Ontario telephone authority to regulate and advise approximately 500 independent telephone companies operating in the province is proposed in a bill introduced in the Legislature Monday.

The bill, a complete revision of an act which has remained untouched since 1918, would improve the service provided to 164,000 subscribers by the independents. It is based on the recommendations of the Ontario hydro commission's rural telephone committee, set up in 1951.

Under the act, the authority would regulate rates, order construction or alteration of plants to provide adequate service, set up bookkeeping standards, arbitrate disputes and establish training schools for personnel.

24-HOUR SERVICE

Any telephone authority decisions would be subject to appeal to the Ontario appeal court. The act would provide public ownership of telephone systems by rural municipalities.

All systems would be required to give 24-hour service. At present some 6,000 subscribers receive only part-time service.

The act also would provide a maximum $50 fine or 30 days in jail for anyone who refuses to give up the line for an emergency call.

A similar penalty is provided for use of "indecent, obscene, blasphemous or grossly insulting language."

A person is also liable for a maximum fine of $50 or 30 days in jail for revealing content of a conversation not intended for that person, in other words eavesdroppers who gossip. This applies to telephone company employees as much as the general public.

Ex-Paratrooper Hanged For Girl's Death

STRATFORD (CP) — Reuben Henry Norman, a 27-year-old former paratrooper, was hanged at 12:23 a.m. today for the noonday murder of Jean Marie Satchell, 17, whom he shot in downtown Stratford Feb. 2, 1953.

Norman shot the girl nine times with an automatic pistol following a brief argument.

Norman was declared dead at 12:36 a.m. today.

L. H. Morgan, sheriff of Perth county, quoted him as saying: "I offered myself to my country and now am called to a greater service. I realize I'm an undue burden on you people called to witness my execution and I asked God to bless you all."

The gallows was set up in the jail yard north of the main building. Part of the gallows protruded a few feet above the brick wall around the yard and was covered by a tent-like tarpaulin.

Sheriff Morgan said Norman repeated the 23rd psalm verse by verse after his spiritual advisor, Lieut. Walter Ernest of the Salvation Army, as they walked to the gallows.

Press representatives were barred from the hanging. On hand were the sheriff, Dr. C. E. Sylvester, jail physician, four police officers, jail governor Henry Johnson, a sheriff's officer, a justice of the peace and two turnkeys.

It was the third hanging in the 101-year history of Perth county; one in 1895 and the other in 1909.

Norman's body was released to his family for burial today. He came from nearby Nithburg.

The federal cabinet Monday rejected a plea for clemency for the condemned man.

Norman gave himself up to police immediately after he shot Miss Satchell. He remained in custody until his execution.

The case went to supreme court trial three times and the defence was based entirely on the question of his sanity. A jury found him not mentally fit to stand trial May 19, 1953, and he was committed to the Ontario Hospital at Penetanguishene.

Another jury Nov. 11 found him fit to stand trial. His six-day trial revolved around whether he was sane at the time of the murder. The jury found that he was and Norman was sentenced to hang.

Norman did not enter the witness box but said later: "I cannot deny the events took place at my hand . . . I was mentally ill."

FOILS RACKET—George Hill, Montreal's senior crown prosecutor, collaborated with Ernest A. Mitler, assistant district attorney of New York, to break what they describe as an international black market in baby adoptions. Police said Montreal babies were sold to couples in all parts of the United States. Mr. Hill said that the investigation of the racket has been hampered by the lack of legislation dealing with the buying and selling of babies.—(CP Photo).

Left Accident Man Fined $50

"I regard these types of offences as serious. People must learn to have respect for other members of the public," commented Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, on Monday when he convicted John William Owen, 313 Maitland Ave. of leaving the scene of an accident.

Apprehended Sunday after Constable Pat Gillis had noticed damage to the Owen car, Owen admitted to being the driver of the car which collided with a parked vehicle on Charlotte St. on the night of January 21. Pieces of metal and fragments of paint left at the scene of the accident gave police enough evidence to link Owen with the incident.

Frank Foster, QC, defending, said Owen had become panicky after the collision and had not known what to do. He had not even told his wife about the accident.

Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw, QC, said that a man who "lets a thing like that" go for three weeks without reporting it should not be given any leniency.

Imposing a fine of $50 costs $2.50, the magistrate said that if these offences continued, people could expect more than the minimum penalty.

Shook Hands Too Often Man Is Fined

Shaking hands with police officers isn't always the best thing to do as Bruce Aitkens, 44, of RR 11, Peterborough learned in magistrate's court Monday. He was convicted of impaired driving following an accident on George St. near the CPR station on February 5, involving another car owned by Maurice Carl, 19, of Fraserville.

Aitken testified that he had met a friend of his in a beverage room about 10:15 p.m. February 5, after a previous appointment to meet him elsewhere had been rearranged. He said that he had four draughts of beer and then left the hotel shortly after 11:00 p.m.

As he approached the CPR tracks on George St., he said, four or five cars were approaching him, and one car coming north, veered over onto his side of the road.

The Carl car was stopped on the sidewalk with about four feet of the front end out onto the street. Maurice Carl, and two friends who had been with him at the time of the accident, Herb Hewitt, 14, of Fraserville, and Ralph Anderson, 17, of 173 Rutherford Ave. testified that their car had stalled while coming out of the CPR boulevard and they had been attempting to push it when the accident occurred.

"I saw this car coming down the street — I knew it was going to hit us and I jumped out of the driver's seat and waved. The driver didn't see us, I guess, and hit the front end, said Carl.

Damage to both cars was very light.

Aitkens got out of his car and asked what was wrong — then I think he phoned the police." When the police came "I saw him shake hands with the officer and then he tried to shake hands with me," said Carl. He was slow on his feet, said Carl, and his breath smelled strongly of alcoholic beverage.

Aitkens said that he did not see the Carl car until he hit it. He had veered to the right to avoid hitting a car coming north on George St.

All the witnesses agreed that the area at the scene of the accident was icy. Aitkens said that he had never been involved in an accident in his 20 year's of driving. This included "some transport driving," he said.

Investigating officers Bob Menzies and John Williams testified that the accused "faltered," "staggered" and was "very talkative."

Magistrate W. R. Philp found the accused guilty of impaired driving and fined him $50.

Took Car, Crashed Awaits Sentence

A 19-year-old Oshawa youth, Gregory Dillon pleaded guilty in court Monday to having taken a car from the rear of the Empres hotel on the night of February 5. Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, convicted him of joy-riding and remanded him for sentence for a week.

Dillon took the car, owned by Mrs. Jean Seabrooke of 670 Little St., from near the hotel and drove south on Water St. He collided with two other parked cars and ended up against the Brewery office wall. He made his getaway that evening, but was apprehended in Oshawa three days later.

No Details About Autopsy

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) An autopsy ordered by crown attorney Ian Munro on Mrs. Sanra Vinda, who died suddenly at Jamestown on Sunday, was completed here early today.

No details were announced but Mr. Munro said a statement would be made later today.

Mrs. Vinda, 24-year-old mother of two children, died three hours after attending a christening party for a neighbor's baby.

Police said it was thought at first that she died from an overdose of sleeping tablets. She started vomiting half an hour after taking the tablets.

A Jamestown doctor who was called asked provincial police constable Orville Waite to investigate.

The body was sent here from Jamestown.

Mrs. Vinda's husband, Alfred, is a miner with Algoma Ore Properties.

Jamestown is 100 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie.

All-Cargo Aircraft For Canada Soon

TORONTO (CP) — Hugh Johnston, Trans-Canada Air Lines executive, told a meeting of the Canadian Fruit Wholesalers Association here Monday that all-cargo aircraft may be flying across Canada within two years.

Mr. Johnston said that in 1954 TCA expects to move 21,000,000 pounds of air freight alone. He said TCA is using three Bristol aircraft capable of carrying six tons. These planes, he said, are the first, exclusively designed for the transport of flight, to be used by a scheduled airline in North America.

ARRESTED — Herman Buller, 38-year-old Montreal lawyer, was arrested for questioning in connection with a huge international black market in babies. Buller was arrested as he prepared to fly overseas from Montreal's Dorval airport with his wife and her parents. He was charged with falsifying entries in a birth certificate and of giving advice in connection with an indictable offence. He was released on $2,000 bail and is scheduled to appear for preliminary hearing Feb. 19. Police said the ring sold babies to couples in all parts of the United States. — (CP Photo).

Commons Lauds Agnes Macphail

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of the Commons Monday paid tribute to Agnes Macphail, first woman member of the Canadian Parliament, who died Saturday.

Mrs. Ellen Fairclough (PC—Hamilton West), one of four women in the Commons, said Miss Macphail had been "an inspiration to all women" and made it possible for other women to seek elective posts and to play a greater part in Canadian public life.

Miss Macphail, who sat for 19 years in the Commons and five in the Ontario legislature, was "a courageous figure who lent color and substance" to Canadian politics.

M. J. Coldwell, CCF party leader said all parties, despite differences of opinion, held Miss Macphail in high regard for her sincerity of purpose in promoting penitentiary reforms.

Citizenship Minister Harris, who unseated Miss Macphail in 1940 in Grey-Bruce, said she was held in admiration for her intelligence and sincerity. She was "an outstanding advocate of causes which needed an advocate."

Orchid Paradise In Stone Found In Crystal Cave

By ED EASTERLY

CRYSTAL CAVE, Ky. (AP)—The sight of "an orchid paradise" in stone has rewarded the men and women of nerve and stamina who are penetrating the lower level of Kentucky's crystal cave.

And the spectacle, found 300 feet below the earth's surface, is believed to be only a sample of the wonders hidden in the wilderness of unexplored passages.

The National Speleological (cave study) Society, now fully manned and equipped at its advance camp three miles from the cave entrance today stepped up exploration on the third day of its seven - day expedition. The search was put on a round-the-clock basis.

The room of enormous flower-like formations in gypsum is on the edge of the uncharted area and had been observed before by only a few explorers.

William Burke Miller, an NBC reporter accompanying the expedition, described it as "an orchid paradise on the ceiling" and "the most beautiful sight any of us had ever seen."

The stone flowers "hung in clusters of indescribable beauty and their colors ranged from pure white to red-brown."

FORMATION OF CENTURIES

They formed over the centuries in a reaction of the limestone with moisture in a circular room 18 feet in circumference and five feet high.

Joe Lawrence, 27-year-old leader of the expedition, arrived at the outpost at midnight Monday night to take charge of the push into unknown areas.

Scouting teams still are searching for a site for advance camp No. 2, which must be six hours farther in the cave.

The teams are equipped not only for crawling but have mountain-climbing gear for scaling domes which rise to a height of 50 feet and pits which drop to a depth of 100 or more feet.

At many spots the explorers found written on the walls the name of Floyd Collins, who discovered Crystal cave in 1917 and was killed by a rock fall in 1925 while seeking a new entrance.

Within another day, however, they expect to put their names on walls never before touched by man.

See Helicopter Soon Used Widely As Public Service

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadians and others connected with the aviation industry are optimistic about bringing the helicopter into widespread public service in the near future.

J. T. Dyment, director of engineering for Trans-Canada Air Lines, predicts all short-haul flying will soon be handled by helicopter.

Everett B. Schaefer, chief technical engineer for Canadair, Ltd., believes helicopters may be in general use by North American operators, on short commuter runs and from airports to city centres, in the 1960s.

These predictions and a summary of the helicopter's position today are contained in a report published recently in Montreal by the International Air Transport Association.

The book contains views of a conference held last year in Puerto Rico which brought together some 150 aeronautical experts representing 65 companies and agencies.

Referring to the most practical use of helicopters, the book says there are two schools of thought on the subject.

The airlines group, consisting of operators of conventional aircraft say the helicopter would be most profitable operating between cities on existing airline routes, and on new routes made possible by its characteristics.

Metropolitan groups believe helicopters would pay on short runs, such as from city centre to airport, or on local suburban runs.

Helicopters now in development in various countries vary greatly as to speed and passenger capacity. The book points to a multi-engined craft capable of carrying approximately 18 passengers "a short distance" or 14 or 15 persons about 200 miles, now is being developed in England.

In the United States, the Gyrodyne Company of America is working on a model that will carry more than 50 passengers at speeds from 75 to 80 miles an hour.

Roosevelt Says Documents Missing In File

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—James Roosevelt, who says documents were missing from his files after his estranged wife broke into his office last August, was to resume the stand today at a hearing on her petition for support.

The hearing is to determine whether the eldest son of the late president Franklin D. Roosevelt is able to pay $3,500 a month demanded by Mrs. Romelle Roosevelt. She seeks the sum for herself and their three children pending trial of their separate-maintenance suits.

Mrs. Roosevelt contends her husband is worth $2,000,000; he claims he is $78,000 in debt.

One of her lawyers, Arthur E. Schifferman, Monday introduced a torn document referring to a $2,500 trust payable on demand to one Irene Owens.

Schifferman told reporters that this was the Gladys Irene Owens whom Mrs. Roosevelt named with two other women as co-respondents. Mrs. Roosevelt, 38, accuses her husband of infidelities with 12 women. The lawyer said Mrs. Owens formerly was employed by one of Roosevelt's insurance firms.

QUESTIONED ABOUT RING

Schifferman also questioned Roosevelt, who was on the stand the entire day, about a $5,000 diamond ring purchased last November. Roosevelt, 46, claimed he bought it for his wife, but one of her lawyers said it was not her size and she never received it.

The torn paper, pasted together under transparent sheets, was in longhand and signed by John K. Sloan, Los Angeles lawyer. The document said the lawyer was holding in trust $2,500 payable to Irene Owens.

Roosevelt testified he put the money in trust "to try and safeguard some of my possessions which I believe were being tampered with." He said the money was for his own use and that Sloan has repaid the entire amount.

Asked by his lawyer, Samuel B. Picone, why he had placed the money in trust, Roosevelt replied he had lost confidence that his wife would not withdraw the entire amount from a joint account they previously had.

Says 2 Canadians Refused Senate Seats

OTTAWA (CP)—A former member of Parliament, now retired, says two prominent Canadians once refused seats in the Senate on the same day.

Col. Hugh Clark, 87, member of Parliament from 1911 to 1921, says in a letter to the Ottawa Journal that the late John Ross Robertson, former proprietor of the Toronto Telegram, and Huntley Drummond of Montreal refused Senate seats in 1917. He wrote the letter commenting on a statement in The Journal that there is a tradition on Parliament Hill that no one has ever refused a Senate seat.

CNR Has Laid Off 1,492 Since Oct.

OTTAWA (CP)—The CNR has laid off 1,492 employees at main shops since last October, the government reported Monday.

A reply tabled in the Commons for J. Waldo Monteith (PC—Perth) said 708 were laid off during October-November and another 784 in January.

Of the total, 187 worked at the CNR's shops at Stratford.

The reply said the government-owned line is trying to rehire workers "displaced" by the switch from steam locomotives to diesel engines.

The Stratford shops were "excellent" for maintenance of steam locomotives. However, "their use for other railway purposes is limited, but is under study."
